Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the representations he has received since 29 November 1990 relating to the payment of compensation to victims of the British nuclear tests at Christmas Island; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations and have nothing to add to the statements that I have previously made.

Fishing Policies

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister if he will take steps better to co-ordinate the policies and spending programmes of the various Departments of state concerned with the fishing industry in England and Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has lead responsibility for United Kingdom fisheries policy in consultation with other Fisheries Ministers.

General Pinochet

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Prime Minister what procedures Her Majesty's Government have in place in respect of protocol, security, or other considerations, for the reception or treatment of senior Ministers or heads of armed forces of another country arriving in this country on a private visit; how these procedures were applied in the case of General Pinochet's visit of 18 and 19 May; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: We have no set procedures for private visits to the United Kingdom, although protocol, security and other aspects are considered where necessary. In the case of General Pinochet, apart from arrival and departure, arrangements for his visit were the responsibility of his hosts.

Gas and Oil Policies

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister if he will take steps better to co-ordinate the policies and spending programmes of the various Departments of state concerned with the gas and oil industry in England and Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Department of Energy, which is the lead department for United Kingdom oil and gas, consults on and co-ordinates its policies with other Government Departments as appropriate.

British Service Men (Correspondence)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Prime Minister when the hon. Member for St. Helens, North can expect to receive a reply to his letters of 1 February, 13 March, and 3 April, on the subject of the death of British service men in the Gulf other than by enemy fire.

The Prime Minister: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman's letter of 1 February as soon as possible. I have no record of having received the hon. Gentleman's letters of 13 March and 3 April.

Journalists (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how many accounts have not yet been settled by newspapers which sent journalists on official transport provided for Prime Ministerial visits abroad.

The Prime Minister: As of 3 June 1991, 14 accounts had not been settled.

National Union of Mineworkers' Funds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what information Her Majesty's Government have made available about NUM funds to Mr. Brian Larkins, sequestrator of Price Waterhouse.

The Prime Minister: The sequestrators were appointed by the court to carry out the order of the court for the sequestration of the funds of the National Union of Mineworkers. The sequestrators requested and obtained from the Government, as well as others, information relevant to the discharge of their duties to the court.

Downing Street

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what changes he has made in the staffing and working arrangements in Downing street since he became Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave the hon. Member on 28 March 1991 at column 500.

Business Aviation Policy

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will arrange for the Secretary of State for Defence to consult the Secretary of State for Transport about the implications for the Government's business aviation policy of the Secretary of State for Defence's decision to make the Royal Aeronautical Establishment airfields at Bedford and Farnborough available for disposal.

The Prime Minister: I understand that consultations have taken place between the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Transport on this matter.

Banking Transactions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what representations, either formal or informal, have been made by the Irish Government over the alleged surveillance by British electronic listening posts of private Dublin banking transactions.

The Prime Minister: The Government are not aware of any such representations.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will outline the rules which restrict the use of surveillance on private banking transactions in Britain and in the rest of Europe.

The Prime Minister: The interception of communications during the course of their transmission by post or by means of a public telecommunication system is subject to the provisions of the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in the Cabinet Office in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

The Prime Minister: Six energy audits have been carried out in the Cabinet Office in the last five years. The main conclusions for each audit are as follows:

10-12 Downing street
- Installation of:
  - water dams of WC cisterns; high efficiency low energy lamps; low energy garden lighting; and krypton tubes.
- Reduction of electricity supply capacity.

24 Whitehall
- Draught sealing of windows.
- Installation of heat meter.
- Improvement in light switching practice.
- Investigation of ventilation and heating control.

36 Whitehall
- Adjust heating controller.
- Installation of heat meter.
- Reduction of domestic hot water wastage.
- Investigation of ventilation system.

53 Parliament street
- Change to a metered water supply.
- Reduction of electricity supply capacity.
- Adjust settings of thermostatic radiator valves.
- Installation of compact fluorescent tubes.

Murray house
- Change electricity tariff to quarterly billed non-domestic.
- More efficient use of supplementary heaters.
- Replacement of hot water heater.
- Installation of krypton tubes.

Hepburn house
- Change to a metered water supply.
- Improvement in energy management within boiler room.
- Improvements to domestic hot water system.
- Installation of thermostatic radiator valves.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the Cabinet Office, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

The Prime Minister: The figures requested are available only in cash and 1990-91 money terms and only for the following years:

	Electricity	Gas	Liquid fuel	Total of accommodation[1] in sq. ft.
1987-88	268,523 2	74,797 2	56,511 2	616,899
1988-89	294,485 2	53,904 2	39,906 2	586,843
1989-90	295,126 2	56,575 2	42,000 2	545,861
1990-91	300,542	58,033	48,988	547,481

[2] 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in the Cabinet Office and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

The Prime Minister: The Cabinet Office has one part-time energy manager.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of the Cabinet Office in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

The Prime Minister: The only information available relates to 1990-91 when approximately £78,000 was spent on measures aimed at improving energy efficiency in the Cabinet Office. This excludes expenditure on planned maintenance and the use of energy-efficient lighting in refurbishment programmes which is not separately identifiable from other costs.

Council of Europe

Mr. Burns: To ask the Prime Minister whether he has made any changes to the composition of the United Kingdom delegation to the 43rd session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe.

The Prime Minister: At the request of the Leader of the Opposition the representatives and substitutes for the Labour party on the delegation to the 43rd session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe will now be:

The hon. Members for:	Representatives
Wentworth	Mr. Hardy
Wallsend	Mr. Garrett
Tooting	Mr. Cox
Liverpool Riverside	Mr. Parry
Wansbeck	Mr. Thompson
Lord Kirkhill

The hon. Members for:	Substitutes
Warley, East	Mr. Faulds
Newham, North West	Mr. Banks
Cunningham, South	Mr. Lambie

The hon. Members for:	Representatives
Falkirk, East	Mr. Ewing
Manchester, Central	Mr. Litherland
Don Valley	Mr. Redmond
Newport, East	Mr. Hughes

In addition, I have appointed my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames) from the Government Benches as a substitute delegate in succession to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Central (Mr. Lord), taking effect from 28 June 1991.

Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the invitations to official functions at No. 10 Downing street to which Mr. Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi has been invited since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 May 1991]: Mr. Bedi attended a general reception at No. 10 Downing street on 1 December 1986.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Speeches

45. Mr. Hind: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on the criteria for placing in the Library speeches made by Members of Parliament.

Mr. MacGregor: The texts of non-parliamentary ministerial speeches and of speeches by Opposition Front-Bench spokesmen are received and filed by the Library as a matter of course, where these are issued by Government Departments or by party headquarters. Texts of speeches by the Leader of the Opposition are normally received from his office in the House.

Non-parliamentary speeches by other Members are sometimes obtained on request for a Member, or in anticipation of demand by Members.

The Gulf

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many hours in (a) Government time, (b) official Opposition time, (c) Scottish National party time, (d) private Members' time and (e) statement time have been devoted to matters relating to the Gulf since 15 January.

Mr. MacGregor: The information requested is as follows:

(a) 6¼ hours;
(b) 6¼ hours;
(c) 3 hours;
(d) 3¼ hours;

and 11¼ hours on private notice questions and statements.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Carcases

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make representations to other EC countries seeking the prosecution of those exporting beef carcases which contain illegal drugs and the withdrawal from those convicted of all rights to export beef.

Mr. Maclean: We will continue to give our full support to any steps taken by the authorities concerned to deal with the illegal use of veterinary medicines in those EC member states where it is found to occur.

Consultation

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a list of those organisations which his Department consults on Government or European Community legislation or directives relating to the horticultural industry.

Mr. Curry: The Department consults a wide range of organisations on a wide range of matters affecting horticulture. In order to save costs and to reduce the burden on these organisations, we consider the need for consultation in each case and consult only those organisations with an interest in the relevant proposal.

Sports Turf Management

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department contributes towards research into sports turf management; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Department does not contribute financially towards research into sports turf management. However, ADAS is actively seeking opportunities for commercial research and development with a number of organisations that are involved in this area of work.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the meeting of the Agriculture Council on 21 and 22 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that I made to the House earlier today.

Dogs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish details of all dogs imported into the United Kingdom, by breed or description, age and sex for each of the last five years.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not held in the form requested.

Farming Statistics

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers, partners, directors and farmworkers were employed on a county-by-county basis in England in June 1990.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is given in the table. Data are taken from the June 1990 agricultural census and hence exclude estimates for minor holdings not in the annual census.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his earlier question on 25 June 1990 at col. 29. In the 1990-91 financial year £231,038 was spent on specific energy saving measures by this Department. This sum does not reflect the cost of other works which have led to energy saving alongside other benefits but in which this element cannot be specifically identified. Nor does it include expenditure undertaken by the Property Services Agency. Figures for years prior to 1989-90 are not available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to his earlier question on 5 June 1990 at col. 503. The information requested is not yet available for the 1990-91 financial year. The area of accommodation occupied by this Department at the end of 1990 was 595,665 sq m, that is, about 6·4 million sq ft.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his earlier question on 5 June 1990 at column 503. Since then, five further energy, audits have been carried out. In London the consultants report recommended changes to tariffs, improvements to heating controls and changes to time switches, metering arrangements and electrical capacities. At Slough recommendations centred on improvements to lighting, radiators and windows. In the Ministry's South Eastern region an audit proposed draught proofing and the insulation of plant and water heaters. In Midlands and Western region two audits were carried out which recommended tariff and time clock changes, modifications to and installation of thermostats, time switches and control systems, boiler adjustments and fitting energy efficient lighting.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Curry: The position in the Department has not changed since the answer given to the hon. Member on 5 June 1990 at column 503.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hostages

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest information he has concerning the whereabouts of John McCarthy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We receive a number of reports on the whereabouts of John McCarthy, Terry Waite, and Jack Mann but we have no definite information as to their exact whereabouts at any particular time. We wish these and all other hostages to be released as soon as possible.

Ascension Island

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 459, if he will enlarge his review of the problem of feral cats on Ascension Island to include that of rats.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Non-Governmental Organisations' Forum for Nature Conservation in the United Kingdom dependent territories is planning to assess the impact of feral cats and rats on Ascension Island's bird life. We look forward to studying its conclusions.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the rates of pay for make-work on St. Helena and the relevant rate of inflation for the last 10 years.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The weekly wage for workers engaged on the three-day work scheme is £22·86. The tables below record the percentage change in wages paid under the three-day work scheme since annual reviews were introduced on 1 April 1988. The retail prices index is given since 1981.

EC Council of Ministers

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement on forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 3 June and Ministers are likely to discuss VAT and excise rates, in particular VAT special schemes for mail order and exempt bodies. Discussion on technical systems is not expected.

The Telecommunications Council will meet on 3 June and Ministers will consider a proposal for a decision to establish the second phase of the TEDIS programme, (trade, electronics data interchange system). The programme proposed includes actions on standardisation, legal aspects and security of EDI measures. It is expected that a statement will be made outlining the progress of discussions with interested parties on a memorandum of agreement for the promotion of the MAC technology standards for satellite broadcast. Ministers will also re-examine proposals for a Council directive on frequencies for the introduction of cordless digital telecommunications (DECT). There will also be a proposal for a Council recommendation on the co-ordinated introduction of cordless digital telecommunications. A common position has been reached on these measures, which are for adoption at this meeting. Ministers will consider Commission reports, on the results of the public consultation on the Green Paper on satellite communications, progress on a Green Paper on postal services which has been in preparation since September 1989 and a draft proposal for discussion on the proposed directive on the adoption of standardised international area codes.

The Health Council will meet on 4 June and Ministers will discuss the Commission's proposals for amending the existing directive on the labelling of cigarette packets to include other tobacco products, (this amendment also includes a ban on the marketing of oral snuff), a proposal for a programme of action against AIDS, a declaration on the use of drugs in sport, actions for the reduction of drug abuse and a report on the Europe against cancer programme. Statements are expected to be made by the Commission on progress on the establishment of a public health committee, the European year of nutrition and co-operation between the EC and World Health Organisation.

The Culture Council will meet on 7 June and Ministers will consider a draft resolution on the development of theatre in Europe, training of arts administrators, temporary entry into the United States for European artists, and draft conclusions on copyright and neighbouring rights. Ministers will also consider a progress report on the implementation of the resolutions of 18 May 1989 concerning the promotions of books and reading, and the nomination of Navplion as European city of culture for 1997. Ministers will discuss the protection of national art treasures under the single market post-1992 and a Commission report on priority projects in the cultural field.

The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 10 June and Ministers will discuss G24 assistance to eastern Europe and European investment bank lending outside the Community with a view to examining the possibility of extending EIB operations to other countries and regions.

Ministers will also consider the proposal on passenger baggage and possibly will continue discussing the abolition of fiscal frontiers. A directive on money laundering may be formally adopted. The EIB governors (12 Finance Ministers) will be having their annual meeting in the morning on 10 June. In the afternoon, the Ministerial meeting of the inter-governmental Conference on economic and monetary union will hold a discussion on a draft report by the Presidency for the European Council. On 11 June, the ministerial inter-governmentalconference will hold an inter-institutional meeting with the European Parliament.

The Environment Council will meet on 13 and 14 June and Ministers will consider proposals for regulations on the importation of certain furs and the northern seas action programme (NORSPA) and the proposed directive on nitrate. Ministers will discuss proposals for a directive on habitats and its associated regulation on action relating to the environment (ACNAT), regulations concerning environmental labelling, and an environment fund (LIFE).

The Foreign Affairs Council will meet on 17 and 18 June. Ministers will prepare for the European Council on 28 and 29 June and review progress in the EC/EFTA negotiations on a European economic area in preparation for a joint meeting of EC/EFTA Ministers in the margins of the FAC. Ministers may consider the development of relations between the Community and dependent territories of member states and are likely to discuss political developments in Albania and EC/Albania relations. Ministers may also discuss the question of non-European participation in the European energy charter and the future integration of the Canaries, Madeira and Azores into the EC. There will also be a ministerial session of the inter-government conference on political union on 17 and 18 June.

The Internal Market Council will meet on 18 and 19 June and Ministers will discuss a number of important issues including insurance company accounts, the baggage regulation, public procurement, the Intrastat regulations and the draft Council regulation on trans-European networks.

The Transport Council will meet on 20 and 21 June and Ministers will discuss, and possibly adopt, proposals on the mutual recognition of cockpit crew licences, technical harmonisation of aviation requirements, harmonised driving licences, roadworthiness tests for cars, and the extension of inland waterway cabotage. Agreement may also be reached on proposals for the development of Community railways, public service contracts and the Loran C radionavigation system. Ministers are likely to spend some considerable time on the problem of third country transit, and may also discuss bus and coach liberalisation and road safety (including seat belt wearing).

The Labour and Social Affairs Council will meet on 25 and 26 June and Ministers are likely to discuss the proposed directives on medical assistance on board ships, health and safety on construction sites, proof of employment contract, protection of pregnant workers, protection of workers from the risks related to exposure to asbestos, atypical work (article 118A), and, possibly, working time. Ministers will also consider a report on the free movement of workers between Spain and Portugal and other member states. The decisions on the PETRA youth training programme and on the European year of health and safety are also likely to be discussed. The second day of the Council is expected to focus particularly on youth issues: items which may be included are the youth for Europe programme and a resolution on priority measures for young people.

The Agriculture Council will meet on 25 and 26 June and Ministers will discuss health conditions for the production and placing on the market of fishery products, and live bivalve molluscs, veterinary checks on animals entering the Community from third countries, health rules for the production and placing on the market of fresh meat, certification aspects of food quality and geographical indications, and EC-accepted plant protection products. Ministers may also continue discussions on the 1991 agriculture price-fixing proposals and organic production of agricultural products.

The European Council will meet in Luxembourg on 28 and 29 June. Heads of Government will discuss progress in the inter-governmental conferences on political and economic and monetary union. There is likely to be discussion on the single market, GATT, and a range of international and EC external issues.

Iraq

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he intends to take any action in relation to the Kurdish people in Iraq under article 4 of the International Red Cross conventions of 1949; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he has made representations to the Secretary-General of the United Nations as to the application of article 4 of the International Red Cross conventions of 1949 to the Kurdish people in Iraq; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he has made representations to the International Red Cross in relation to its responsibilities to the Kurdish people in Iraq under article 4 of the International Red Cross conventions of 1949; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. Article 4 of each of the four Geneva conventions merely defines the categories of persons covered by the conventions.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the provision of United Kingdom arms and ammunition to Kurdish fighters inside Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are not supplying any arms and ammunition to the Kurds. Any reports that we are doing so are wrong.

Fish Stocks (South Georgia)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the decline in fish stocks off South Georgia; what assessment he has made of the need for remedial measures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: A research cruise was conducted in January this year by British Antarctic Survey and Imperial college, London, on behalf of the Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands. The results of this research are still being analysed, but both this and reports of commercial fishing in the region suggest that stocks of krill and mackerel icefish are substantially lower than last year. Conservation outside the 12- mile territorial limit is the responsibility of the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, which will discuss the subject thoroughly and recommend conservation measures at its next meeting in Hobart in October this year. The United Kingdom takes its conservation responsibilities seriously and will take any measures necessary to conserve fish stocks in the region.

Guyana

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Guyana concerning the conduct of elections; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave him on 29 October 1990 at c. 391.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for which the contract was carried out.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: the total spent by the diplomatic and aid wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on both management and computer consultancy contracts in the 1990-91 financial year was £3,068,317.

Individual contracts awarded during the year were:

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he received concerning the visit to the United Kingdom of General Augusto Pinochet; and what representatives of Her Majesty's Government met him during his visit.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have received a number of representations, mainly letters from Members of Parliament and from the general public. General Pinochet was not met by representatives of Her Majesty's Government.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions have been taken by Her Majesty's Government's representatives at the UN in supporting a referendum in the western Sahara; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Together with the other permanent members of the Security Council, we approved the secretary-general's plan on 22 April, subsequently endorsed by the Security Council on 29 April. We shall continue to do everything possible to assist the secretary-general. His plan is the best way to bring this dispute to an end.

Soviet Exiles (Visas)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Soviet Government about the number of Soviet exiles and their families who are being denied visas to return to the Soviet Union either as visitors or as representatives of non-governmental organisations to attend conferences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. We are not aware of any Soviet exiles living in Britain who have been denied visas to visit the Soviet Union. If my hon. Friend has any specific cases in mind, we should be happy to look into them.

Baltic States

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will recommend at the forthcoming Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe Foreign Ministers meeting in Berlin that the declaration of independence by the Baltic states be referred to the disputes settlement mechanism agreed to at Valletta; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. The dispute settlement mechanism, whose provisions were agreed by experts from CSCE states at Valletta in February, can as currently constituted only address disputes between CSCE participating states. All participants in the Valletta meeting, however, agreed 10 principles describing how parties should behave in settling their disputes: it is open for the Soviet authorities and the Baltic republics to agree to apply these principles. We welcome the fact that discussions are now taking place between the Baltic and Soviet leaderships.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply on the non-proliferation treaty to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill), Official Report, 17 May, column 304, whether the review of the NPT regime is carried out in collaboration with other Governments; and what resources are committed by Her Majesty's Government to conduct the review.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We attach the highest priority to the success of the NPT regime and remain in close touch with our allies and partners on all questions relating to it. We devote considerable resources to the regime. The relevant section of non-proliferation and defence department in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office takes the lead, working in close co-operation with, among others, departments in the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Energy.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

14. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the level of intended investment by British Rail for extra regional passenger and freight traffic consequent upon opening the channel tunnel.

Mr. McLoughlin: British Rail is planning to invest more than £300 million for international freight services. It expects regions outside London and the south east to account for about 70 per cent. of its freight business through the tunnel. It has yet to submit investment proposals for regional passenger services.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to meet Ove Arup to discuss the channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend has agreed to a request from my hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden) for a meeting with Ove Arup to discuss its rail link proposal.

17. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the route of the channel tunnel high speed rail link.

Mr. Freeman: I refer to the answer that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave earlier to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms. Ruddock).

24. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next intends to hold meetings with representatives of the channel tunnel consortium to discuss relevant matters of transport co-ordination.

Mr. Freeman: I meet representatives of Eurotunnel from time to time to discuss issues of common concern.

25. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met representatives of the local authorities in London regarding the high speed rail link; and whether he has any plans for an early meeting with them.

Mr. Freeman: On 4 February, representatives of the London borough of Newham gave me a presentation of their proposed route for the rail link into Stratford. I have no plans at present for further meetings with Newham or other London local authorities.

InterCity Services

15. Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there has been an increase or a reduction in the services provided by InterCity as against the performance objectives set in the past two years; and if he will make a statement on the future investment proposals of British Rail in this respect.

Mr. Freeman: Improving services remains one of InterCity's key objectives. InterCity fell short of its punctuality and reliability targets in the last two years. The electrification of the east coast main line, which will be completed next month, will bring a significant improvement. It will in turn allow InterCity to redeploy trains and resources to other routes. I am sure that improved quality of service will continue to be a part of InterCity's investment proposals wherever it is commercially justified.

Danbury (By-pass)

16. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will visit Danbury to assess the need for a bypass.

Mr. Chope: I am afraid that this is not my responsibility as the A414 is a local road. Essex county council, the local highway authority, must decide whether a bypass is needed.

Crystal Palace (Underground)

18. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to authorise expenditure on an extension of underground railways to Crystal Palace.

Mr. Freeman: My predecessor asked London Transport to consider, among other proposals arising from the London assessment studies, the case for a southern extension of the Northern line to Streatham and, possibly, on to Crystal Palace. That consideration is not yet complete. The question of authorising expenditure does not therefore arise.

Isle of Wight

19. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received for the Isle of Wight to receive primary route status.

Mr. Chope: Following the review of the primary route network in 1985 the Isle of Wight made a separate application later that year, and subsequently a further application in 1988, for some towns on the island to become primary route destinations. After careful consideration, both applications were rejected.

Road Safety

20. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further proposals he has to improve road safety; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I have today launched a national publicity campaign on compulsory seat belt wearing by rear seat adult passengers which comes into force on 1 July.

Our proposals for reformulating the main bad driving offences and for providing tougher penalties for those who drink and drive are currently before Parliament in the Road Traffic Bill.

In addition, regulations will be introduced shortly requiring speed limiters to be fitted to all new heavy goods vehicles from August 1992, and we propose to extend this requirement to most articulated vehicles now on the road.

Rail Transport

21. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to boost rail transport.

Mr. Freeman: Investment in British Rail is currently at its highest level in real terms for some 30 years, and London Underground is also investing at record levels. Major projects under way include BR's investment for channel tunnel passenger and freight services, further new rolling stock for Network SouthEast and the electrification of the east coast main line, due to be completed this summer. London Transport's major investment includes extensions of the Docklands light railway, the Jubilee line extension and east-west crossrail.

Civil Aviation

22. Sir Robert McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the present position of discussions with the United States of America on civil aviation matters.

Mr. McLoughlin: Preliminary discussions have taken place about the possibilities for further liberalisation of transatlantic air services and talks will resume later in the year. Our aim will be to remove obstacles to fair competition, which hinder our airlines at present, and to remove unnecessary regulation.

Greater Manchester (Grants)

23. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what grants he has made to improve the quality of public transport in Greater Manchester in the past three years and approved for the next three years.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government are giving total grant of £53 million to the Manchester Metrolink project over the years 1988-89 to 1992-93. Credit approvals have also been made available for this and various other projects, including the airport rail link.

Fishing Vessels (Safety)

26. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow by the Minister of Shipping on Monday 22 April, Official Report, column 755, he is now in a position to introduce legislative measures concerning the provision of immersion suits for the crew members of United Kingdom registered fishing vessels over 10 m in overall length; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The practicability of immersion suits for fishermen has to be established before legislative measures for this provision can be introduced. Funds have been allocated for a research programme to investigate the use of immersion suits, other buoyancy aids and recovery devices.

Canning Town (Railway)

27. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account he will take of his visit to Canning Town in consideration of requests for investment in interchange facilities between the three electrified lines which will serve that area.

Mr. Freeman: I found my visit to Canning Town on 2 January very helpful in understanding the debate over the design of the new station there. Having heard what was said by the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) and others on that and later occasions, I remain content that the design proposed by the Underground is both reasonable and adequate.

The Gulf (Pollution)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, 15 April, column 1, what progress he is making with contracts for Alba International Ltd. of Aberdeen for clean-up operations; and what discussions he has had with Bechtel.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government are not involved in the Gulf clean-up contracts to which the hon. Member refers—they are between the International Maritime Organisation and the company.

A1 Experimental Red Route

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the Transport and Road Research Laboratory report on the A1 experimental red route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The findings from the preliminary monitoring done by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory on the operation of the red route were published on 28 May. A copy of the press notice was sent to all Members with a constituency interest and copies has been placed in the Library. In summary, the findings were as follows.

Journey times have reduced, up to 30 per cent. between the peaks, and are now 40 per cent. more reliable. Bus journeys are significantly more reliable. The number of vehicles using the route have gone up slightly. Callers had increased at some 60 per cent. of businesses monitored, although at 20 per cent. the number of callers had gone down by more than 10 per cent.

Further monitoring will take place throughout 1991.

Road Hazards (Warning System)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to introduce a system of road hazard awareness similar to that in Germany in respect of use by drivers of hazard warning lights and lane discipline.

Mr. Chope: The Road Vehicles Lighting Regulations 1989 have extended the use of hazard warning lights by allowing drivers on motorways and 70 mph dual carriageways to warn following drivers that they are slowing down because of a temporary obstruction ahead. The law in Germany is similar to that in this country.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether, when the line of the widening of the M20 between junctions 3 and 5 is published, those of the dwellings that have been acquired by his Department in connection with this widening scheme will be resold to individual home-owners as quickly as possible where they are situated outside the line of the scheme;

(2) when the dwellings that have been acquired by his Department in connection with the widening of the M20 between junctions 3 and 5 will be resold to individual home owners.

Mr. Chope: Dwellings that are clearly surplus to requirements will be released for sale as soon as the preferred scheme has been announced. Where there is some doubt, the properties will be retained until all the necessary statutory procedures have been completed. In both cases, the dwellings will be released subject to the expiry of any tenancies then in force.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what form of tenure, conferring what degree of security of tenure, the dwellings in his Department's ownership between junctions 3 and 5 of the M20 are currently being occupied.

Mr. Chope: Dwellings are currently let on two-year fixed-term tenancies with vacant possession on expiration of the term, unless extended by agreement.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the line of the M20 widening scheme between junctions 3 and 5, and when he expects construction of this widening to start and to be completed.

Mr. Chope: I hope to make an announcement about the form of widening for the M20 motorway between junctions 3 and 5 in the summer. The programme thereafter will depend to a large extent on the public's reaction to the proposals and the need for statutory procedures, including any public inquiry. Recent experience of other widening schemes suggests that construction could start by 1995 with completion two years later.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many dwellings between junctions 3 and 5 of the M20 have now been acquired by his Department; and how many more he expects will be acquired in connection with the widening scheme between junctions 3 and 5.

Mr. Chope: Between junctions 3 and 5 of the M20, 193 dwellings have been acquired by the Department. A further 89 are in the process of acquisition. I cannot forecast how many more properties may be acquired.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the dwellings that have been acquired by his Department between junctions 3 and 5 of the M20 are being managed by (a) the North British housing association, (b) the Tonbridge and Malling housing association and (c) others.

Mr. Chope: All the dwellings acquired between junctions 3 and 5 of the M20 are being managed by the North British housing association.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. McLoughlin: Investment by the Department of Transport in energy efficiency over the past two years is estimated to have been:

	Cash terms £ 000s	1990-91 money terms £ 000s
1989-90	250	270
1990-91	270	270

Before 1989-90 the Property Services Agency was responsible for most investment in energy efficiency measures and separate figures for the Department of Transport are not available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of energy audits carried out in the Department of Transport were:

	Number
1986-87	1
1987-88	7
1988-89	4

In each case a variety of measures to produce energy savings were recommended and have been or are being implemented.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the last year.

Mr. McLoughlin: In 1990-91 the Department devoted approximately three person-years to energy management. This included the time of a dedicated energy manager.

M11 Link Road

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the European Commission about the application of the European Community directive on environmental impact assessments to the proposed M11 link road and the east London river crossing; with what result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The European Commission wrote to the Government some time ago after receiving complaints alleging that environmental assessments under Community law should have been produced for both schemes. The Department answered these allegations in written responses to the Commission. The last correspondence with the Commission was in August 1990 and the Department has received no indication from it that it is about to reopen the matter.

Railway Passenger Coaches

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to encourage the introduction of privately owned passenger coaches to supplement those of British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: We have set the British Railways Board the objective of increasing the involvement of the private sector, and there are already a number of privately owned coaches operating on British Rail track. Our ultimate goal is, of course, the privatisation of British Rail.

Glasgow Airport

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has concerning noise abatement measures in areas in the direct flight path of Glasgow airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: BAA is responsible for noise abatement measures at Glasgow airport. A number of such measures are in force including night restrictions and noise preferential departure routes. A noise monitoring system has been installed. These measures are similar to those at other major UK airports.

Hazardous Chemicals (Shipment)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out all regulations in place to cover the shipment of toxic and hazardous chemicals, including wastes in the English, Irish and Bristol channels.

Mr. McLoughlin [pursuant to his answer, 14 May 1991, col. 113]: The regulations covering the shipment of toxic and hazardous chemicals by sea are as follows:

The Merchant Shipping (Tankers) (EEC Requirements) Regulations 1981
The Merchant Shipping (Tankers) (EEC Requirements) (Amendment) Regulations 1982
The Merchant Shipping (Gas Carriers) Regulations 1986
The Merchant Shipping (IBC Code) Regulations 1987
The Merchant Shipping (BCH Code) Regulations 1987
The Merchant Shipping (IBC Code) (Amendment) Regulations 1990
The Merchant Shipping (BCH Code) (Amendment) Regulations 1990
MP and MS (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1990
The Merchant Shipping (Control of Pollution by Noxious Liquid Substances in Bulk) Regulations 1987
The Merchant Shipping (Reporting of Pollution Incidents) Regulations 1987

HEALTH

Strokes and Heart Attacks

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will show separately for men and women the numbers of (a) heart attack cases and (b) stroke cases treated by the national health service in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will estimate the cost to the national health service of treating these patients.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on the numbers of cases treated in NHS hospitals with a main diagnosis of heart attack or stroke are given in the tables.

Financial returns of health authorities do not identify costs of specific treatments and operative procedures.

Estimated number of men and women where principal diagnosis is ICD410 Acute Myocardial infarction, NHS Hospitals England 1983-85, 1988-89 and 1989-90

Year	Males	Females
1983	66,084	36,029
1984	67,339	38,249
1985	70,613	39,811
1988-89	72,730	42,545
1989-90	71,019	42,303

Note: Data from 1988-89 is provisional, based on incomplete data and may be subject to future revision.

Estimated number of men and women where principal diagnosis is ICD436 Acute but ill defined cerebrovascular disease, NHS Hospitals England 1983-85, 1988-89 and 1989-90

Year	Males	Females
1983	30,168	35,885
1984	30,879	36,748
1985	33,021	40,791

Cardiac Resuscitation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has issued to district general hospitals and independent hospital trusts about the need for training in cardiac resuscitation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for local clinical management.

Census

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are applied to the appointment of temporary staff for the census.

Mr. Dorrell: Temporary staff employed on 1991 census work fall into two main categories: staff employed locally throughout Great Britain on the data collection operation, and staff employed in two central processing centres.

The temporary data collection staff are employed in a part-time capacity for periods ranging from a few weeks to 11 months. There are four different levels, census area managers, census officers, assistant census officers, and enumerators. The following main criteria were applied in selecting temporary data collection staff:

Census area manager
- Proven record of managing a large work force.

Census officer
- Ability to manage a team of about 50 people.

Assistant census officer
- Ability to supervise a team of up to 17 people.

Enumerator
- Ability to apply detailed instructions and communicate with the public.
- Numeracy
- Ability to write legibly
- Previous relevant experience
- Evidence of suitable personal and interpersonal qualities

Candidates for all temporary census jobs were selected on individual merit against the criteria. Where candidates were of equal merit, preference was, where possible, given to those currently unemployed and, for the processing centre jobs, to those who had participated in a relevant Government training scheme.

The temporary staff in the processing centres are employed in a full-time capacity for periods ranging from eight to 18 months. Most of the posts are for clerical or data processing staff. The following main criteria were applied in selection of temporary staff at the processing centres:

- Ability to assimilate detailed written instructions quickly
- Ability to work quickly and accurately

Candidates for all jobs had to be at least 16 years old and those for the processing centres less than 60 years old.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing (a) the total projected cost of the current census, (b) staff costs and (c) property costs.

Mr. Dorrell: The 1991 census of Great Britain is estimated to cost the following over the year period 1986-87 to 1995-96.

£ million

Costs	Amount
Staff costs	102·0
Property costs	10·2
Other costs[1]	23·8
Total	136·0

[1]Includes such items as computing equipment, printing, and publicity.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of his staff have been temporarily transferred or seconded to posts relating to the census; and what arrangements have been made to cover their work.

Mr. Dorrell: The 1991 census in England and Wales is an integral part of the work of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, one of the departments for which my right hon. Friend is responsible. The question of transferring or seconding the office's own staff does not therefore arise. To supplement its permanent staff at the time of the census, the office engages temporary staff by direct recruitment and some staff on temporary secondment from other departments. No staff from the Department of Health are currently seconded for this purpose.

Dentists

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the percentage increase of fees allowed to dentists in the NHS for laboratory services in 1989 and 1990; and if he has any plans to increase these in 1991 to take into account the raised rate of VAT in force.

Mr. Dorrell: Fees for NHS dental treatment provided under the general dental service are set by the independent dental rates study group (DRSG). Where laboratory work is involved, DRSG uses a sample of current trade catalogues to calculate the average laboratory component of each item of treatment priced. The overall increase in the laboratory costs used by the DRSG in 1989 and 1990 was 1·04 per cent. and 5·36 per cent. respectively. We expect to receive the report of the 1991 DRSG shortly, and I understand that the group's recommendations have taken account of the effect of the change in the rate of VAT.

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that NHS dentists do not cut costs by using inferior laboratory services; and if he will ensure that all NHS dentists purchase their laboratory work only from laboratories registered with the CADLAS certification scheme.

Mr. Dorrell: General dental practitioners (GDPs) are required by their terms of service to use only materials which are suitable for the purpose for which they are used. GDPs are, however, independent contractors with family health services authorities and are free to buy products from the dental laboratories of their own choosing. It follows that, while the Government welcome CADLAS, it is not prepared to countenance the restrictive rule suggested by my hon. Friend.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by the Northumberland Ambulance Trust to persuade leading ambulance men to opt out of the Whitley Council pay and conditions; how many ambulance men have stayed within the Whitley Council agreement; and what disciplinary action has been taken against them.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Staff transferring to trust employment retain their existing terms and conditions of service. Changes in terms and conditions of service are a matter for the trust and staff together and can be negotiated at any time after transfer.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the current full salary and total expenses allowances and other emoluments and payments in kind to the chief ambulance officer in the Northumberland Ambulance Trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. That is a matter for the board of directors of the trust.

Mental Health Costs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest available figures of cost per patient per week of in-patients at each (a) mental handicap and (b) mental illness hospital in the Trent region.

Mr. Dorrell: As a result of the implementation of the recommendations of the steering group on national health services information (the Körner committee) the costing information submitted by authorities from 1977-88 is no longer compiled on the basis of type of hospital but focuses on district-based treatment costs by speciality/speciality groups within all hospitals.

Information relating to the Trent region for the financial year 1989-90 (the latest currently available) is shown in the table.

Average Speciality Costs per Patient Day—Patients Using a Bed—1989-90

District	Mental handicap £ (cash)	Other psychiatric specialities[1] £ (cash)
North Derbyshire	35·99	42·93
Southern Derbyshire	43·83	42·17
Leicestershire	35·83	43·28
North Lincolnshire	68·19	55·16
South Lincolnshire	56·36	41·48
Bassetlaw	30·58	30·84
Central Nottinghamshire	63·98	46·20
Nottingham	60·86	51·64
Barnsley	51·22	50·54
Doncaster	37·70	34·38
Rotherham	47·24	42·92
Sheffield	38·95	40·41

[1] Includes, where applicable, mental illness, child and adolescent phychiatry, forensic psychiatry, psychotherapy and old-age psychiatry.

Notes

1. The figures may include treatments provided both to in-patients and day cases (those who occupy a bed for at least a period of time but do not stay overnight) under the recommended Körner definition "patients using a bed".
2. The figures cover direct treatment costs only. Expenditure incurred on general services, overheads and capital is excluded.

Charges (Exemptions)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what would be the cost of extending exemption for all NHS charges to recipients of (a) housing benefit, (b) community charge benefit, (c) state pension, (d) invalidity benefit, (e) severe disablement allowance, (f) mobility allowance, (g) attendance allowance and (h) disability working allowance and to people in full-time education.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available. People within the categories listed may already be entitled to exemption from NHS charges under the present arrangements or may qualify for full or partial remission of their charges on grounds of low income.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current salary of the chief executive of each NHS trust; and what was the salary payable in each case to the equivalent post before the granting of trust status.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No information is held centrally on the salaries of national health service trust chief executives, which are a matter for individual trust boards.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make public the report prepared by Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte on trust applications.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 16 November 1990 at column 246.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown in percentage terms of the occupation of those appointed to the boards of directors of hospital trusts.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will tabulate by current occupation, or former if retired, those persons he has appointed as chairmen in the first wave of national health service trusts and as chairmen designate in the second wave.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Chairmen and non-executive directors of NHS trusts are appointed on the basis of their personal qualities and experience and for the contribution they can make to the effective management of the trust. Each chairman's and non-executive director's curriculum vitae is submitted in confidence.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those spheres for which he was responsible to Parliament prior to the recent reorganisation of the national health service and introduction of hospital trusts, and for which he no longer is responsible.

Mr. Waldegrave: I remain accountable to Parliament across the whole range of my responsibilities, including for all aspects of the national health service.

Productivity

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he measures productivity in the national health service; and whether he intends to introduce other forms of measurement.

Mr. Dorrell: There is no single measure: the Department looks at a number of indicators, including unit costs, throughput and hospital length of stay. However, a broad measure of the overall increase in efficiency of the hospital and community health services (HCHS) can be obtained by comparing increases in activity levels with increases in expenditure. The overall increase in activity is obtained by weighting together the increases in various areas of the service by their costs. This shows improvements in efficiency of 15 per cent. since 1978, or 1·4 per cent. per year on average.

Infant Mortality

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the infant mortality rate in the north east.

Mr. Dorrell: The infant mortality rate for the Northern regional health authority for the last five years is set out in the table, together with that for England and Wales.

Infant mortality rate for England and Wales and for the Northern Regional Health Authority[1]. Rate per thousand live births.

Year	Northern RHA	England and Wales
1986	9·8	9·6
1987	8·7	9·2
1988	8·4	9·0
1989	8·4	8·4
1990	[2]7·9	[2]7·9

[1]Coterminous with North standard region.
[2]These figures are provisional.

Friern Barnet Hospital

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will call for a report from North East Thames regional health authority on the facilities for patients in Friern Barnet hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No.

Temporary Posts

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing (a) the total number of temporary posts relating to the census, (b) the number of these posts filled by transfer or secondment from each Government Department, (c) the number of these posts filled by transfer or secondment from Government-funded agencies, (d) the number of posts filled by people who are registered as disabled and (e) the number of posts filled by temporary transfer of health board employees.

Mr. Dorrell: Excluding the temporary data collection staff, the total number of temporary posts created in OPCS to handle work in connection with the 1991 census for England and Wales is 2,292.

The numbers of posts expected to be filled by temporary transfers from Government Departments or executive agencies are:

	Number
National Savings Bank	31
The Scottish Office	20
Department of Social Security	20
Ministry of Defence	11
UK Passport Agency	6
Employment Service	4
Customs and Excise	2
Home Office	2
Charity Commission	1
Department of Education and Science	1
	99
Not yet confirmed	24
Total	123

A total of 286 posts have been filled by the internal transfer of OPCS staff and the remaining 1,883 posts are being filled by direct recruitment.

None of the posts has been filled by transfers from other Government-funded agencies.

I will write to the hon. Member about the number of posts filled by people who are registered as disabled.

None of the posts has been filled by transfers from the health boards.

Laundry Service

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much is provided to fund the incontinent laundry service; and what is his estimate of the number of patients requiring that service in (a) Waltham Forest, (b) London (c) nationally.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the percentage of national health service patients above the age of 65 years who are suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department can make no reliable estimate of the number of NHS patients suffering from Alzheimer's disease. Current scientific evidence suggests that about 7 per cent. of people aged 65 years and over suffer from dementia. About 70-75 per cent. of the cases in this age band may be attributed to Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his estimate of the cost of Alzheimer's disease to social services;

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of Alzheimer's disease to the national health service.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where he ranks the development of an effective treatment for Alzheimer's disease among other priorities for elderly health care.

Mr. Dorrell: The prevention of, or the development of an effective treatment for, Alzhiemer's disease would be a major step forward in the care of the elderly. The Government support biomedical and clinical research into a wide range of disabling conditions, including Alzheimer's disease, through grants in aid to the Medical Research Council.

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has concerning the percentage of (a) all deaths, and (b) deaths beyond the age of 65 years which are attributable to Alzheimer's disease (i) throughout the world, and (ii) in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Dorrell: There are no data on mortality readily available for the world. The table shows the percentage of (a) all deaths; and (b) deaths for persons aged 65 years and over which are attributable to Alzheimer's disease in the United Kingdom and for Great Britain for the most recent years for which data are available.

Number and percentage of deaths from Alzheimer's disease[1] for the United Kingdom and Great Britain 1989 and 1990.

NHS (Employers' Salaries)

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North of 30 April, Official Report, column 117, if he will list all those persons who are classified as employers in the national health service, stating the salary in each case.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: National health service employers are corporate bodies.

Condoms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been specifically provided to general practitioners for them to supply condoms to at-risk patients in relation to family planning and the spread of AIDS; and if he will indicate their areas.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There is no provision for general practitioners to prescribe condoms. District health authorities, where they perceive a local need, are able to supply condoms to local GPs for free distribution to any patient, if this is thought desirable. Condoms are also available without charge at family planning clinics.

Leukaemia

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has yet received advice from COMARE, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment, on the study of parental occupations of children with leukaemia, published in the British Medical Journal on 23 March.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes. The Government are grateful to COMARE for its advice. We note that COMARE endorses the authors' caution in drawing conclusions from the data, and that the study findings do not warrant any specific recommendations for the Government to consider.

Following is the full text of COMARE's advice:

Comare statement on LRF study

Background

1. On 23 March 1991 the British Medical Journal published the findings of a study entitled "Parental Occupations of Children with Leukaemia in west Cumbria, north Humberside and Gateshead". This study was undertaken by the Leukaemia Research Fund Centre at the University of Leeds in conjunction with the Childrens' Cancer Unit at the University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

2. The authors' stated objective was to determine whether parental occupations and chemical and other specific exposures are risk factors for childhood leukaemia.

3. This study is independent of the programme of research recommended by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE) which includes research aimed at elucidating any relationship between parental occupational exposure to ionizing radiation and development of childhood leukaemia and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma (NHL). Nevertheless, aspects of the study are clearly of relevance to the work of COMARE which has undertaken to update its advice to government as further research data concerning possible associations between ionising radiation and childhood leukaemia—NHL become available. In view of this, the Department of Health and the Health and Safety Executive have referred the results of this study to COMARE for consideration and advice.

The Study

4. 151 Children under 15, diagnosed with leukaemia/NHL between 1974 and 1988 while resident in west Cumbria, north Humberside or Gateshead were ascertained from the Yorkshire Regional Children's Tumour Registry and the Northern Region Children's Malignant Disease Registry. Those who had been born in the same area as that in which they were resident at diagnosis met the criteria of eligibility for analysis. Interview data were obtained for 109 such cases.

5. Controls, obtained mainly from district health authority birth registers, were matched for sex, date of birth and health district of birth. The study design aimed to obtain two controls for each case. For those controls for whom interview data could not be obtained, replacement controls were recruited where possible but not all cases had two controls.

6. A complete history of employment and of exposure to specific substances and radiation was obtained for the biological parents from the time they started work to the end of the analysis period. Similar data were collected for any other adults living with the child for more than three months from before birth to the time of diagnosis. 9 industrial and occupational groupings, coded according to Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) classifications were tested as hypotheses. In addition, data on 15 specific exposures and a check list of 22 known chemical carcinogens were analysed. In all 480 comparisons were computed.

7. A fundamental part of the study design was a separate analysis of the data for evidence of risk through six pathways: each of the biological parents both prior to conception and during gestation (four pathways) and all adult male and female household contacts (includes biological parents) from birth to diagnosis (two pathways). In all cases where a statistically significant result was found for exposure of bilogical fathers during gestation the fathers had also been exposed around the time of conception.

8. For the 25 fathers who reported radiation exposure prior to birth, a subclassification of their exposure to ionising radiation was produced after checks with the National Registry for Radiation Workers (NRRW) at the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and British Nuclear Fuels PLC, Sellafield, Cumbria (BNFL). Exposures were classified as "certain" for those recorded on the NRRW or by BNFL and "possible" for other contract workers on nuclear sites and industrial radiographers. Those reporting exposures in occupational settings such as education and medicine were classified as "unlikely". The remainder reported non-ionising radiation exposure and included radar and radio operators.

9. Selected results of the occupational analyses were reported, including the results that were statistically significant in any one of the six pathways analysed. Adjustment was made for inter-dependence of some results and in some instances interpretation was aided by direct inspection of the data. In addition the authors undertook comparative analyses of the six exposure pathways.

10. The authors state that few risk factors were identified for mothers but note that the results show some associations for mothers working in food-related occupations or in catering, cleaning and hairdressing before conception. However they consider that the absence of any specific range of occupations accounting for the significantly raised risks suggests that the finding may be due to chance. The only other preconceptional risk for mothers that reached statistical significance was exposure to wood dust. Preconceptional exposure of biological fathers showed the greatest numbers of significant odds ratios. After adjustment for possible confounding factors independent contributions to risk in the preconceptional period were found for exposure to wood dust, radiation and benzene.

11. The authors urge that the results be interpreted cautiously because of the small numbers, overlap with another study and multiple exposure of some parents. They state further, that it is important to distinguish the periods of parental exposures since the risk factors identified were almost exclusively restricted to the time before the child's birth.

Comare's Advice to Government

General considerations

12. This study has been undertaken independently of COMARE's recommendations and the committee is grateful to the authors for making a draft available for discussion.

13. We agree with the authors that the results must be interpreted cautiously and we would stress that interpretation of this type of research is a complex matter. Demonstration of a statistical association does not necessarily imply a causative relationship. Proper interpretation requires that the study be considered in the context of other research, both epidemiological and biological. There is, in general, little consistency amongst the findings of epidemiological studies relating to possible links between parental occupation and childhood malignancies and the authors of this study draw attention to some of the reasons for this in their Discussion.

14. Although this statement contains some general observations which apply to all the findings, the remit of COMARE has necessarily led us to restrict detailed discussion to those findings which relate to radiation exposure.

Methodology

15. The use of retrospective questionnaires is inevitably open to some reporting bias.

People who agree to participate as controls in such studies may be intrinsically different from those who refuse. The findings for the controls may therefore be unrepresentative and replacement of non responders will not necessarily ameliorate this effect.

16. The original study design did not incorporate any means of validating the occupational and exposure histories. The interpretation of the results hinges on the validity of the data and the study's potential value would be enhanced considerably if validation could be achieved. The data relating to radiation exposures has been validated to some extent by cross checking with the NRRW and BNFL records. However the validation is incomplete since it did not include those parents who did not report occupational exposure to radiation. Furthermore, validation was not attempted of the radiation exposures of contract workers and industrial radiographers.

Results

17. A large number (480) of comparisons were computed in the analysis and we share the authors' view that some significant associations might have been expected purely by chance. Indeed, we note that the number of significant associations found, falls within the limits of chance expectation. This observation reinforces both our and the authors' caveats against using the results to draw conclusions about causal links.

18. The authors report a threefold risk associated with radiation exposure during the preconceptional period which remained significant after adjusting for possible confounding factors. They state that the finding is not independent of that of Gardner et al. in West Cumbria because of the geographical overlap for cases and similarity of methods of selecting controls. However they also state that this risk is not confined to Cumbria and that exposed case fathers did not work exclusively in the nuclear industry.

19. The above statements refer to the results derived from the basic data prior to any attempt at validation by cross checking with the NRRW and BNFL records. However, for those fathers subsequently classified as having "certain" exposure to ionising radiation, the statistical significance of the result is dependent on the cases common to both this and the case control study of leukaemia and lymphoma among young people near Sellafield nuclear plant in West Cumbria undertaken by Gardner et al. Thus, while this study's findings offer some confirmation of those of Gardner they do not provide independent evidence of an association between objectively confirmed paternal exposure to ionising radiation prior to conception and development of leukaemia/NHL in children. The data do not provide firm evidence of a risk to children of fathers exposed to radiation outside the nuclear industry.

General Conclusions

20. This study has documented various parental occupational exposures as having a statistically significant association with cases of childhood leukaemia/NHL in the three areas studied. The authors have been cautious in drawing conclusions from the data and we feel that this is appropriate. We do not consider that the findings, of themselves, warrant our making any specific recommendations. However, we urge the authors to explore the possibility of extensive validation of the occupational and exposure histories and welcome the authors stated intention of considering further analyses.

Fluoridation Act 1984

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been taken to implement the Fluoridation Act 1984.

Mr. Dorrell: The Fluoridation Act 1984 provides that fluoridation of water supplies is a matter for local decision. In the past five years funds have been made available to a number of health authorities to assist with the costs of new fluoridation schemes and to contribute towards the major costs of replacement of outdated plant and equipment.

In the Water Act 1989 provision was made for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health to indemnify any statutory water undertaker against liabilities and costs incurred in connection with anything done by the undertaker for the purpose of increasing the fluoride content of any water supplied by the undertaker.

Tooth Decay

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of five-year-old children in the north-west region suffered tooth decay in (a) 1985, (b) 1986, (c) 1987, (d) 1988, (e) 1989 and (f) 1990.

Mr. Dorrell: Surveys of five-year-old schoolchildren in the north-west region carried out in the school years 1985-86, 1987-88 and 1989-90 showed that 58 per cent., 55 per cent. and 56 per cent. respectively suffered tooth decay.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned on the link between nutritional standards in school meals and the extent of dental caries in young children in the north-west region.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department has not commissioned any research seeking to establish a link between the nutritional standards in school meals and dental caries in young children, and, indeed, it would be extraordinarily difficult to mount research which isolated the effect of such standards from other factors influencing dental caries.

Cervical Smears

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of doctors in Wanstead and Woodford have now achieved targets for smear tests for cervical cancer.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is not available in the form requested. Forty-five per cent. of GPs in the Redbridge and Waltham Forest family health services authority area received a cervical cytology target payment in respect of their achievements at 1 April 1990.

The North East Thames regional health authority has targeted cervical cytology as one of the key areas for improvement in its planning statement for 1991-92.

Drug Budgets

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria have been used by family health services authorities for setting indicative drug budgets where medical advisers have been unable to visit a general practitioner practice.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In setting indicative prescribing amounts family health services authorities consider practices' historic spending patterns, comparable average costs for the FHSA, special circumstances of the practice including high-cost patients, anticipated changes in demand and an allowance for the forecast increase in the cost of drugs. These criteria will apply whether or not a medical adviser visits an individual practice.

Student Nurses (Bursaries)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase bursaries to student nurses under the Project 2000 scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 20 May that bursary levels for Project 2000 students will increase by 8 per cent. from 1 September 1991. The new rates payable will be:

London
Under 26 at start of course	5,075
26 and over at start of course	5,615
Elsewhere
Under 26 at start of course	4,320
26 and over at start of course	4,860

Osteoporosis

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) of 16 May, Official Report, column 250, if he is able to provide any statistical information about cases of osteoporosis among men and women.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Comprehensive statistics on the number of people with osteoporosis are not available.

The best available proxy is the number of hip fractures most of which are in the elderly group and are associated with osteoporosis.

Hip fractures

	Women	Men	Total
All admissions
1987-88	32,708	9,055	41,763
1988-89	33,371	8,677	42,048
Admissions over 75
1987-88	25,049	4,860	29,909
1988-89	25,722	4,866	30,588

The figures are extracted from the Hospital Episode Statistics. They are provisional estimates based on incomplete data and may be subject to revision when analysis has been completed.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Dorrell: The information available is as follows:

Year	Cash £ million	Therms Million	kWh Million	Litres Million	Tonnes	Area Square metres
1985-86	11·76	13·34	110	9·5	7,314	1·48
1986-87	9·68	8·5	110	9·05	8,230	1·51
1987-88	9·8	8·4	130	9·05	7,077	1·56
1988-89	9·95	7·8	130	4·6	4,250	1·61
1989-90	1·92	0·49	24·77	1·17	0	0·32

Note: All figures are in cash terms only.

Information is not available for earlier years, nor yet for the Department of Health (DH) for 1990-91.

Figures given for 1985-86 to 1988-89 are the combined DH/Department of Social Security totals.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Dorrell: The information availabe is as follows:

1987-88	[1]54,000
1988-89	[1]65,000
1989-90	[2]75,000
1990-91	[2]100,000

[1] Joint DH/DSS
[2] DH only
(All figures are in cash terms only)

Information for years before 1987-88 is not available. Further investment was made in the period covered by the table by the Property Service Agency, but the amount cannot be identified separately from the agency's overall expenditure on energy efficiency.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of persons-years devoted to energy management in the latest years.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department has one designated energy manager supported by the building managers appointed for each building on the estate. Information is not available on the proportion of time that each dedicates to energy management.

Nurses' Pay

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average wage was for an NHS nurse in 1979 and 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Information is not collected centrally on average rates of pay. The minimum and maximum rates of basic pay received by enrolled nurses, staff nurses and sisters in 1979 and by their broadly equivalent grades in 1989 were as set out in the table.

In addition to their basic pay, nurses received additional earnings from leads and allowances. Their total earnings from these sources in 1989 were as indicated in the table. There are further additions to basic pay for nurses in the London zone and the effects of these are also shown.

Nurses' pay: April 1979 and April 1989

[1] These figures include an inner London supplement of 9 per cent. of basic pay up to a maximum of £1,023.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Motoring Offences

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the average fine imposed on motorists convicted of illegally using bus lanes in London during the hours of restricted use in each of the last three years;

(2) what has been the number of prosecutions of motorists charged with illegally using bus lanes in London during the restricted hours of use in each of the last three years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not separately identified in the motoring offences statistics collected centrally.

Prisoner Mothers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money per week a prisoner in a mother and baby unit receives at Her Majesty's prison at (a) Askham Grange, (b) Styal and (c) Holloway, excluding any personal money a prisoner may have accumulated.

Mrs. Rumbold: Earnings received by mothers in mother and baby units vary according to the activities in which they are involved and are set at the same levels as for prisoners elsewhere in the establishments.

At HM prison, Askham Grange, the earnings of the women at present in the unit range between £1·90 (unemployed) and £5·95 per week. At HM prison, Styal, the earnings range between £2 (light duties) and £3·80 per week. At HM prison Holloway, they range between £1·90 (unemployed, including remand inmates who are willing to work) and £4·45 per week.

In addition, mothers who apply and who meet the normal eligibility criteria receive child benefit at the appropriate rate.

Animals (Research)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the amounts given to funding research into alternatives to the use of animals in scientific procedures for each year since 1984.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 28 November 1990 to the question from the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) at columns 416-17.

In addition to the projects listed in that reply, a further project was funded in 1990-91—Dr. P. D. Minor, National Institute for Biological Standards and Control "Development of in vitro testing of polio vaccines" (£10,600 over one year).

Prisoners (Sexual Offenders)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons in England and Wales imprisoned for committing a sexual offence have been released on licence in each month of 1990 and 1991 to date; how many years each person had actually served in prison since conviction; what was their original sentence; and how many such persons have since been re-imprisoned for committing a further criminal offence.

Mrs. Rumbold: Provisional figures for sex offenders released from prison service establishments on licence during 1990 by sentence length are as tabulated. I regret that the statistics on time served in prison since conviction and on re-imprisonment for committing a further criminal offence could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In general, prisoners serving sentences of over 12 months receive one third remission of sentence less any deduction made for offences against prison discipline. The time served by those released on licence is further reduced by the period of the licence. Data for 1991 are not yet available.

Missing Persons Bureau

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made to supply the juvenile section of the missing persons bureau at New Scotland Yard with a computer system.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that details of all juveniles reported missing in the metropolitan police district, except absconders from care unless they are considered to be immediately at risk, are now recorded on the missing persons computer at New Scotland Yard as soon as the report is received. Most absconders from care return after a few hours and the general practice is to record their particulars on the computer after 14 days.

Prisons (Coal Supplies)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 377, to the hon. Member for Don Valley, if he will list those prison establishments that (a) receive their coal from British Coal and (b) receive it from elsewhere; and where they obtain it from.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: All the prison establishments listed in that answer receive their coal supplies from British Coal.

Life Prisoners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons in England and Wales sentenced to life imprisonment have been released on licence in each month of 1990 and 1991 to date; how many years each such person had actually served in prison since conviction; and how many such persons released have since been re-imprisoned for committing a further criminal offence.

Mrs. Rumbold: The numbers of life sentenced prisoners released in each month of 1990 and the time they served is given in the following table. Data for 1991 are not yet available.

The only readily available information on reconvictions of life licensees is published annually in a Home Office statistical bulletin. A copy of the latest report (issue 27/90—Reconvictions and Recalls of Life Licensees and Mentally Disordered Offenders: England and Wales 1988) is held in the Library.

Animal Experiments

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is held on the percentages of macaques used as laboratory animals in the United Kingdom which are singly housed; and what is the total number used.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1989, the latest year for which figures are available, 2,904 scientific procedures involving macaques, were started. Information is not collected centrally on the number of such animals which were singly housed.

Refugees

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest waiting time for refugees from Somalia to join their families in Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The average time between receipt of an application in the asylum division and a decision is about 16 months. This applies to cases of all nationalities. No details are recorded by specific areas of the United Kingdom such as Liverpool.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to make a statement on Government policy towards refugees and asylum-seekers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Leighton) on 3 May at column 341.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest number of refugees awaiting entry into the United Kingdom from Somalia at the latest date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 1,700 applications for entry clearance from Somalis are awaiting consideration in the Home Office.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside to discuss the present situation in Somalia and the number of refugees awaiting entry to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for immigration would be glad to meet the hon. Member to discuss these mattters.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest number of refugees seeking settlement in Liverpool at the latest date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not available. We do not record separately where in the United Kingdom asylum applicants would wish to live.

Road Tax

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were recorded in courts relating to the non-payment of road tax in each year since 1980.

Mr. John Patten: The available information, relating to England and Wales, for each year since 1983 is as follows:

Number of Proceedings for failing to pay appropriate motor vehicle licence duty, England and Wales

Year	Proceedings
1983	156,520
1984	159,113
1985	168,119
1986	181,893
1987	170,124
1988	178,875
1989	166,575

Source:
Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary tables. Issues 1983 to 1989.

Statistics for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost and those for 1990 will be available in the autumn.

Dogs

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the imposition of a ban on the importation, breeding or ownership of (a) American pit bull terriers, (b) Japanese tosas and (c) any other breeds of dog; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement which my right hon. Friend made to the House on Wednesday 22 May at columns 945-46.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the names of those organisations among the 65 representations made to him on the disclosure of criminal records of the convictions of taxi licence applicants as indicated in his answer of 20 May, Official Report, column 347.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The National Association of Taxi and Private Hire Licensing and Enforcement Officers, the East Anglian Federation of Taxi Associations and the Association of District Councils have made representations directly to the Home Office. Of the remaining representations 51 were from hon. Members, some on behalf of other individuals or groups, and the rest from local authorities and members of the public.

Re-offenders

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men serving non-custodial sentences are known to have re-offended during the period of that sentence; and how many have re-offended on more than one occasion during this period, in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten: The information is not available in the form requested. In 1989, the latest year for which information is available, convictions for a further offence were the reason for 16 per cent. of the terminations of probation orders and 8 per cent. of terminations of community service orders. (tables 2.15 and 6.11 of "Probation Statistics, England and Wales, 1989").

General Pinochet

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what immigration facilities were provided at the British Aerospace aerodrome at Hatfield, Hertfordshire, on the weekend of 18-19 May for the visit of General Augusto Pinochet; how many members of the Chilean party were admitted through those facilities; whether any were refused admittance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what immigration procedures were followed during the visit to Britain of General Augusto Pinochet to Britain on 18 May.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On arrival at Hatfield on 18 May, General Pinochet was accompanied by 11 Chilean nationals. By arrangement under paragraph 1(1) of schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971, entry was granted by two officers from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, St. Albans.

Silicosis

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make available the reports of post-mortems carried out for the Home Office, where death was caused, or materially accelerated by, the prescribed disease silicosis in accordance with the Workmen's Compensation (Silicosis) Act 1918, and the resultant Refractories Industries (Silicosis) Scheme.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Coroners, who are independent judicial officers, have a duty to inquire into a death where there is reason to suspect that this is caused by a prescribed industrial disease and they have power to arrange a post-mortem examination. Under the Coroners' Rules a coroner is required, on payment of a prescribed fee, to supply a copy of a post-mortem report to a properly interested person and this will normally include the spouse. In cases where death is believed to be due to a prescribed industrial disease, the Home Secretary has issued guidance to coroners recommending that copies of the post-mortem reports should be made available to Medical Boarding Centres (Respiratory Diseases) to assist in the consideration of claims for industrial death benefit. But the coroner has no authority to make post-mortem reports generally available.

Fowsia Hussein

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why he has not replied to the letters of 4 February, 8 March and 24 April with regard to Fowsia Hussein of 24 Craston road, sent to him by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton; and if he will now do so.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The delay in replying to the right hon. Member's representations on behalf of Mrs. Hussein has been caused by the large increase in the number of applications for asylum in the past two years which has produced a considerable backlog of work in the asylum division. I announced on 26 April my intention to increase the staff in this division from about 120 to over 500. I shall be writing to the right hon. Member shortly.

Prisoners (Parole)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners dealt with by the parole board in 1990 and during the first quarter of 1991 were heard before their parole eligibility date.

Mrs. Rumbold: These statistics could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost. However, while there were delays in early 1990, there are no longer any general delays although some cases may be held up for special reasons such as late changes in inmates' circumstances or a need to obtain additional information.

Mr. David Dawson

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will initiate a review of the conviction and sentence passed on Mr. David Dawson, a prisoner at Her Majesty's prison, Liverpool.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend is always ready to consider new representations about the safety of a conviction. Mr. Dawson's case was examined last year in the light of representations made and no grounds were then found to justify any further action. There are currently no representations before my right hon. Friend about this case.

Prisoners (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide the figures of remand and convicted prisoners still held in police cells in Greater Manchester, and for surrounding areas, and the number expected to be held in such accommodation on 3 July, 3 August and 3 September.

Mrs. Rumbold: On Thursday 30 May there were 464 prisoners in police cells as a result of accommodation lost at Manchester prison. Of these, 134 were sentenced and 330 unsentenced. These figures reflect a recent increase in the number of persons remanded in custody by the courts. Efforts are continuing to overcome the difficulties caused by action on the part of the Prison Officers Association in certain prisons. While these difficulties persist and having regard to the fluctuations in demand from the courts it is not possible to predict accurately the level of usage of police cells on particular future dates, but the expected availability of further refurbished accommodation at Manchester and of new accommodation in Yorkshire should enable substantial inroads to be made into the task of clearing police cells from July onwards.

Immigration (Ad Hoc Group)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library, as soon as they become available, minutes of the ad hoc group on immigration, to which the British Government are a party.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The ad hoc working group on immigration is an intergovernmental forum and it is not usual to publish details of intergovernmental negotiations while they are taking place. This group is directly accountable to EC immigration Ministers who are kept fully informed of its work. Public statements are normally issued following each of the six-monthly meetings of immigration Ministers and my right hon. Friend will, in the usual way, report to the House the conclusions of the meeting of immigration Ministers due to take place in Luxembourg later this month.

Trevi Group

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library, as soon as they become available, minutes of the meetings of the Trevi group of Ministers from EC countries.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Trevi group does not make public the minutes of its meetings; but as on past occasions I shall inform the House of the main conclusions of the next meeting of Trevi Ministers in Luxembourg on 13 and 14 June.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested is as follows and is for the prison service estate only.

Spend for Energy Projects

Year	Cash	1990-91 Money Terms
1980-81	3,300	6,039
1981-82	228,000	380,760
1982-83	557,000	885,630
1983-84	363,000	540,870
1984-85	408,000	579,360
1985-86	578,000	774,520
1986-87	363,000	471,900
1987-88	313,000	384,990
1988-89	240,000	276,000
1989-90	1,230,000	1,328,400
1990-91	1,620,000	1,620,000

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: There are four dedicated energy managers in the Home Office. In 1990-91 a total of about six person-years was devoted to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Twenty-two energy audits were carried out in the Home Office in the last five financial years. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Home Secretary on 5 June 1990 at columns 421-23, which gave details of 16 of these audits. The main conclusions of the other six audits were as follows:

HMP Onley

Improved controls to heating distribution mains system.
Change all GLS and tungsten halogen area lighting to compact fluorescent lamps.
Change perimeter lighting from 500W tungsten halogen lamps to high pressure sodium lamps.
Upgrade gymnasium lighting.
Replace Manor House heating system.

Ashford Police Training College

Replace tungsten lamps with compact fluorescent lamps.
Improve boilerhouse and heating pipework insulation.
Install Building Energy Management system.
Install new heating control.
Insulated Pool cover.
Heat recovery to swimming pool.
Automatic shut off taps to hand basins.

Ryton Police Training College

Replace tungsten bulbs with compact fluorescent lamps.
Replace overhead heating distribution mains.
Install lighting control system.
New heating controls.
Install Building Energy Management System.
Modify/upgrade boilers.

Birmingham Forensic Science Laboratory

Automatic lighting controls.
Install thermostatic radiator valves.
Recalibrate heating controls.
Install solar screening to some glazed areas.

Cwmbran Police Training College
Replace tungsten bulbs with compact fluorescent lamps.
Install lighting control system.
Improve heating pipework insulation.
Change external floodlighting lamps.
Heat recovery swimming pool hall.

Chantmarle Police Training College
Replace tungsten bulbs with compact fluorescent lamps.
Boilerhouse control and insulation improvements.
Road insulation.

Naturalisation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people over the age of 60 years have applied for naturalisation for each of the past 10 years; how many have been accepted; and how many of those refused were refused because they did not pass the language test.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information is available only from 2 October 1986 of those applicants who were aged 60 or over at the time their applications were granted.

Year	Granted
1987	93
1988	71
1989	104
1990	98
[2]1991	110

[1] 2 October to 31 December.
[2] 1 January to 29 May.

It is not possible to say how many applicants aged 60 or over were refused in a given year, nor whether their refusal was because they had an insufficient knowledge of the English, Welsh or Scottish Gaelic language.

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has of how much would have to be added to the price of each television set to replace the television licence fee, assuming the average life of a set to be five or 10 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On current estimated sales volumes, an additional charge of about £355 per TV set would be needed to raise a sum equivalent to current net licence fee revenue.

Passports

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many officials were involved and what procedures were followed in issuing EC passport number 003147077 by the Liverpool passport office; on what date an application was submitted by Phelim McManamon; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what action has been taken by his Department since Sunday 26 May concerning the immigration and nationality department and the Passport Agency; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when Mr. Phelim McManamon was issued with a current British passport; whether the original application with photographs is retained; what checks were carried out on the file and photographs prior to issuing an EC passport in the name of Phelim McManamon; and if he will make a statement;

(4) on what date and from which office Mr. Vindokumar Patel of the east midlands immigration service was issued with a British passport; and what sort of passport was issued.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The matter referred to has been placed in the hands of the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average delay in issuing (a) British citizenship and (b) an EC passport; and what is the appropriate fee in each case.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The average waiting times for those certificates issued in April were 36 months for certificates of naturalisation and 24 months for certificates of registration. From 1 March 1991, the fee for single and joint applicants for naturalisation on the grounds of residence has been £170, for applicants for naturalisation on the grounds of marriage to a British citizen £135, and for applicants for registration £85.

The average processing time for non-urgent straightforward properly completed passport applications was about 10 working days as at 26 May 1991. The fee for a standard United Kingdom passport is £15.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officials in the immigration and nationality department and the Passport Agency have access to Home Office and police computerised records; how many complaints he has received in the last year of unauthorised access to computer records; what action has been taken to combat such unauthorised access; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Officials of the immigration and nationality department have access to various internal departmental computer systems used in their day-to-day work activities, but have no direct access to other Home Office systems or in the normal way to police computerised records. However, members of the immigration service involved in law enforcement may have access to police computerised records of convictions where this is relevant to inquiries into breaches or suspected breaches of the immigration laws.

Passport Agency staff at computerised offices, currently Liverpool, Glasgow, London and part of Peterborough, involved in the issue of United Kingdom passports have access to the United Kingdom Passport Agency computer. No agency staff have direct access to other Home Office computer systems and none have access to police computer records.

No unauthorised access to either the IND or United Kingdom Passport Agency computers has been reported.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who prints British and EC passports available in the United Kingdom; who provides security at printing and during distribution and delivery of such passports; what checks and inspections are made at stores; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what complaints he has received about genuine British and EC passports being stolen from stores; how many such stores there are in the United Kingdom; who provides security at each store; what improvement in security is being introduced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: United Kingdom passports are printed, stored and distributed to passport offices under conditions of high security by arrangement with HMSO. Details of internal security procedures must remain confidential. The recent allegations about theft of passports are being investigated by the police.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to ensure that genuine British and EC passports and visas are not obtained from his Department for illegal sale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: United Kingdom blue and burgundy red (in the EC format) passports are issued only to people who have a legitimate claim to one. Checks and safeguards are built into the issuing system and procedures kept under regular review.

Visas are issued only at posts abroad, except that visa endorsements in the form of a stamp are made, in respect of dependent territory applicants, by the United Kingdom Passport Agency Office in London.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the normal application procedure and normal application requirements for (a) a British passport holder and (b) a non-United Kingdom national to apply within the United Kingdom for an EC passport; whether he proposes to change any part of these procedures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Satisfactory evidence of nationality and identity are required to support any application for a United Kingdom standard passport. There are no plans at present to change the procedures although the procedures are kept under regular review.

A non-United Kingdom national, unless he or she is a dual national, holding also British nationality, cannot qualify for the issue of either a standard blue or EC common format United Kingdom passport.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when police are requested to carry out inquiries into the operation of the Passport Agency; which police forces are involved; how many officials have, to date, been interviewed; when he expects police inquiries to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Metropolitan police, who are the only police force involved, began their inquiries on 28 May. I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the first officials were interviewed on 31 May, and that inquiries are expected to take about three months.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officials in the last year in the immigration and nationality department and the Passport Agency have been (a) dismissed, (b) suspended on full pay, (c) suspended without pay, (d) retired early and (e) are on extended sick leave; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In the past year, eight officials of the Passport Agency and the Immigration and Nationality Department have been dismissed, eight officials were suspended (four of whom were eventually dismissed and are included in the foregoing figures). Of those suspended four were on full pay, two on part pay and two without pay. There were no compulsory early retirements. Statistics for sick leave are not readily available in the form requested.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contacts the east midlands immigration service has had over the past five years with the immigration and nationality department and the Passport Agency; whether the company is on the list of those able to submit applications for new passports and for passports to be renewed on a priority basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Statistics of contacts with individuals, individual agencies, organisations or representatives are not recorded by the Immigration and Nationality Department. The information could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Such information is not available either in the United Kingdom Passport Agency, although I can confirm that the organisation to which the hon. Gentleman refers is not listed as an authorised agent by the agency.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information those applying for (a) British passports and (b) EC passports are normally required to supply; whether applicants are normally required to be interviewed by police officers; in what circumstances such application requirements may be varied; and who is authorised to approve such application variations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Applicants for standard blue British passports and for British passports in the European Community common format are required to prove entitlement by production of documentary evidence to satisfy the Passport Office of their national status and of their identity. The requirements may be varied in cases of emergency or other urgent need for travel if authorised by a supervisor. Applicants are not normally interviewed by police officers.

Visas

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the abolition of re-entry visas and visa exemption certificates by the United Kingdom; and what consultation he undertook with interested parties before taking this action.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have received a small number of representations. They have included both favourable and critical comment. It is not our normal practice to consult about immigration rules changes.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to minimise inconvenience to travellers, officials and airlines arising from the abolition of re-entry visas and visa exemption certificates by the United Kingdom; and what particular action he has taken to assist those visitors to the United Kingdom wishing to go on religious pilgrimage to Mecca.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are issuing applicants with an explanatory card and are providing guidance to airlines. Most travellers should find the new arrangements more convenient and their greater simplicity should make them easier for immigration staff and airlines to operate.

I recognise that the timing of the changes may cause difficulty for visitors who plan to make the pilgrimage to Mecca. Officials have therefore notified Islamic bodies that my right hon. Friend is prepared, exceptionally, to grant an extra one month's leave in order to bring such visitors within the scope of the visa exemption scheme. Applications should be made to the public inquiry office at Lunar house by 28 June and should be accompanied by a return ticket to Saudi Arabia valid for the Hajj period, as well as a ticket for the applicant's subsequent return to country of origin.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what benefits he expects from abolishing with effect from 16 May re-entry visas and visa exemption certificates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Because re-entry visas were issued without substantive consideration of applications they did not represent an effective use of resources. A new short-term multiple entry visa and an extended visa exemption scheme have been introduced to assist those who wish to travel abroad and return during a stay in the United Kingdom. Now that the visa exemption scheme applies uniformly to all visa nationalities the "visa exempt" passport endorsement, which was previously available on application, is no longer considered necessary or helpful.

Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the reasons for his decision in November 1990 to undertake inquiries into the activities of Mohinder Paul Singh Bedi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Mr. Vindokumar Patel

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether Mr. Vindokumar Patel of the east midlands immigration service has been retained by the immigration and nationality department or the police as an interpreter or in any other capacity in the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Mr. Patel has not been employed by the immigration and nationality department. The employment of interpreters by the police is a matter for the chief officer of police concerned.

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the police concerning legislation required to deal with dangerous dogs; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 23 May 1991]: Police forces and the police associations were consulted last year in connection with the proposals set out in the Government's "Control of Dogs" consultation paper. Three police authorities and 15 police forces responded to the Home Office along with the Police Federation, Police Superintendents' Association and the Association of Chief Police Officers. The views of Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary have also been obtained.

I refer the hon. Member to the statement which my right hon. Friend made to the House on Wednesday 22 May at columns 945-46.

Probationers

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of persons (a) under probation service supervision and (b) in gaol in England and Wales have previously been in local authority care.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 23 May 1991]: These statistics are not available centrally.

Research

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to carry out research into the effects of transfer under the provisions of circular instruction 37/90 and its predecessor circular instruction 10/74.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 23 May 1991]: There are no plans at present to carry out such research.

Prison Sentences (Foreign Nationals)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were serving a prison sentence in England and Wales for each of the last five years; and what percentage was for drug offences.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 23 May 1991]: The readily available information is given in the table.

Population of sentenced prisoners in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on 30 June who were recorded as foreign nationals and whether sentenced for drugs offences, 1986-1990.

Football (Policing)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 235, to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde, when he will take a final decision on the terms of the Home Office circular to police authorities on the subject of police charges for policing at football matches; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 23 May 1991]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon.

Friend to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 21 May at columns 408-9.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information he has, by year for the last five years to date, on the number of licensed taxi and private hire vehicle drivers who have been found guilty of re-committing a criminal offence;

(2) what information he has, by year for the last five years to date, on the number of licensed taxi and private hire vehicle drivers who have been found guilty in United Kingdom courts of (a) rape, (b) child molesting, (c) indecent assault, (d) false declarations, (e) unlawful sexual intercourse and (f) any other criminal offence, and, in the case of (f) above, what the offence was.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 23 May 1991]: Information is not available centrally on the number of licensed taxi and private hire vehicle drivers who have been found guilty of re-offending.

Data are not collected centrally on the profession of offenders convicted of violent and sexual offences. The following table shows the number of offenders found guilty from 1985 to 1989 in England and Wales under Acts relating to hackney carriages and private hire vehicles only. Similar information is not collected centrally by the Northern Ireland Office or the Scottish Office Home and Health Department.

Number of offenders convicted of offences relating to hackney carriages (cabs and taxis') and private hire vehicles 1985-89

Note: In some instances, unless stated, the occupation of the offender (ie. driver or owner) is not known.

Open Prisons (Escapes)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what nationalities are the 54 women drug offenders and the 18 men who escaped from open prisons in the last three years and were not recaptured; and who held their passports.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 21 May 1991]: Of the 54 women drug offenders unlawfully at large after absconding from open establishments in the last three years 34 are Nigerian, five are Ghanaian, eight are Jamaican, one is Colombian, one is Swiss, one is Indian and four are Guyanian.

Of the 18 male drug offenders unlawfully at large after absconding from open establishments in the last three years seven are British, two are Nigerian, three are Jamaican, one is Dutch, one is Italian, three are Pakistani and one is German.

The information requested as to who held all their passports is not readily available and a search of immigration, customs and prison service case files would entail disproportionate cost.

Parole

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of life sentence prisoners who were released for each year since 1981; and what was the number in each year whose release was proposed by the Parole Board and turned down by him or his predecessors.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply, 22 May 1991, c. 480]: The number of people released on life licence in 1990 from prison service establishments was 80, not 81 as stated in the earlier reply.

Asylum

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the number of individual applications for asylum in the United Kingdom and (b) the number of dependants of the principal applicants for asylum received in (i) 1988, (ii) 1989, (iii) 1990 and (iv) January to March in the current year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 17 May]: Information is not available in the form requested. The available information records dependants by the date of application of the principal asylum applicant and also does not generally include dependants who join a principal applicant after the principal application has been decided.

Available information on total asylum applications, including recorded dependants, is given in the following table.

Applications[1] for asylum in the United Kingdom, 1988-90

Year	Number
1988	5,570
[2]1989	16,400
[2]1990	30,000

[1] Including dependants applying with the principal applicant, and those, to date, arriving subsequently but before the principal application was decided. Figures are tabulated by the date of the principal application.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Agricultural College

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what proportion of the applications for agricultural advice made to the Scottish agricultural college in 1989-90 and 1990-91 were for advice which was (a) wholly publicly funded and (b) partly publicly funded;

(2) what are the trends in the demand for agricultural advice from the Scottish agricultural college which is (a) wholly publicly funded and (b) partly publicly funded, measured over the three most recent financial years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available in the form requested, since most free advice is given alongside charged advice but is accounted for differently. However, based on the number of invoices issued, the trend has been towards increased demand for charged advice; and the college estimates that well over 30 per cent. of professional advisory staff time involves the giving of free advice.

Loch Creran (Bridge)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if a public local inquiry has been held into the proposed bridge over Loch Creran, in Argyll and Bute; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A public local inquiry has been held and it is expected that my right hon. Friend's decision will be issued during the course of this summer.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in assessing the priority of the proposed bridge over Loch Creran and other competing schemes elsewhere in the trunk road network; when he expects building work to begin; what timetable he envisages for the project; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The scheme to build a bridge over Loch Creran on the A828 cannot command priority at present in the trunk road programme given the high returns available from competing projects of national importance. Following publication of the public local inquiry decision, further preparation work on this scheme will proceed only when there is a reasonable prospect of early funding being available. Present indications are that this is unlikely to be the case within the next five years.

Historic Buildings

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the major churches and historic houses which have been restored with Government funds since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1979 Government grants totalling just over £50,000,000 have been spent on churches and historic houses. The major recipients of these funds are set out in the table:

Community Charge

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish tables relating to Scotland of community charge levels and reductions, and so on, comparable to those provided for England in the answers of 17 April to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field), Official Report, column 184-85.

Mr. Lang: The available average charge figures, which exclude the community water charge, are given below:

(a) Before Community Charges (General Reduction) Act
(i) Average charge (gross)	393
(ii) Average charge less community charge reduction scheme	377
(b) After Community Charges (General Reduction) Act and revision to community charge reduction scheme
(i) Average charge (gross)	253
(ii) Average charge less community charge reduction scheme	241

Information about average charges after the award of community charge benefit is not yet available. Figures for average charges make no allowance for reduction due to capping.

Detailed information on reductions in payments is not readily available, but as I indicated in a reply I gave to the hon. Member on 15 April, at column 163, at least 2·25 million persons in Scotland are expected to benefit to the full extent of the £140 reduction.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide comparable but extended figures for Scotland to those put in the Library by the Secretary of State for the Environment on 4 April 1990 (deposit 5906) showing, for each local authority area and giving the assumptions made about equalisation, what level of (i) capital value rates, (ii) council tax and (iii) local income tax would be required in order to raise the same amount of revenue as with (a) the 1991-92 community charge, both before and after community charge reduction grant, and (b) the 1991-92 community charge, both before and after community charge reduction grant, but on the basis that the community charge was fully operational without any transitional or related elements.

Mr. Lang: Illustrative figures on household bills under the proposed council tax were issued by the Government on 23 April. On local income tax, I refer to the reply which my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Cathcart (Mr. Maxton) on 7 May at columns 415-17. If the hon. Member can supply precise details of any alternative proposal which he wishes to put forward I would be happy to consider what assistance can be given in exemplifying it.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the work force in employment in Scotland are thought to be holders of two jobs.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Precise information on the number of people with more than one job included in the published work force in employment estimates is not available.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many self-employed people there are currently in Scotland; and how this is calculated.

Mr. Allan Stewart: There were an estimated 234,000 self-employed in Scotland in June 1990. Estimates of the number of self-employed, compiled by the Employment Department, are derived from the 1981 census of population and trends in the number of self-employed recorded in the annual labour force surveys conducted in the spring of each year.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many employees in Scotland are part-time workers.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Successive Governments have always treated part-time and full-time workers equally in the employment count.

In December 1990 there were an estimated 416,000 women part-time employees in employment in Scotland. In September 1989, the latest date for which an estimate is available, there were some 76,000 male employees in employment in part-time work in Scotland.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland are currently on Government work-related training schemes.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish civilian work force estimate for December 1990 included an estimated 56,000 on Government work-related training programmes. The estimated numbers in Government work-related training aim to include most youth training and employment training participants with contracts of employment. The estimate is also designed to exclude those youth training and employment training participants whose training does not include work experience with an employer.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many self-employed people in Scotland pay national insurance contributions.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The latest estimate, from the 1988-89 survey of personal incomes conducted by the Inland Revenue, is that there were 230,000 individuals resident in Scotland with self-employment income, of whom some 120,000 were estimated to be liable to pay both class 2 and class 4 national insurance contributions in 1988-89, while an additional 70,000 were estimated to be liable to pay class 2 contributions only. Tax units with a total income under the PAYE threshold are excluded from these estimates. Some tax units having sufficient income to pay class 4 national insurance contributions, but sufficient personal allowance to prevent them from paying tax also may not be represented in the estimates.

Dental School, Edinburgh

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether there has been any change in his plans for the provision of a replacement dental school and postgraduate institute in Edinburgh.

Mr. Lang: The Government have endorsed the proposals of the McCallum working party for a dental hospital and postgraduate dental institute in Edinburgh. As Lothian health board is currently reviewing its acute service strategy there may be implications for how these proposals can be implemented. Any revised strategy will require the consent of Ministers. That will not be given unless Ministers are satisfied that the changes proposed would lead to a better standard of care and, therefore, be in the interests of patients.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the amount paid by each area health board in claims for medical negligence in each of the past five years; and what are the contingency estimates for 1991-92.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested was not held centrally prior to 1 January 1990 when financial responsibility for medical negligence was assumed by health boards. Given the small number of cases in certain health boards, it is not appropriate on the grounds of confidentiality to publish the information for 1990 in the form requested, but the total amount of compensation payments, including claimants' costs, for all boards in that year was £1,364,446. Present estimates indicate that the settlement figure for 1991-92 is likely to be close to the 1990 figure.

Health Board Expenditure

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and which health boards overspent and underspent on (a) salaries and (b) supplies in the financial year ended 31 March.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not held centrally. Revenue expenditure allocations to health boards are not earmarked for specific purposes and it is for boards themselves to determine how much will be spent on salaries and supplies.

Southern General Hospital

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total capital investment in the Southern general hospital for each year from 1985 to 1990; and what is planned in the current year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Figures for capital investment in the Southern general hospital are not held centrally for the financial years 1985-86, 1986-87 or 1987-88. Expenditure for the remaining years is as follows:

1988-89	396,000
1989-90	86,000
1990-91	1,535,000

[1] Estimate.

Child Abduction

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children have been abducted from (a) a parent or other relative with custody, and (b) local authority care to locations (i) in other parts of the United Kingdom and (ii) outside the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: During 1990 the Secretary of State received eight applications for assistance under the 1980 convention on the civil aspects of international child abduction. These applications related to 11 children of whom it was alleged that three had been wrongfully retained outwith the United Kingdom or abducted from Scotland. Information is not available about how many children were abducted where the abduction constituted a criminal offence under the Child Abduction Act 1984.

Arts Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing expenditure on the arts in Scotland in cash and real terms for each year since 1979.

Mr. Lang: Public expenditure by my Department on the arts is set out in the table below. In addition, substantial sums are made available to support the arts in Scotland through the Scottish Arts Council which is funded by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts.

	Arts expenditure £ million	Arts expenditure in real terms at 1990-91 prices £ million

Dogs

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people in Scotland have been treated by the national health service for bites by dogs in Scotland in each of the past five years;

(2) what was the cost to the national health service in Scotland in each of the past five years for treating people bitten by dogs;

(3) how many children under the age of 16 years have been treated by the national health service for bites by dogs in Scotland in each of the past five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following is the number of in-patient and day-case discharges of patients from NHS hospitals in Scotland with a diagnosis of dog bites:

Year	Under-16 discharges	Over-16 discharges	Total discharges
1986	103	100	203
1987	85	90	175
1988	118	124	242
1989	97	92	189
1990	84	105	189

In addition, cases will also be treated at accident and emergency departments and by GPs, but the numbers are not recorded centrally.

The costs associated with the treatment of dog bites cannot be separately identified.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dog owners in Scotland have been fined because their dogs have fouled pavements in each of the past five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately identifiable within the criminal statistics maintained by the Scottish Office Home and Health Department.

Tobacco

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans his Department has to mark World No Tobacco Day on 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The main United Kingdom event in this field, on which efforts are concentrated, is our own long established and successful No Smoking Day, but the importance of World No Tobacco Day is also recognised.

On 31 May, the health education board for Scotland and Action on Smoking and Health (Scotland) will be formally integrated into GLOBALink, an international communication system for the exchange of anti-smoking information, while Glasgow 2000, a project supported by the board, will launch its initiative to promote smoke-free taxis throughout the city.

Royal Observatory

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his powers and responsibilities in respect of the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Royal Observatory, Edinburgh is funded by the Science and Engineering Research Council, for which responsibility lies with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when was the most recent review of access to further education by disabled students; what were its findings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A report was completed in June 1990 by Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools entitled "Pupils and Young People with Physical Disabilities". That report included a chapter describing and evaluating regional and college policies. I have arranged for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Education authorities have a statutory duty to secure the adequate and efficient provision of further education for their area. The report was accordingly drawn to their attention.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions were recorded in Scottish courts relating to the misuse, abuse or illegal use of orange badges intended for the exclusive benefit of disabled people in each year since 1980.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately identifiable within the criminal statistics maintained by the Scottish Office Home and Health Department.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions were recorded in Scottish courts relating to illegal parking in places designated for the exclusive use of disabled people in each year since 1980.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately identifiable within the criminal statistics maintained by the Scottish Office Home and Health Department.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to promote sport among disabled people in Scotland; what plans to provide local authorities in Scotland with additional funding for sport among disabled persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The promotion of sport for people with disability is undertaken on behalf of the Secretary of State by the Scottish Sports Council as an important part of its overall programme for widening access to participation in sport. The council enjoys a close working relationship with the Scottish Sports Association for the Disabled which it is supporting in 1991-92 with grant aid of £15,000 and the services of a senior council official. In addition, the Scottish Sports Council will be holding a national conference later this year on the topic of developing opportunities for people with disability.

It is for local authorities in Scotland to determine, within the resources available to them, their provision of sporting facilities, including those for people with disability, in the light of their assessment of local needs.

Argyll and Clyde Health Board

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will appoint a resident of Renfrew district to the Argyll and Clyde health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Health board members are not appointed to represent particular areas. As it happens, however, two executive members of the Argyll and Clyde health board are resident in Renfrew district.

Hospices

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing Scottish Office contributions to each voluntary hospice in Scotland for the most recent year available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Voluntary hospices, as locally based organisations, look to health boards for financial assistance under the funding initiative which the Government introduced last year. Records of financial allocations by health boards are not held centrally.

Census

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many Scottish Office staff have been (a) temporarily transferred or seconded and (b) given extended leave to take up posts relating to the census;

(2) if any Scottish Office staff temporarily transferred or seconded to the census are in receipt of salaries or payments from the Scottish Office;

(3) how many Scottish Office staff have been given extended leave to take up posts relating to the census;

(4) if any staff have been seconded to posts relating to the census; and on what basis their posts have been temporarily covered.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The processing of the Scottish returns for the 1991 census is being undertaken by staff of the General Register Office (Scotland). At the peak period, a total of 150 staff will be employed at the regional processing office, Hillington. Of these, 21 will be staff transferred temporarily from other duties and the remainder will be casual appointees. In addition, 85 staff in GRO(S) in Edinburgh, of whom 15 are casual staff, are currently assigned to census work. The costs of all these staff are met by GRO(S).

A further 20 Scottish Office staff have been lent to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys for work relating to the processing of the England and Wales returns for the 1991 census. These staff are being paid by OPCS. Arrangements have been made for existing Scottish Office staff to cover the resultant vacancies on level transfer or temporary promotion.

No Scottish Office staff have been given extended leave to take up census-related posts.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if any staff of Scottish health boards have been seconded to posts relating to the census; and on what basis their posts have been temporarily covered;

(2) if Scottish health boards have incurred any costs due to staff being transferred or seconded to take up temporary posts relating to the census;

(3) how many staff of Scottish health boards have been given extended leave to take up posts relating to the census;

(4) what payments have been made to Scottish health boards for staff temporarily transferred or seconded to assist in the census;

(5) if any staff of Scottish health boards temporarily transferred or seconded to posts relating to the census, are in receipt of salary or payments from these health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Staff working in Scotland on the 1991 census of population are employed by the Registrar General for Scotland or, in the case of most of the staff at the Hillington processing office, by the Registrar General for England and Wales. No general arrangements for transfer or secondment of staff from Scottish health boards have been made and no payments to the boards for this purpose are being made.

Information on agreements between Scottish health boards and individual members of staff relating to leave and payments of salary is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure, Strathclyde

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish details of the expenditure by the Scottish Office in each area of priority treatment within Strathclyde.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Records showing the division of all Scottish Office expenditure between areas of priority treatment and other areas are not maintained. The breakdown of urban programme-approved expenditure for 1990-91 for projects in areas of priority treatment within Strathclyde region, for which the Scottish Office meets 75 per cent. of the costs, is as follows:

Physiotherapy

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the per capita expenditure on community physiotherapy services by each Scottish health board in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information given in the table relates to community paramedical physiotherapy services and is available only from 1982-83. Details have been taken from health boards' annual accounts and the publication, Scottish Health Service Costs. Figures for 1990-91 are not yet available.

Caliper Repairs

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contracts previously existed between the Common Services Agency and Glasgow firms for the repair of calipers; when these were terminated; which companies received new contracts covering the Glasgow area; and how satisfactory their work has proved.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No contracts existed previously between the CSA and Glasgow firms. Up to 30 June 1989 health boards used contracts for the supply and repair of orthoses which had been nationally negotiated by the North West Thames regional health authority on behalf of the national health service. Among the suppliers was the company, Camp Cross Rhind based in Glasgow.

There are no separate contracts for the repair of calipers. New contracts for the supply and repair of orthoses were arranged by the CSA from 1 July 1989 and Camp Cross Rhind were one of three existing suppliers who were unsuccessful in tendering.

Companies covering the Glasgow area at present are:

McLeod and Napier (Glasgow)
M. Galloway (Glasgow)
John Barrons (Kilsyth)
Gilbey Orthopaedic Footwear (Glasgow)
Buchanan Orthotics Ltd. (Glasgow)
R. Taylor and Son (Orthopaedic) Ltd.
Remploy Ltd.
Spencer (Banbury) Ltd.

Generally the work of these companies has been satisfactory and in keeping with the terms of the contract.

Road Tax

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions were recorded in Scottish courts for offences relating to the non-payment of road tax in each year since 1980.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table. Prosecutions are for offences under sections 8 and 12 of the Vehicle (Excise) Act 1971 and include failure to display a licence as well as keeping a vehicle without a licence.

Gas and Oil Policies

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what public money has been spent by his Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available to encourage firms involved in gas and oil to relocate all or part of their operations (a) from England and (b) from the rest of Europe; and what assessment he has made of how effective the policy has been.

Mr. Allan Stewart: This information is not available. The attraction of inward investment to Scotland, both from overseas and from the rest of the United Kingdom, is the responsibility of Locate in Scotland which is funded and run jointly by the Scottish Office Industry Department and Scottish Enterprise. The resources expended by Locate in Scotland in fulfilling this role are not allocated, nor capable of being assigned, to particular industrial sectors.

Housing

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what income Scottish Homes has received from (a) enabling receipts, (b) stock disposal, (c) voluntary transfers, (d) house sales and (e) disposal of non-housing assets, in the fourth quarter of 1990-91 and in the first quarter of 1991-92.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1991]: The information for the fourth quarter of the 1990-91 financial year is set out in the table. Details for the first quarter of 1991-92 are not yet available.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) new dwellings for rent were completed by housing associations, (b) new dwellings for rent were started by housing associations, (c) dwellings for rent were rehabilitated by housing associations and (d) other new dwellings were built for owner occupation, or improved for sale into owner occupation by housing associations, by Scottish Homes (or SSHA or HCS) in each calendar year and in each financial year since 1979 to the nearest available date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1991]: The information requested is set out in financial year form; records are not held on a calendar year basis.

Hairmyres Hospital

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of days, or part of days, in each of the last four quarters when there were no acute medical beds available for admissions to Hairmyres hospital.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 13 May 1991]: The information requested is set out in the table.

These figures take no account of the fact that two beds are kept available to provide for emergency admissions during the night.

When no medical beds were immediately available at Hairmyres, GPs would contact one of the other acute hospitals in the area.

Islay

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what alternative proposals are under consideration by the Scottish Office and the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland regarding geese on Islay; which interested parties will be consulted; when he expects a conclusion to be reached; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 17 May 1991]: A number of alternative approaches to the question of the effect of geese on agriculture in Islay are under consideration including proposals from the National Farmers Union of Scotland. Consultation will take place in due course with appropriate bodies representing farming and other interests. There is at present no specific date for a conclusion to be reached, but my right hon. Friend is aware of the concern on Islay about this matter.

Health Boards (Remuneration)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual rate of remuneration of (a) chairman of health boards and (b) members of health boards as at April 1988, 1989, and 1991.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 21 May 1991]: The levels of remuneration paid to health board chairmen reflect the significant increase in their workload and time commitment in recent years and are thus not directly comparable.

Health Board	Chairman's remuneration at 1 April 1988 £ per annum	Chairman's remuneration at 1 April 1989 £ per annum	Chairman's remuneration at 1 April 1991 £ per annum
Greater Glasgow	14,863	18,594	22,960
Lothian	13,158	16,724	20,695
Grampian; Tayside	11,460	14,855	18,430
Lanarkshire; Argyll and Clyde	9,758	12,986	16,165

Health Board	Chairman's remuneration at 1 April 1988 £ per annum	Chairman's remuneration at 1 April 1989 £ per annum	Chairman's remuneration at 1 April 1991 £ per annum

Borders; Dumfries and Galloway	6,368	8,655	10,920
Orkney; Shetland; Western Isles	3,903	5,299	6,575

Health board members did not receive remuneration prior to April 1991. From 1 April 1991 remuneration of £5,000 and £2,000 per annum is paid to the non-executive members of mainland and islands health boards respectively.

Local Authority Care

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland as a whole were received into local authority care where the cause was (i) family homelessness and (ii) alleged abuse or neglect in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 21 May 1991]: The full information requested is available only from 1988 and is given in the table.

Year ending 31 March	Family homeless	Abuse or neglect[1]
Strathclyde
1989	5	765
Scotland
1988	18	1,442
1989	7	1,307

[1] Includes all children who were made subject to compulsory measures of care, whether on a residential basis or in the community, in relation to grounds (b), (c), (d) or (dd) of section 32(2) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968.

Foxes

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 414, to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce), when he expects to make a statement on Government grants for fox destruction, following research by Dr. Ray Hewson of Aberdeen university.

Mr. Lang: I have considered the report "Victim of Myth" and whether as a result of its findings any changes should be made to the present arrangements for the payment of grants to fox destruction clubs in Scotland. These grants are designed to meet 50 per cent. of the cost of the clubs with the balance being met by the members.

While the study is to be welcomed, I do not, however, consider that it supports conclusively the claim that the killing of foxes in the interest of sheep farming cannot be justified in Scotland. The evidence is that foxes do predate on lambs, possibly at about 2 per cent. of all births, and that, as the report itself points out, if foxes are numerous predation on lambs may increase. Group activity by farmers has proved effective in reducing their losses.

I therefore intend to continue the present scheme of grants to clubs for the purpose of controlling predation by foxes on sheep.

EMPLOYMENT

Paint (Safety)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what evidence has been reported by the World Health Organisation that painters in the construction industry have an above-average chance of contracting cancer.

Mr. Forth: The International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC), part of the World Health Organisation, reported in 1989 that, on the basis of an extensive analysis of epidemiological data from a number of countries, a raised risk of cancer in those occupationally exposed as painters, including painters in the construction industry, had been identified.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which states in the European Community have banned solvent-based paint.

Mr. Forth: On the basis of information available, I understand that no state within the European Community has banned solvent-based paint.

Health and Safety (Publications)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many copies have been printed, and at what cost respectively, of the Health and Safety Executive publications (a) the "Control of Substances Hazardous to Health in the Construction Industry", (b) "Essentials of Health and Safety at Work" and (c) "Health Surveillance under COSHH".

Mr. Forth: The numbers printed and costs are as follows:

Title of publication	Copies printed	Cost £
(a) Control of Substances Hazardous to Health in the Construction Industry	30,000	17,303·02
(b) Essentials of Health and Safety at Work	130,000	201,818·93
Essentials of Health and Safety at Work (leaflet)	200,000	6,956·23
(c) Health Surveillance Under COSHH	25,000	11,669·87

Redundancy

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will seek to amend the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 to allow the Secretary of State for Employment to award interest payments from the statutory redundancy fund to those whose statutory redundancy claim has been settled in their favour but whose case has taken a considerable time to conclude.

Mr Forth: I have no plans to do so. A major part of the redundancy payment procedure is outside the control of the Department of Employment and interest payments would therefore be inappropriate. Additional resources have been allocated to the redundancy payments service in 1991 and new procedures and equipment have been introduced to improve the speed of payment. These efforts will continue.

Mr Robert Jordan

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those bodies to which he has appointed or nominated Mr. Robert Jordan, formerly group managing director of FOSECO.

Mr. Forth: Mr. Robert Jordan has not been nominated or appointed to any bodies sponsored by this Department.

Meadowell Estate, Tyneside

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he intends to include the feasibility study by residents of the Meadowell estate in north Tyneside in the study being prepared under the chairmanship of his Department's regional director.

Mr. Forth: The regional director of the employment service in Northern region under the aegis of the Tyne and Wear city action team, chairs a multi-agency group, which includes local authority and Tyne and Wear urban development corporation representatives. The group has been charged with determining the feasibility of a co-ordinated approach to the regeneration needs of the Meadowell estate in North Shields and has commissioned a study. Members of the group have received copies of the report prepared by residents and have attended a presentation given by the residents. The study team has been asked to take the report findings into account when preparing recommendations for consideration by the agencies involved.

HORIZON Grants

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans his Department has to issue guidelines and application forms to United Kingdom organisations for HORIZON grants to increase employment opportunities for disabled people, along the lines of those issued by other EC countries.

Mr. Forth: The amount of funding available to the United Kingdom for HORIZON was recently notified by the European Commission. My Department is now therefore in a position to compile the overall operational programme that has to be submitted to the Commission by the end of June. Guidelines and further information will be issued shortly.

TECs

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Forth: Excellent progress is being made in setting up training and enterprise councils. All 82 TECs in England and Wales are now in place with 75 fully operational. The whole network will be operational later this year, nearly two years ahead of schedule.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Forth: The information requested in the form shown could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, records of investment have been kept from 1 April 1990 and the amount invested is £523,000.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Forth: Over the last five years, energy surveys have been undertaken on 251 buildings. Because of the large number of surveys and the wide variety of recommendations it is not practical to list the main recommendations of each of the surveys.

Implementation of the recommendations of the surveys has led to reduced energy consumption and cost savings.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Forth: The Department has two dedicated energy managers, covering the major estates in the Employment Department Group. In addition we have a part-time departmental energy manager.

Energy management also forms part of the duties for those staff engaged in estate management.

The total number of person-years devoted to energy management in 1990-91 was six.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Forth: I regret that this information is not available from 1978 to 31 March 1990. Before 1 April 1990 the Property Services Agency was responsible for energy monitoring and did not retain this information in the form requested. From 1 April 1990 we have been responsible for paying our own bills and monitoring cost and consumption. However, utility companies are still submitting bills for the final quarter of 1990-91. Therefore the latest information which is available is for the first three quarters of 1990-91, which is as follows:

	Consumption	Cost
Electricity	52,082,398 KwHours	3,938,749
Gas	3,029,381 Therms	1,219,556
Oil	670,016 Litres	86,067

The square footage of the estate to which the figures relate is 11,579,518.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Terminal Illness Claims

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the success rate for (a) initial claims and (b) reviews of claims for attendance allowance under the terminal illness rules for his Department's offices in the Doncaster area; and if he will list the number of refusals by grounds for refusal;

(2) how many claims for attendance allowance under the terminal illness rules have been received by his Department's offices in the Doncaster area since the new rules came into force; what is the average number of days between day of claim and the date of decision for such claims; what are the shortest and longest clearance times to date; and what is the average clearance time for reviews.

Mr. Scott: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for social security-related agencies (a) those that have published their business plans for 1991-92 and (b) those that have not.

Miss Widdecombe: All DSS agencies have published their 1991-92 business plans and copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the total staff of the Benefits Agency are on secondment from (a) his Department and (b) other Government Departments.

Miss Widdecombe: The Benefits Agency, along with other DSS executive agencies, is a part of the DSS. Accordingly it is staffed by departmental civil servants.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is (a) the establishment of the Benefits Agency and (b) the annual salary for each category of employee; and what savings his Department is expected to make in connection with this agency.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Pensioners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response the Government made to the European Commission on its proposals for a European travel card for British pensioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Worsley (Mr. Lewis) on 25 March at column 290. I will send him a copy of my letter to Members of the European Parliament issued on 28 February.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost currently incurred weekly by pensioners in the Doncaster area for (a) heating, (b) lighting and (c) travel; and what were the comparable figures for (i) five and (ii) 10 years ago.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham of 29 January, Official Report, column 486, how many (a) single and (b) married pensioners in 1987 had no income other than the state basic pension and/or means-tested benefits.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 May 1991]: In 1987 there were 810,000 single pensioners and 150,000 pensioner married couples with no income other than state retirement pensions (including net additional and graduated retirement benefit), supplementary benefit and housing benefit.

Mr Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost to his Department of (a) paying pensions to foreigners retired in the United Kingdom and (b) topping up the state pensions paid to them by their country of origin.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not available. The United Kingdom retirement pension is paid to anyone who meets the national insurance contribution conditions, irrespective of nationality.

Appeals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applicants in the Doncaster area for severe disability premium are awaiting the decision of the appeal tribunal.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Single Parents

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each month of 1990 and 1991 to date, for his Department's offices in the Doncaster area, the number of single parent (a) mothers and (b) fathers of small children who have lost benefit by working.

Miss Widdecombe: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Community Care

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the level of funding of community care loans and grants at his Department's offices in the Doncaster area; what has been his response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Scott: No such representations have been received.

National Insurance Fund (South-West)

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the number of employers in the south-west region, and (b) nationally, defaulting on payments into the national insurance fund, (c) the number of employees involved, (d) the cost to the fund, and (e) the number of prosecutions made for the offence, for each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Jack: The number of employers defaulting on payments into the NI fund is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Indexation

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Government plan to introduce the limited price indexation under the terms of the Social Security Act 1990.

Miss Widdecombe: No final decision has yet been made.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were accepted for Motability in each of the past five years; and what proportion this represented in each year of the total number of people granted mobility allowance for the first time or on renewal.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested. Information on the number of people who have been accepted by the Motability scheme is a matter for Motability itself. However, the information in the table gives the number of mobility allowance beneficiaries who, at a given time, (and shown as a percentage of the total number of beneficiaries current on that date,) had their mobility allowance paid direct to Motability Finance Ltd. (MFL) in respect of lease or hire purchase agreements with Motability.

Information on the number of initial and renewal awards of mobility allowance was given in my earlier answer. It is not possible to draw a direct comparison between these figures, which are a cumulative total over the year, and those shown in column (a) of the table which are snapshot figures.

Date	(a) Total number of awards paid direct to MFL	(b) Total number of Mob A recipients	Percentage of (a) to (b)
At 28 March 1987	39,725	472,268	8·4
At 31 March 1988	52,492	523,181	10·0
At 30 March 1989	64,846	566,099	11·5
At 29 March 1990	81,714	605,235	13·5
At 26 March 1991	96,323	648,045	14·9

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the total numbers of persons who were (a) awarded mobility allowance for the first time and (b) had their mobility allowance entitlement renewed, in each of the past five years, and for each quarter during the present year; and if he will provide an analysis for each group between those awarded mobility allowance for an indefinite period, for three years and for periods less than three years.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested. Available information is in the tables.

[2] Includes awards of Special Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state what is his latest assessment of the date on which the new mobility allowance provisions of the Disability Living Allowance and Disability Working Allowance Bill will be fully in force.

Mr. Scott: We anticipate that entitlement to the new disability living allowance, which will replace both attendance allowance for people under 65 and mobility allowance, will commence in April 1992. We intend, however, to accept claims for the new benefit from February 1992.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish estimates for the number of severely disabled people who have had to move into residential care without the support of the Independent Living Fund in each of the past three years.

Miss Widdecombe: Information regarding the number of severly disabled people entering residential care is not available.

Barber v. Guardian Royal Exchange

Mr. Aitken: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration he has given to the recent judgment of the European Court in Barber v. Guardian Royal Exchange; and if he will make a statement on the costs and other implications of implementing this decision.

Miss Widdecombe: We have been giving careful consideration to all the implications of this judgment and we are in close touch with the European Commission and other member states about it. There are, however, several aspects of the ruling which are unclear. To obtain clarification we have agreed in principle to support a case brought by the Coloroll group pension scheme trustees who are proposing to seek directions from the European Court on how their liabilities to members should be discharged, in the light of the Barber judgment.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report a table, showing separately for England, Scotland, Wales and

Northern Ireland for the years 1985-86 to 1993-94 expenditure on income-related rebates from local authority taxation, distinguishing rate rebates from community charge rebates, and showing, if necessary, a reconciliation to table 3 of Cm 1514.

Miss Widdecombe: Details of total spending on rate rebates and community charge benefits in England, Scotland and Wales from 1985-86 to 1990-91 are given in the table. The figures published in table 3 of the departmental report (Cm 1514) reflect assumptions current at the time of the autumn statement. Since then both the community charge reduction scheme and the £140 general reduction have been announced, and expenditure is now expected to be £1,300 million in 1991-92. A territorial breakdown of this figure is not yet available. Revised expenditure projections for 1992-93 and 1993-94 have not yet been finalised.

Information about spending in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he last met representatives of the Disablement Income Group; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We regularly meet representatives of disability organisations to discuss a wide range of disability issues. In particular, on 21 February my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Social Security and I met the Disability Benefits Consortium which is an umbrella group representing over 250 disability organisations including the Disablement Income Group.

Social Fund

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the gross and net budget of the social fund for each year since its introduction, broken down into (a) crisis loans, (b) budgeting loans and (c) community care grants and the fall in real terms of the social fund budget since 1988-89.

Mr. Scott: The figures are as follows. The gross expenditure has risen in real terms since 1988-89. Repayments have taken time to build up.

Mr Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for help through the social fund have been made since its introduction (a) in England and Wales and (b) in Leicestershire; and how many of those applications were turned down.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is available in the Library.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many families have benefited from the social fund in Leicestershire since its introduction; (2) what is the allocation of the social fund to Leicestershire county council for the year 1991-92; and what was it for the year 1990-91.

Mr Scott: Information is not collected in this format, but such information as is available is in the Library.

State Pensions

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with the Equal Opportunities Commission about a European Community draft directive on the equalisation of state pensions; and what position he has adopted.

Miss Widdecombe: There have been no firm proposals on the third draft directive on equal treatment in social security since it was last discussed in 1989. The Government are committed to the principle of equal treatment. We intend to co-operate in working with the European Commission and other member states to achieve an effective directive.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will amend regulations made under the Social Security Act 1975 to permit a person on sickness benefit with an untreatable condition and incapable of work to be absent abroad without losing the right of benefit.

Mr. Scott: Sickness benefit may be paid during a temporary absence abroad if the absence is for the specific purpose of being treated for an incapacity which existed before the person left Great Britain; or if, on the day the absence begins, incapacity has already lasted for at least six months. We have no plans to amend these regulations.

Fraud

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total annual cost of operating the fraud sector of his Department; and whether he intends to grant the sector agency status.

Mr. Jack: Social security fraud staff were reorganised into fraud sector teams on 2 January 1991. The estimated annual cost of operating these teams is £62,000,000, producing an annual benefit saving of about £383,000,000.

Since 1 April 1991 fraud sector teams have been included in the executive responsibilities of the new Benefits Agency. We have no plans to grant these teams separate agency status.

Income Support

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of the element within income support which covers community charge payments for (a) single people aged under 25 years, (b) single people aged over 25 years, and (c) a couple, in 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Miss Widdecombe: Income support levels were adjusted in April 1989 to include help towards the average 20 per cent. contribution to the community charge. The amounts included were:

(a) for single people under 25 years and each member of a couple—£1·15;
(b) for single people over 25 years—£1·30.

These amounts now form an integral part of overall benefit rates which were uprated in April 1990 by 5·2 per cent. and in April 1991 by 8·1 per cent. Overall benefit rates are reviewed in the autumn and benefit levels for 1992-93 will be announced then.

The Government have proposed that from April 1993, when the new council tax is introduced, maximum benefit for those on income support and equivalent levels of income will be 100 per cent. of their liability for the new tax. There would be no minimum contribution to the new tax.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money income support claimants are expected to pay to local authorities in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Miss Widdecombe: Income support recipients have to pay a 20 per cent. contribution towards the community charge. Across Great Britain as a whole this will amount on average to around 80p a week during 1991-92, taking no account of charge capping.

Estimates for 1992-93 are not available. However, the Government propose that from the introduction of the council tax in April 1993, maximum benefit for income support recipients will be 100 per cent. of their liability and there will be no minimum contribution.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Jack: Two full-time technically qualified managers have been appointed in the DSS; one in the Benefits Agency and one in the Information Technology Services Agency. Nine energy liaison officers have been appointed in the territorial directorates of the Benefits Agency to promote energy-saving practices and to monitor the energy target. They are assisted by colleagues in the territorial offices and in each local office. Detailed information about the time spent on energy matters in the territorial directorates is not readily available so it is not possible to calculate the total number of man years devoted to energy management.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what training Benefit Agency strategic planning teams with district management units are to receive before they draw up their strategic plans.

Miss Widdecombe: The training of Benefits Agency management is a matter for Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the scale rate for supplementary benefit or income support for a single adult for each year since 1970; by what percentage this was increased each year; and what are the percentage increases in national average earnings and in the retail prices index for each of those years.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The information requested is in the table and is given for each uprating date, rather than for each year; percentage increase columns show the change between each date. Comparisons between the uprating increases (column C) and the RPI and earnings increases (columns D and E) are difficult because each uprating factor either contained an estimate of future movements in the index or was based on a period earlier than the uprating period itself. The RPI and earnings figures are actuals for each period.

Notes:

Column B—shows the Supplementary Benefit basic single householder scale rate for the years 1970-87 excluding housing costs. These were paid through Supplementary Benefit until 1982-83 (not included in the scale rates) and then paid via Housing Benefit. From April 1988 the figures are the Income Support basic personal allowance for a single person over 25. No Supplementary Benefit additional requirements or Income Support premiums for special needs have been included.

Column C—shows the percentage increase from one uprating date to the next. This will not necessarily reflect the uprating index for that year because of rounding. Also in the earlier years uprating was calculated by forecasting likely changes in the RPI and this sometimes meant that adjustments had to be made the following year.

Column E—Shows the actual movement in the Retail Price Index for all items between uprating dates.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Clenbuterol (Livestock)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will support the introduction of legislation to authorise the removal of all livestock without compensation from farms where Clenbuterol/angel dust has been fed to farm livestock illegally.

Mr. Hanley: I am still considering the detailed provisions of new regulations to provide further controls and sanctions against the abuse of Clenbuterol. Such regulations will be made under the Food Safety Order (Northern Ireland) 1991 and will be subject to full consultation.

Livestock Marketing Commission

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what plans he has to appoint a representative of the Northern Ireland Master Butchers Association to the Livestock Marketing Commission, Northern Ireland;

(2) how long the Livestock Marketing Commission has operated in Northern Ireland; and how many persons representative of the Northern Ireland Master Butchers Association have served on it; and for what periods.

Mr. Hanley: The Livestock Marketing Commission has been in operation since 1967. Members are not appointed to represent sectoral interests. They are appointed as individuals in their own right on the basis of the experience and expertise which they are able to bring to work of the commission. No representative of the Master Butchers Association has been appointed and there are no plans to do so. Individual members of the association will, of course, be considered for appointment on their merits.

Musgrave Park Hospital, Belfast

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average waiting period for appointments, examination and fittings experienced by disabled persons at Musgrave Park hospital, Belfast, in each of the last two years.

Mr. Hanley: The Eastern health and social services board is responsible for the management of the artificial limb and appliance centre at Musgrave Park hospital. I am advised that in each of the last two years, the average waiting time for appointment/examination following amputation was one week. On average, fitting was then carried out within two to three weeks in a routine case and within six weeks in more complex cases.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many disabled patients in Northern Ireland require services provided at Musgrave Park hospital limb fitting centre, Belfast, annually.

Mr. Hanley: In Northern Ireland there are 1,700 patients with artificial limbs. About 1,200 of these patients attend annually.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated waiting period which disabled persons are likely to experience in future as a result of the decision to withdraw cover for absent doctors who normally deal with disabled patients.

Mr. Hanley: I am informed by the Eastern health and social services board that it has no knowledge of any such decision in relation to the services provided for disabled patients at Musgrave Park hospital.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he is taking to reduce the waiting lists for orthopaedic surgery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: During the past two years, the Department of Health and Social Services has made available an additional £467,000 for orthopaedic services in Northern Ireland in recognition of the need to improve the level of services and reduce waiting lists. I hope to announce shortly details of further additional resources for regional medical services developments this year, including orthopaedics. I believe that more can also be done to reduce waiting lists and waiting times through better management. Health and social services boards are currently responding to a report on better waiting list management by a group of clinicians known as CREST (clinical resource efficiency support team) which offers advice to the Department, boards and clinicians on ways to improve clinical efficiency. I am pleased to say that the numbers waiting for orthopaedic surgery fell from 4,939 in September 1988 to 3,456 in September 1990.

Royal Victoria Hospital

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the implications of the introduction of trust status in respect of the Royal Victoria hospital for job security, job tenure and health care.

Mr. Hanley: Should the Royal group of hospitals be successful in its application for HSS trust status, I would expect it like any other trust to provide better health care for patients. Staff transferring to trust employment retain their existing terms and conditions of service, but they and the trusts can negotiate changes at any time thereafter.

Youth Services

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the education budget has been allocated to youth services in each year from 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1991 in the South Eastern education and library board area.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

	Percentage of recurrent block grant allocated to youth service	Percentage of capital grant allocated to youth service
1985-86	3·85	3·88
1986-87	3·26	0·71
1987-88	3·44	1·74
1988-89	3·30	2·31
1989-90	3·26	2·07
1990-91	3·15	0·57

Armagh Four

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many representations he has received seeking a judicial review of the case of the Armagh Four; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend has, in addition to a petition and numerous letters from the public, received a total of 144 representations about the case. These have generally sought to encourage him to exercise his discretionary power to refer the case back to the Court of Appeal, which he would do only if some new evidence or consideration of substance is produced. It is claimed in a dossier presented to my right hon. Friend in January that such new evidence does exist. The document is, therefore, being examined in detail and inquiries are being conducted at present to see whether this claim can be substantiated. Only when these inquiries have been completed and the results fully considered will my right hon. Friend be in a position to decide whether or not he would be justified in referring the case back to the Court of Appeal.

Social Fund (South Down)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the budgetary allocation in respect of the social fund to each social security office in South Down in each year since 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1991, respectively.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is available in the Library.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people who made applications for social fund loans and grants who were in receipt of income support were refused at each social security office in South Down.

Mr. Hanley: Details for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 are shown in the table. The figures include a small number of instances where crisis loans have been claimed by people who are not receiving income support. It is not possible to identify these cases.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were refused a loan or a grant from the social fund in each of the social security offices in South Down because the budget was overspent, in each of the years since 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1991.

Mr. Hanley: Social fund budgets are allocated for the full year and managers must aim to ensure that they are not overspent. In order to achieve this and ensure that there is money available throughout the year, managers draw up monthly profiles based on estimated expenditure. They also issue guidance to their social fund officers on the level of priority of application that might be met. Details of the number of applications refused on grounds of insufficient priority for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 are shown in the table.

Child Benefit

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the full-year cost of raising child benefit in October to £9·55 a week for all children on the same basis as the answer given to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen), 30 April, Official Report, column 163.

Mr. Hanley: The cost for Northern Ireland over that of next October's actual benefit increases would be £29 million.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many families will benefit from the uprating in child benefit which will take effect from October.

Mr. Hanley: Child benefit is paid to 218,000 families in Northern Ireland, all of whom will benefit from the uprating in October 1991.

Muckamore College

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (a) how many teachers with initial training qualifications from Muckamore college were appointed to teach within the education service in Northern Ireland with a reduction of five increments of teacher's salary prior to 1 April 1987; (b) how many teachers in schools for mentally handicapped children, with initial training qualifications from Muckamore college, transferred to the education service, Northern Ireland, from health and social services on 1 April 1987 without facing any reduction in salary; (c) what are the reasons for the difference in treatment of these two categories of teachers; and (d) what is the estimated cost of an ex gratia payment to teachers trained at Muckamore college who voluntarily transferred to the education service prior to 1 April 1987, to provide equality of treatment of teachers in (a) above with teachers in (b) above for salary and pension purposes.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Pensioner Couples (Income Support)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of new basic pensioner couples who are no longer entitled to income support because of the recent rise in basic pension; and what is the average amount that their income is above the required level.

Mr. Hanley: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In general, the income of those ceasing to be entitled to income support from the week commencing 8 April 1991 would have increased by at least 8·1 per cent. However, there was an additional real increase in the basic pensioner premium of £1 for single pensioners and £1·50 for couples aged 60 to 74 years.

Housing Benefit (South Down)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are in receipt of full housing benefit and partial housing benefit at each of the social security offices in South Down.

Mr. Hanley: Information is not collected in the form requested. The available information is as follows:

District	Full/partial housing benefit
NIHE district office area (tenants)
Banbridge	2,072
Downpatrick	3,501
Kilkeel	1,040
Newry No. 1	2,822
Newry No. 2	2,571
District council area (owner-occupiers)
Banbridge	474
Downpatrick	917
Newry and Mourne	2,651

Pensions

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost in 1991-92 of raising the single pension by £5 a week and the married pension by £8 a week above current levels on the same basis as the answer given to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East, 30 April, Official Report, column 162.

Mr. Hanley: The additional cost of increasing the basic retirement pension in this way in Northern Ireland would be around £53 million, assuming a corresponding increase in income-related benefits. A reliable estimate is not available of the net cost with no such corresponding increase.

School Transport

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the total cost of providing early afternoon transport for primary 1 and primary 2 students in each education board area in each year since 1985;

(2) how many pupils availed themselves of early afternoon transport in each education board area, in each year since 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 14 May 1991]: Statistics of the actual cost and numbers of pupils for whom early afternoon transport was provided since 1985 are not maintained separately by the education and library boards, but are included in overall costs and numbers for home to school transport. The estimated costs and numbers for 1990-91 are as follows:

Education and Library Board	Number of pupils	Annual cost £
North-Eastern	350	24,000
South-Eastern	430	22,000
Southern	727	61,000

The Belfast and Western education and library boards do not provide early afternoon transport.

DEFENCE

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are taken to inform the local emergency services when a bomb-laden aircraft (a) takes off or (b) lands at Royal Air Force Finningley.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Advance notification of operations is not given to civil agencies for operational security reasons.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date a bomb-laden aircraft last (a) took off and (b) landed at Royal Air Force Finningley.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Available records cover the last seven years, during which time no such aircraft took off or landed at RAF Finningley.

The Gulf (Mitla Ridge)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the RAF participated in the attack on Mitla ridge in the final day of the Gulf war.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall) on 25 March, at column 301.

Memoranda of Understanding

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the memorandum of understanding between the United Kingdom and Canadian Governments on the use of training facilities in Canada and the use of British troops; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the original memorandum of understanding between Her Majesty's Government and the Canadian Government that governs the use of the Suffield range, Canada, by United Kingdom forces and any amendments that have been made to the memorandum of understanding.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The training of the Brtitish armed forces in Canada is governed by an exchange of notes between the two Governments. These notes were exchanged on 26 November 1979, and in accordance with usual practice published in 1980 as Cmnd. 7894.

Training Injuries

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is satisfied with the liaison between his Department and the Department of Social Security when dealing with cases such as that of No. 24754102 Lance Corporal J. Ray, Grenadier Guards, who sustained serious injuries during training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am satisfied with the liaison between the MOD and the DSS, which is kept under review.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the full report of the board of inquiry instituted to investigate the circumstances that led to No. 24754102 Lance Corporal J. Ray, Grenadier Guards, and two others sustaining injuries as a result of an explosion on the Suffield training area, Canada on 7 July 1989 or as much as will illuminate the unclassified summary of investigations dated 19 February 1991 in respect of whether Lance Corporal J. Ray or others were advised as to the possibility of buried unexploded munitions; and what precautions they were advised to take.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Board of inquiry reports are internal Ministry of Defence documents produced to enable the appropriate authorities to ascertain the cause of an accident or incident and to take steps to prevent its recurrence. As such they are confidential to the Department. A summary of the board of inquiry report into the tragic accident which occurred on the Suffield range on 7 July 1989 has been sent to solicitors acting for Lance Corporal John Ray. This summary includes the comment of the board of inquiry that the three soldiers were adequately briefed for the task they were undertaking when the accident occurred.

Radiation

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 1 May, Official Report, column 256, (1) if he will now provide a breakdown for (a) Rosyth dockyard, (b) Devonport dockyard, (c) Aldermaston Atomic Weapons Establishment, (d) Coulport RNAD and (e) the Faslane submarine base, of individual radiation dose exposures for workers in the bands (i) 0 to 10, (ii) 10 to 15, (iii) 15 to 20, (iv) 20 to 30, (v) 30 to 40 and (vi) greater than 40 mSv for the year 1990;

(2) if he will give a breakdown for (a) HMS Neptune and (b) HMS Defiance of individual radiation dose exposures for individuals in the bands (i) 0 to 10, (ii) 10 to 15, (iii) 15 to 20, (iv) 20 to 30, (v) 30 to 40 and (vi) greater than 40 mSv for the year 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I am unable as yet to add to the information set out in my letter to the hon. Member following my answer of 1 May at column 256. Final dose figures for the dockyards and naval bases will be produced at the end of May, but I regret that Aldermaston data are now unlikely to be complete until the end of June.

Battle Tanks

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's estimate of the present cost of scrapping a main battle tank.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department would expect to incur no net cost in disposing of a main battle tank for scrap.

Output

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage is defence output of the total output of the (i) south of England and (ii) the north of England;

(2) what percentage is defence output of the total output of (i) Wales and (ii) Scotland.

Mr. Alan Clark: Government statistics do not identify "defence output" as such.

Civilian Jobs

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's estimate of the number of civilian jobs in the United Kingdom which are dependent upon defence expenditure.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the right hon. Member to tables 4.1 and 6.8 of volume 2 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990".

Research and Development

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Her Majesty's Government's defence budget is spent on research and development.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Figures for the defence budget and defence research and development are published in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates". In 1990-91 the percentage was 11·6 per cent.

Electronic Systems

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Her Majesty's Government's expenditure on defence is spent on electronic systems.

Mr. Alan Clark: Government estimates exist only in respect of MOD expenditure placed with the electronics industry in the United Kingdom. I refer the hon. Member to table 2.5 in volume 2 of the 1990 "Statement on the Defence Estimates".

Degaussing Range, Barons Point

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have been held with the representatives of local fishermen concerning the establishment of a degaussing range, for use by Trident submarines, near Kilcreggan at Barons point; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The degaussing range at Barons point was selected after a major study of possible locations in the Upper Clyde and proved to be the only site to meet all the required parameters.

The Clyde Fishermen's Association (CFA) was not consulted during the early discussions in 1989 to consider the proposals to lay a degaussing range at Barons point. However, it is now our practice to consult the CFA on matters affecting fishing in the Clyde.

Training Flights

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the regulations governing the carriage of live ammunition by aircraft in training flights over Britain are identical for British and American aircraft.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: In general the regulations governing the carriage of live ammunition by British and American aircraft on training flights over Britain are comparable, although they take account of differences in aircraft types and roles, and weapons carried.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy on the carriage of nuclear weapons on combat aircraft over the United Kingdom in peacetime.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is long-standing practice neither to confirm nor deny the presence of nuclear weapons in specific instances.

Radiation Monitoring

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why military police refused access to the Powys emergency services to undertake radiation monitoring at the site of the crash of a US aircraft at Capel-y-ftin in February 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Under regulations governing the guarding of crashed military aircraft in the United Kingdom, access to a crash site is permitted only to specifically authorised personnel.

Aldermaston

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of (a) the replacement and (b) installation costs of an alternative pipework system to the zone one ductwork plant area A90.1 in the building complex A90 at Aldermaston, is attributable to an ambiguous specification; what percentage is attributable to bad workmanship in (i) manufacture or (ii) installation; and what steps he is taking to recover any costs from the contractor.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Details of the A90 ductwork problems were given in evidence by my Department to the Select Committee on Defence and published in the reports "The progress of the Trident Programme" 5th of Session 1988-89 and 9th of Session 1989-90 (HC374 and HC237). All necessary remedial work has been completed and a thorough investigation by the appropriate authorities has failed to produce any evidence to support action for recovery of any costs from the contractor.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether recent leaks of gases/solutions from prefabricated pipework in building A90/A91 at Aldermaston was due to the pipework (a) not complying with the contract specification, (b) not being capable of withstanding the waste material passing through and (c) not being inspected before installation; whether the safety inspectorate approved the installation; and what steps are being taken to ensure that faulty pipework does not create an unsafe workplace for the operators.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There has been no leak of radioactive material from building A90 or A91; neither building is yet in use. During commissioning tests using simulated liquid waste corrosion has been discovered in pipework which is wholly contained within building A91. A detailed technical investigation is now in progress to discover the cause and extent of the problem. The installation will not be brought into use until we are assured of its safe operation.

Equipment Exhibitions

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has held since November 1990 with (a) Members of Parliament and (b) others concerning the policy of not releasing lists of countries invited to or attending defence equipment exhibitions.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have discussed this subject with representatives of the Campaign Against the Arms Trade at a meeting attended by some hon. Members.

Gulf War

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what discrimination was exercised by coalition air forces in their attacks on Iraqi conventional power stations;

(2) what proportion of Iraqi conventional power stations were bombed by coalition air forces during the Gulf war;

(3) what was Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the bombing of Iraqi conventional power stations during the Gulf war.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Coalition forces attacked Iraqi power stations in order to disrupt Iraq's military command control and communications, and other military capabilities such as air defence radars. These attacks were carefully planned to minimise the risk of causing civilian casualties and collateral damage. It is believed that over half Iraq's major power stations were damaged by coalition forces during the Gulf conflict.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department defines (a) a sub-strategic nuclear weapon and (b) a tactical nuclear weapon.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The MOD would understand both terms to refer to those weapons which provide the link between conventional forces and strategic nuclear forces in the spectrum of deterrence.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the types of currently deployed NATO land-based short-range nuclear weapons that have an operational service life that extends beyond the mid-1990s.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom's ground-launched short-range nuclear systems currently comprise Lance and nuclear-capable artillery. Only the artillery (capable of firing nuclear warheads supplied by the United States) will have an operational life that extends beyond the mid-1990s. Questions relating to the nuclear systems of our NATO allies are a matter for their Governments.

Missiles

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will outline his Department's policy towards restricting the European deployment of NATO tactical air-to-surface missiles to time of crisis only;

(2) what decisions have been taken regarding NATO deployment plans for tactical air-to-surface missiles;

(3) what are the deployment implications for land-based short-range nuclear weapons of the deployment of tactical air-to-surface missiles by NATO.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We fully support the alliance's policy of keeping nuclear forces up to date where necessary and based in Europe in peacetime. But no decisions have been taken on NATO deployment in tactical air-to-surface missiles. As for currently deployed systems, the London declaration identifies a significantly reduced role for sub-strategic systems of the shortest range, and looks forward to new negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on the reduction of short-range nuclear forces.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a decision will be taken on the United Kingdom tactical air-to-surface missiles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Consideration of replacement systems for our WE 177 free-fall bombs is continuing. The House will be informed as soon as a decision is taken.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the JP-233 bomb will complete its effective in-service life.

(2) what is his Department's policy towards the replacement of the JP-233 bomb.

Mr. Alan Clark: We expect the JP-233 bomb to remain in service until well after the turn of the century. We will consider its replacement at the appropriate time as part of the Department's normal equipment planning process.

Combat Training

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy towards the balance between low and medium-level combat training conducted by the RAF, in light of the experience of the Gulf war.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: We are still considering the outcome of the air campaign in the Gulf and the conclusions to be drawn from it.

Armament Sites

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hours of inspection are allowed under existing disarmament treaty arrangements for (a) British and American observers to visit Soviet armament sites and (b) Soviet observers to visit British and American armament sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom has incurred rights and duties of inspection of military sites under two main agreements to which it is a signatory: the Vienna document 1990 on confidence and security-building measures in Europe, and the CFE treaty, which has not yet been ratified.

Section VIII of the Vienna document sets out compliance and verification provisions, under which the United Kingdom and Soviet Union are obliged to accept evaluation visits. Each such visit must take place within a single working day and last no more than 12 hours.

When ratified, the inspection protocol of the CFE treaty will allow inspection teams of participating states to spend up to 48 hours at sites notified as containing equipment limited by the treaty. There will also be provision for challenge inspections which may last up to 24 hours.

Although the United Kingdom is not a party to the INF treaty, the Soviet Union has the right to conduct inspections of sites within the United Kingdom to verify the elimination of US missiles. Procedures are set out fully in the associated protocol on inspections. For base-line, close-out and short-notice inspections, inspectors may spend up to 24 hours at a facility they are inspecting; this may be extended by up to a further eight hours if the inspected site agrees. For elimination inspections, because of the number of missiles to be eliminated, there is no specified time limit for each inspection.

The equivalent rights and duties of the United States Government under agreements to which it is a party are a matter for the US Government.

Civil Servants

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what pre-retirement courses are currently offered to civil servants in the Gosport and Portsmouth area; and if there are plans to change the existing arrangements.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Two pre-retirement courses are run by the Ministry of Defence in the Portsmouth area each year; there are no current plans to change this. In addition, one will be held in the Gosport area in the near future. Anyone who is unable to attend one of these courses may be included in a course held at another location.

Trident

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimate of the cost of constructing (a) four Trident submarines and (b) three Trident submarines over the next five-year period from the start of the financial year; and if he will give revenue running costs where applicable.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Government remain committed to a four-boat Trident submarine force. Whilst it is not our practice to provide detailed forecasts of project expenditure, I can confirm that the estimated cost of constructing the four Trident submarines over the next five years is about £1,400 million.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for which the contract was carried out.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Ministry of Defence spent some £3·94 million in the financial year 1990-91 on management consultancy contracts placed centrally. Details are listed. Computer consultancy contracts form, in many cases, part of wider computer procurement and support contracts, but it is estimated that consultancy contracts to a value of £14·34 million were placed in 1990-91. Details of individual contracts could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1990-91 the MOD invested some £12 million in specific energy-saving measures throughout the defence estate. Additional sums which are incorporated as part of major general works programmes are not separately identifiable. Figures for earlier years are not readily available. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Staff devoted wholly or mainly to energy management in the Ministry of Defence represented about 15 person-years of effort in 1990-91. A much larger number of personnel were employed as energy wardens at units and establishments on a part-time basis. The proportion of energy wardens' time devoted to energy management is not separately recorded.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence has carried out 346 energy audits over the last five years. It is not practicable to summarise the findings of this number of audits without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. Expenditure on consumption of non-operational fuel on the defence estate in 1989-90, the latest available, was as follows:

Electricity	159,989
Gas	39,868
Solid fuel	9,576
Liquid fuel	42,854

For details of expenditure in earlier years and other available information I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 5 June 1990 columns 428-29.

Nuclear Installations, Iraq

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 164, to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn), what are the results of the inspections of Iraq's nuclear facilities with regard to radioactive contamination.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The International Atomic Energy Agency has not yet made public the detailed findings of its mid-May inspection of the Tuwaitha reactor sites.

Residential Property

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of which RAF air stations other than RAF Leeming his Department has acquired dwellings with the agreement of their owners.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the MOD's noise compensation policy was reviewed in 1985, dwellings have been acquired with the consent of the owners in the vicinity of the following military airfields where the qualifying criteria were met:

RAF Stornoway
RAF Leeming
RAF Upper Heyford
RAF Fairford
RNAS Yeovilton

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of which RAF air stations other than RAF Leeming his Department has paid injurious affection compensation to nearby home owners on account of depreciation in value caused by noise disturbance.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the MOD's noise compensation policy was reviewed in 1985, injurious affection compensation has been paid to home owners living in the vicinity of the following military airfields where the qualifying criteria were met:

RAF Upper Heyford
RAF Leuchars
RAF Cottesmore

RAF Coningsby
RAF Marsham
RAF Wattisham
RAF Honington
RAF Leeming
RNAS Yeovilton

Medical Services, Kuwait

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what checks are now kept of the British Army medical team working unit at the Ahmadi hospital in Kuwait; what is their turnover rate; and what plans he has for the monitoring of health of those in the Royal Army Medical Corps and Royal Engineers working in the Ahmadi area, or who have worked in the Ahmadi area, over the last 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Full medical cover is provided for all United Kingdom military personnel in Kuwait, including checks on lung function for those in the area of the fires. Medical personnel will return to the United Kingdom with remaining British units. Periodic medical checks will continue to be conducted on service personnel as a matter of routine.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library all the public statements of Colonel Brooke of the Royal Engineers on the subject of service men's health in Kuwait.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the course of his duties Lt. Col. Brooke has given considerable public advice on the hazards of unexploded ordnance in Kuwait and has also been interviewed on a number of occasions about the work of the Royal Engineers there. Transcripts are not available as the MOD does not require detailed records of all public statements made by members of the armed forces.

The Gulf (Pollution)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusions he has formed from the air samples collected by the RAF Hercules on 28 March about the deviation from the norm of radiation of the sun.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: This is a matter for the Meteorological Office under its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive of the Meteorological Office, Dr. J. T. Houghton, to reply direct to the hon. Member.

NATO and WTO

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers, seamen and airmen are currently under arms in NATO and the Warsaw Treaty Organisation, respectively.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, West (Mr. Douglas) on 8 May 1991, Official Report, column 506.

Ordnance Services, Kuwait

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the work of Royal Ordnance plc and 21 Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squadron, Royal Engineers, in Kuwait.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not for the Ministry of Defence to comment on the work of a private company. As for 21 Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squadron, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 13 May (Official Report, column 58).

The Gulf

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for deployments of British forces in the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Further to my right hon. Friend's statement of 27 March at column 482, it has been decided to redeploy the battle group currently conducting exercises in Kuwait. The major part of the battle group, which comprises 2 Royal Anglian and supporting elements, will move to Al Jubayl. Two companies of 2 Royal Anglian will then relieve 1 Kings Own Scottish Borderers, who have been employed on security duties in support of the logistic support group. 1 Kings Own Scottish Borderers will return to the United Kingdom in the middle of June.

The logistic support group is planned to withdraw at the end of July, and 2 Royal Anglian will return at the same time. Until then, those elements of 2 Royal Anglian not providing security at Al Jubayl will remain in Kuwait to provide further reassurance to the Kuwaitis. We are also discussing with the Kuwaiti Government our defence relationship in the longer term, in particular what assistance the UUnited Kingdom could provide in the rebuilding of the Kuwaiti armed forces.

The squadron of GR1 Tornados stationed in Bahrain has now returned to RAF Bruggen in Germany. The Armilla patrol continues to provide a frigate/destroyer presence in the region; and United Kingdom mine counter-measures vessels are carrying out mine clearance off the coast of Kuwait as part of a multinational mine clearance force.

Wind Tunnels

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) to what extent the wind tunnels at Thurleigh, Bedfordshire, and the motion simulator sites have been relegated to the Defence Research Agency; and to what extent he has reserved authority over these facilities;

(2) to what extent the Bedford airfield has been relegated to the Defence Research Agency; and to what extent he has reserved authority over the site.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 23 May 1991]: Ownership of all land occupied by the Defence Research Agency (DRA), including Bedford airfield, the wind tunnel site at Thurleigh, and the motion simulator site, remains vested with the Secretary of State for Defence in his capacity as owner of the DRA. Decisions as to the future of these, and other DRA sites, are a matter for the Secretary of State in consultation with the chief executive of the DRA.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each year since 1979-80, and for 1991 to date, the number of low-flying sorties that have taken place by aircraft from Royal Air Force Finningley; and what number occured after dusk.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 23 May 1991]: Central records are not held in a form which would enable the information requested to be provided. However, no low-flying sorties are flown out of RAF Finningley after dusk.

TRANSPORT

Nuclear Material

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to ensure that the arrangements for a police escort for the road transportation of nuclear products are rigorously enforced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Movements of radioactive materials by road must comply with the Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Great Britain) Regulations 1974 and Amendment Regulations 1985.

There is no requirement in these regulations for police escorts to accompany the road transport of radioactive materials.

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many journeys involving the transport of nuclear waste there were on the road system in Northumberland in the years 1988, 1989, 1990, and the first three months in the current year;

(2) how many times nuclear waste has been transported along the A1 between British Nuclear Fuels, Sellafield, Cumbria, and Dounreay, Scotland; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many times nuclear waste has been transported along the A69 between British Nuclear Fuels, Sellafield, Cumbria, and Dounreay, Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My Department does not collect data of the kind requested.

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the numbers and dates of road accidents on the A69 involving the transportation of nuclear waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: There have been no accidents reportable under the Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Great Britain) Regulations 1974 involving vehicles carrying radioactive materials, but I am aware of a minor road traffic accident at Hexham on 19 April this year to a vehicle carrying miscellaneous items which included a package of low-level nuclear waste. This did not cause any damage to the package or its contents.

Motorways

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects that section of the M1 which passes through Northamptonshire and Bedfordshire to be cleared of litter.

Mr. Chope: Litter clearance is carried out continuously on this section of motorway, with daily removal of large individual items of debris.

Rail Services (Privatisation)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether the Government now intend to make subsidies available to any InterCity services which might otherwise be jeopardised as a result of impending privatisation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps he intends taking in the run-up to privatisation of the InterCity services of British Rail; if he will ensure that these branches of the intercity network which do not make a profit, are not run down by British Rail, or transferred to provincial services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No decision has yet been taken on the structure of a privatised British Rail. Detailed questions about transfers of services between parts of BR, or about the subsidy regime for particular services, must await that decision.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with his Irish counterparts concerning the implications for rail services between London and Holyhead arising from the Government's plans to privatise railway services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no discussions about the implications of privatisation for London-Holyhead rail services. He has had recent correspondence with his Irish counterpart about the Crewe-Holyhead line, in the context of channel tunnel services and the European Commission's proposals for a high-speed rail network.

Freight Facilities Grant Scheme

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the main changes he intends to make to the freight facilities grant scheme: and when the changes will come into operation.

Mr. Freeman: With the agreement of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales, the following changes will be made:

(i) a tripling in the price which the Government are proposing to pay for environmental benefits. The ceiling for grant is to be increased to £1 per lorry-sensitive mile from the current level of 34p, and will be revalued for inflation in future years;

(ii) virtually all single-carriageway roads will be considered environmentally-sensitive, rather than the current narrower definition of unclassified, urban; and scenic roads;

(iii) most urban dual carriageway journeys will count for grant;

(iv) urban roads will be given a 50 per cent. higher weighting than other sensitive roads;

(v) the grant rules will be revised to allow for the eligibility in principle of inter-modal systems;

(vi) schemes of exceptional environmental benefit will no longer be restricted to a maximum rate of grant of 60 per cent;

(vii) in appraising a grant application, the stream of future environmental benefits will be calculated on a discounted basis, so that they are expressed in the same way as costs, which are currently expressed on that basis;

(viii) the period of appraisal will remain generally at 10 years, but with flexibility to apply a lesser or greater period if appropriate; and to consider substitute flows of traffic as meeting the grant conditions over the life of the project where appropriate;

(ix) 5 per cent. of grant payable may be retained until monitoring returns showing that a scheme is operating satisfactorily;

(x) the grant rules will be amended to permit the Department(s) to take a charge on assets in particular circumstances;

(xi) greater publicity will be given to the scheme.

The new criteria on payment of grant will be introduced immediately.

Shipowners

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has made and what reports he has published concerning the comparative costs borne by United Kingdom shipowners for comparable standards of manning and safety under flags of convenience and flags of Commonwealth states; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The Department of Transport has, from time to time, commissioned information on crew cost comparisons, from ship managers and consultants, in order to help inform policy. Such information has not generally been published. The hon. Member may, however, be aware that the report of the joint working party on British shipping, published last year, included the attached table of case-specific figures, supplied by the General Council of British Shipping.

Appendix 3.1 Some Comparative Crew-cost Options (30,000 dwt. Bulk Carrier)—1990 (£)

	OPTION A —UK officers —UK ratings (all UK rates)	OPTION B —UK officers (offshore rates) —Filipino ratings (ITF approved rates)	OPTION C —4 UK key officers (offshore rates) —6 Indian officers —Filipino ratings (all ITF approved rates)	OPTION D —4 UK key officers (offshore rates) —6 Indian officers (ITF approved rates) —Hong Kong/China ratings (HK/PRC rates)	OPTION E —Filipino officers —Filipino ratings (all ITF approved rates)	OPTION F —Indian officers —Indian ratings (all ITF approved rates)
Officers wages and leave	314,064	282,435	217,589	217,589	147,340	154,584
Ratings wages and leave including overtime	277,128	95,425	95,425	81,803	95,425	120,654
Crew travel	59,400	43,200	39,600	40,650	29,700	46,200
Manning expenses	4,770	6,083	7,000	8,922	7,376	7,635
Annual crew cost	655,362	427,123	359,614	348,964	279,841	329,073
Daily crew cost	1,796	1,171	986	956	767	902

Notes:
Total crew complement: 22 = 10 officers + 12 ratings.
Tours of duty: British—4 months.
Asian/Eastern—8 months.
Leave: British (United Kingdom rates)—12 days per month.
British (Offshore)—10 days per month.
Asian/Eastern—6 days per month.
Overtime: assumes mean of 100 hours per month.
Salaries paid in: British—£.
Others—US$ (at 1·70 = £1).

The Gulf

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his marine pollution control unit has taken to monitor (a) the DESMI Engineering contract for heavy duty skimmers, (b) the Alba International contract in relation to the clean-up of Musallamiyah bay and (c) the Alba International contract for the clean-up of the coastline of Karan island.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 3 June 1991]: In respect of the Department of the Environment contract with DESMI Engineering, the marine pollution control unit acting on behalf of DOE, checked that the heavy duty oil skimmers were in full working order prior to their despatch to Bahrain.

As advised in my reply of 15 April at column 1, both of the contracts with Alba International were between that company and the International Maritime Organisation, which advises that the work has been completed satisfactorily. The MPCU had no monitoring role.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funds the United Kingdom gives to the International Maritime Organisation Gulf fund.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The Departments of Transport and of the Environment have each made a single £500,000 contribution to the International Maritime Organisation's Gulf oil pollution disaster fund.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will make a statement about the review of the financial conditions for legal aid which were announced in November 1990.

The Solicitor-General: The Lord Chancellor's Department is publishing a consultation paper today canvassing the options for funding civil legal aid with particular reference to those people who are currently not eligible for legal aid. Copies of the paper have been laid in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament. The consultation period will run until the end of October and no decisions will be taken before then. A separate consultation paper will shortly be issued in Scotland to take account of the different position there.

Further stages of the review will cover legal aid in criminal and matrimonial cases and the green form advice and assistance scheme. Separate consultation papers will be issued for these stages.

THE ARTS

Cash Limits

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give details of any proposed changes to the cash and running costs limits for his Department's votes in 1991-92.

Mr. Renton: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary summer supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XII, vote 4, is to be increased by £106,000 from £2,176,000 to £2,282,000. Additional provision is being transferred to meet the costs of certain services provided by the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Department of the Environment (Property Holdings). There is no net effect on the planning total.

The running costs limit for the Office of Arts and Libraries will be increased by £106,000 from £2,136,000 to £2,242,000.

Grants (Scotland)

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the amount of grant paid to the Scottish national orchestra, Scottish chamber orchestra, Scottish Baroque ensemble, Scottish Opera and Scottish Ballet for each of the financial years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and projected for the year 1991-92.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The information requested is as follows:—

1988-89	1,444,000	636,350	91,250	3,260,000	1,370,000
1989-90	1,473,000	676,000	91,800	3,357,000	1,407,000
1990-91	1,639,700	709,000	99,500	3,669,000	1,525,000
1991-92	1,735,000	755,000	107,000	3,935,000	1,640,869

Some additional moneys have yet to be allocated in 1991-92 by the Scottish Arts Council from the enhancement fund and for touring; the companies above will be among the recipients of these funds.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the annual amount of grants to arts organisations and events in the cities of Glasgow, Aberdeen, Dundee and Edinburgh for the financial years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and projected for the year 1991-92.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Scottish Arts Council grants to client organisations are as follows. Information relating to local authority grants is not readily available.

	1988-89 £	1989-90 £	1990-91 £	1991-92 £
Aberdeen	147,557	160,543	135,287	180,.000
Dundee	332,809	371,520	416,616	399,285
Edinburgh	2,762,526	2,857,636	3,176,717	3,101,000
Glasgow	7,569,290	7,894,700	8,662,421	9,119,569

Notes:

(i) The figures above include grants to the three national companies based in Glasgow and the one national company based in Edinburgh. These companies are required, as a condition of grant, to tour throughout Scotland.

(ii) They also include other touring companies, and galleries producing touring exhibitions, that are predominantly based in Glasgow and Edinburgh.

(iii) Figures for 1991-92 are based on budget plans and exclude funds yet to be allocated.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: No energy audits have been carried out in my Department, but surveys to improve energy efficiency have been, and are being, undertaken.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his office in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Investment to improve energy efficiency has been the responsibility of the Property Services Agency and the major occupying Departments within the two buildings in which my Department is located. Staff are encouraged, however, to follow simple but effective no-cost measures to help reduce energy consumption.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The Office of Arts and Libraries has no dedicated energy managers but is advised in such matters by the Cabinet Office.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Woolwich Case

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what grounds the Inland Revenue lost the Woolwich case in the High Court;

(2) how many judges in (a) the High Court, (b) the Court of Appeal and (c) the House of Lords did not agree with the original Inland Revenue contention that there was no double taxation in the Woolwich case;

(3) on what grounds the Inland Revenue won the Woolwich case in the Court of Appeal.

Mr. Maples: The High Court held that the Building Societies Regulations 1986 went beyond the scope of the enabling powers, to the extent that they sought to bring into account payments made by building societies in transitional periods to 6 April 1986. The Court of Appeal reversed that decision.

The House of Lords dismissed by a majority of four to one the Woolwich's principal argument in its appeal against the Court of Appeal's decision and confirmed that the enabling legislation did authorise the Inland Revenue to made regulations covering transitional periods to 6 April 1986. But the Lords held unanimously that there was no power to apply 1985-86 tax rates to payments in the transitional periods.

Over the course of the litigation seven judges found that the enabling legislation authorised the Revenue to make regulations bringing into charge payments of interest in transitional periods to 6 April 1986; two found that it did not.

Building Societies

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate in total how much the Inland Revenue received from building societies in 1985-86 and 1986-87; and how much will not be repaid as a consequence of clause 50 of the Finance Bill being approved by the House.

Mr. Maples: Receipts of income tax and corporation tax from building societies were £3,025 million in 1985-86 and £3,067 million in 1986-87. An estimated £130 million of 1986-87 receipts would be repaid if clause 50 was not approved; receipts of about £20 million in later years would also be repaid, together with accumulated interest amounting to about £100 million at the beginning of this financial year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many building societies, on or after 25 October 1990, asked for return of the tax which was in dispute; and how many received a written acknowledgement before the Budget speech in 1991.

Mr. Maples: It would not be appropriate to provide information about the tax affairs of individual taxpayers.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what Treasury or Inland Revenue estimates of extra or accelerated payment of tax by building societies from (a) the changed tax arrangements and (b) the transitional arrangements were published in (i) 1985 and (ii) 1986.

Mr. Maples: The 1985-86 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" showed the effect of the building society measures on Exchequer revenue in 1985-86 to be nil and estimated the effect on tax liabilities for the first full year to be a reduction of £20 million in societies' liability to corporation tax.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a complete collection of Treasury press notices, ministerial speeches and pronouncements, and debates on the Floor of the House and in Committee on the change in taxation payments by building societies.

Mr. Maples: I have placed a collection of this information in the Library.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount spent by the Central Office of Information in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Central Office of Information in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment.

Mr. Maples: This question falls within the scope of the policy announced in Cm. 1263: arrangements have therefore been made for the chief executive of the Central Office of Information to respond direct. Copies of the letter will be placed in the House Library and with the Public Information Office.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount spent by Her Majesty's Treasury in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by Her Majesty's Treasury in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Mr. Maples: The expenditure in the financial year 1990-91 is estimated to be some £5,902,000, which includes some £5,245,600 by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency. Figures include the cost of development studies, which in turn include the cost of associated hardware and software; the later items are not separately identifiable.

The following management and computer consultancy contracts were awarded by Her Majesty's Treasury in the financial year 1990-91.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount spent by the Royal Mint in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Royal Mint in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment.

Mr. Maples: This question falls within the scope of the policy announced in Cm. 1263: arrangements have therefore been made for the deputy master and chief executive of the Royal Mint to respond direct. Copies of the letter will be placed in the House Library and with the Public Information Office.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount spent by HMSO in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by HMSO in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment.

Mr. Maples: This question falls within the scope of the policy announced in Cm. 1263: arrangements have therefore been made for the chief executive of HMSO to reply direct. Copies of the letter will be placed in the House Library and with the Public Information Office.

Business Premises (South-East Counties)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total value of (a) small, (b) large and (c) all business premises in each south-eastern county (i) before and (ii) after the recent revaluation which coincided with the introduction of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Maude: The information is as follows:

£ million

	Small properties		Large properties		All properties
County	1973 Rateable Value	1990 Rateable Value	1973 Rateable Value	1990 Rateable Value	1973 Rateable Value	1990 Rateable Value
Bedfordshire	5	42	38	301	42	343
Berkshire	4	46	66	639	70	685
Buckinghamshire	4	44	45	427	49	471
East Sussex	7	71	27	247	34	317
Essex	13	120	80	717	92	837
Hampshire	11	113	80	695	91	808

London Boroughs and City of London	112	1,031	1,138	8,983	1,250	10,014

The table gives rateable values before and after revaluation for all properties in the rating lists as at 1 April 1990. Small properties are taken to be those with a 1990 rateable value below £15,000 in London, and below £10,000 elsewhere.

CIVIL SERVICE

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what was the total amount spent by the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the OMCS in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Mr. Renton: The OMCS spent £747,500 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases, in 1990-91. The management and computer consultancy contracts let by the OMCS during 1990-91 are as follows:

Firm and Assignment

Coopers and Lybrand—Informing decisions on advising Departments and Agencies about the evaluation of Agencies' performance.

Computer Answers Ltd.—Design and write database system.

Daton Systems Ltd.—Design and write database system.

DBI Associates—Feasibility study for replacement computer system.

KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock—Evaluation of senior staff training and development programme.

KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock—Evaluation of implementation of Management Charter Initiative guidelines.

Linbert Spencer—Development of equal opportunity recruitment guidance pack.

Nottingham Professional Development Services—Production of an access training manual and other training materials.

Oracle Corporation UK Ltd.—Programming support in development of recruitment processing system.

Pearn Kandola Downs—Development of equal opportunity learning programme and training materials.

Praxis Systems—Assistance in the analysis, design and testing of software and production of user manual.

Psytech Ltd.—Further development of computerised system to support use of psychometric testing in recruitment schemes.

Raindrop Data Systems Ltd.—Design and write database system.

Taylor Stewart Associates—Development of training material on managing people from diverse groups.

Trident Computer Services—Design and write database system.

The only consultancy contract let by an executive agency was that with DBI Associates, let by the occupational health service.

HEALTH

Cigarette Advertising

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the statutory provisions relating to the EC's powers concerning cigarette advertising.

Mr. Dorrell: The Commission is proposing a new draft directive on tobacco advertising, the text of which is not yet available. Previous drafts have been based on article 100A of the treaty establishing the European Economic Community.

Nurses' Pay

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total level of expenditure on pay for nurses, in cash and constant prices, in each year since 1973.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested for the financial years since NHS reorganisation on 1 April 1974 is shown in the table.

The level of expenditure in 1989-90 reflects the transfer of many senior nurse managers from the nursing and midwifery pay structure to general senior management pay categories, a planned reduction in the overall number of students in training and other factors.

NHS expenditure on salaries and wages—nursing and midwifery staff

	Total salaries and wages costs
	£000 (cash)	£000 (at 1989-90 prices)

1989-90	5,028,195	5,028,195

Annual accounts of regional and disrict health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals. (Predecessor authorities for the years prior to 1982-83).

NOTES TO THE TABLE

1. The figures are gross pay costs including employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions. Expenditure on non-NHS (agency, etc.) staff is also included.
2. The figures for earlier years have been expressed at 1989-90 prices by the use of Gross Domestic Product deflators.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the names of those people nominated to be chairs of second-wave NHS trusts.

Mr. Waldegrave: An announcement of the names of the chairmen of second-wave NHS trusts will be made after the trusts have been formally established.

Intestinal and Stomach Cancer

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence his Department has on links between diet and the incidence of intestinal and stomach cancer, with particular reference to the consumption of red meat.

Mr. Dorrell: Comparisons of diet and the incidence of intestinal cancer in different groups have prompted hypotheses of a possible increase in risk from the consumption of red meat or its fat content, but the evidence is inconclusive.

The Department is not aware of any suggested link between the consumption of red meat and an increased risk of stomach cancer.

Vaccines

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported reactions there have been to vaccines in the last year for which figures are available; which vaccines were reported; what were the reactions; and whether any of these resulted in permanent disabilities.

Mr. Dorrell: There were 748 reports of suspected adverse reactions to vaccines in 1990; some of these reports may have featured more than one vaccine and/or more than one reaction. The report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily imply a causal relationship.

The following vaccines were involved:—

Anthrax
BCG
Diphtheria
Hepatitis B
Influenza Measles
Measles/mumps/rubella
Polio
Rubella
Tetanus
Typhoid
Whooping cough
Yellow fever

The reactions reported fell into the following categories:—

Application site disorders
Arrythmias
Auditory and vestibular
Autonomic nervous system
Bleeding and clotting disorders
Cardiovascular disorders
Central nervous system
Collagen disorders
Endocrine disorders
Fetal disorders
Gastro-intestinal disorders
General disorders
Hepatic disorders
Intra-cardiac disorders
Male reproductive disorders
Metabolic and Nutritional Muscular Skeletal disorders
Other special senses
Peripheral vascular disorders
Psychiatric disorders
Resistance mechanism
Respiratory disorders
Skin and appendages
Urinary disorders
Visual disorders
White blood cell disorders

A number of the reports indicated that, at the time of reporting, the patient had not yet recovered. A number of these patients have subsequently recovered.

Cash Limits

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any changes will be made to the cash limits and running cost limits for his Department in 1991-92.

Mr. Waldegrave: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 1 (hospital, community health, family health services (part) and related services, England) will be increased by £162,196,000 from £16,247,836,000 to £16,410,032,000. This increase allows for an additional £157,719,000 to help provide, from 1 April 1991, for the pay awards recommended in the 1991 reports of the review bodies for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine, and on doctors' and dentists' remuneration, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 31 January 1991 and for a transfer of £4,758,000 from class XI, votes 2 (Department of Education and Science, higher and further education) and 3 (Department of Education and Science, student awards, loans and compensation payments) in respect of public sector higher education. These increases are partially offset by transfers of £191,000 to class XVI, vote 8 (hospital and community health services, family practitioner services (part) and other health services, Wales) in respect of occupational therapy training and £90,000 to class XIII, vote 3 (see below) in respect of a child health care initiative.

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 3 (Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England) will be increased by £43,118,000 from £683,351,000 to £726,469,000. The increase provides for £1,281,000 to meet, from 1 April 1991, the review body recommendations mentioned above; for £42,000,000 for grants to haemophiliacs infected with HIV; for a net transfer of £847,000 from class XIV, vote 4 (Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services) following a reapportionment of costs between the two Departments; for transfers of £90,000 from class XIII, vote 1 (see above) in respect of a child health care initiative and £14,000 from class IV, vote 2 (Department of Trade and Industry, support for industry, international trade, statutory and regulatory work, consumer protection and administration) in respect of research undertaken by the laboratory of the Government chemist and the national physical laboratory. The increases are partially offset by a transfer of £1,114,000 to class XI, vote 2 (Department of Education and Science, higher and further education) in respect of social work training. The Department's running cost limit is decreased by £733,000 from £253,625,000 to £252,892,000.

The increases have been charged to the reserve and therefore do not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Cigarette Consumption

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide the source of his information that cigarette consumption in the Netherlands declined by 41 per cent. over the period 1975 to 1987; and whether this figure is for both manufactured cigarettes and hand-rolling tobacco together, or for only one of these categories.

Mr. Dorrell: The original source of this information is the Central Bureau for Statistics, the Netherlands. The figure relates only to manufactured cigarettes. It was recently published in the United Kingdom in Waterson M. J. "Advertising and Tobacco Consumption: An Analysis of the two Major Aspects of the Debate" International Journal of Advertising, 1990, 9, 59-72, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if priority will be given to the removal of tobacco advertising, not only from shops visible from schools and playgrounds, but also from shops close to schools and playgrounds.

Mr. Dorrell: The new voluntary agreement between the tobacco industry and the Government on tobacco advertising will require the industry to remove 50 per cent. of all permanent shopfront advertising over five years. The terms of the agreement will mean that the industry must give priority to removing signs clearly visible from schools. It is these signs which cause greatest concern to the Government.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the agreement with the tobacco industry announced recently to limit external permanent advertising on shops will apply to advertising stuck to the interior of shop windows facing outwards.

Mr. Dorrell: The agreement will cover permanent advertising material of this type, specifically window friezes and full window dressings.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the types of external permanent advertising material on shops to which his agreement with the tobacco industry will not apply.

Mr. Dorrell: No specific categories of external permanent advertising material on shops are excluded from the agreement.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what method will be used to measure the 50 per cent. reduction in permanent external tobacco advertising material on shop fronts.

Mr. Dorrell: Once the agreement has been concluded, the committee for monitoring agreements on tobacco advertising and sponsorship will engage independent consultants to monitor compliance with this aspect of the agreement. The methodology used by the consultants will be agreed between them and the committee. This matter will be covered in the committee's annual reports.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission an independent survey of the extent of tobacco advertising material on shops, comparable with those conducted for the committee for monitoring agreements on tobacco advertising and sponsorship by MAS Research Marketing and Consultancy Ltd. and reported in its first and second reports.

Mr. Dorrell: The precise nature of the independent consultancy work to be undertaken in monitoring compliance with the agreement is a matter for the committee for monitoring agreements on tobacco advertising and sponsorship.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he consulted the medical profession before concluding his agreement with the tobacco industry on advertising.

Mr. Dorrell: We have not yet finally concluded the agreement. We are fully aware of the medical profession's views on this matter. The Department's own medical advisers took an active part in the negotiations.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that there is no increase in shop-front tobacco advertising in the period before the new voluntary agreement with the tobacco industry comes into effect.

Mr. Dorrell: The reference date for the number of permanent shopfront signs advertising tobacco will be 1 July 1991. The industry has given firm assurances that it is not its intention to use the period before 1 July to make significant increases in the number of such signs.

"Registration: proposals for change"

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received following the publication of the White Paper on "Registration: proposals for change", (Cm. 939).

Mr. Dorrell: There has been generally a widespread welcome for the proposals made in the White Paper.

Secular Marriages

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further consideration he has given to the form of service, person performing the service, authorised buildings and greater flexibility in the arrangements for secular marriages; if he will now consider introducing legislation to enable secular marriages to be carried out by magistrates, mayors or provosts, to allow them to take place in civic and other specified buildings, and to allow greater flexibility in the services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The proposals in Cm. 939 are designed to give greater flexibility in the form of civil marriage ceremony and the choice of venues where such ceremonies may be conducted. The Government intend to introduce legislation to give effect to those and other proposals in the White Paper as soon as other parliamentary business allows.

The Government have no plans to allow civil marriages and the attendant responsibilities to be carried out by anyone other than registration officers.

South Yorkshire Ambulance Service

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received during the past six months from residents in South Yorkshire expressing support for the transfer of the South Yorkshire ambulance service to trust status.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 20 May 1991 c. 394]: I regret that the identification of Yorkshire regional health authority as being responsible for the public consultation exercise on the trust application from the South Yorkshire ambulance service was incorrect. Trent regional health authority is conducting this exercise.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Correspondence

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what caused the delay in replying to the letter of 25 September 1990 to the Minister of State responsible for prisons from the Member for Brent, East about his constituent, Ms. R. Louis; and for what reasons could a copy of the reply not be faxed to him on 23 May.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is regretted that the hon. Member's first letter of 25 September 1990 was lost at prison service headquarters during reorganisation and the reply not provided until the receipt of his further letter of 4 April. A copy of the reply was faxed to the House of Commons for the attention of the hon. Member on 23 May.

Indecency

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury of 20 December 1990, Official Report, column 334, he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on any changes made since that date to force instructions contained in the Metropolitan police force instruction manual or elsewhere relating to police operations to detect possible offences of indecency; and whether clearer guidance has been provided.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Metropolitan police that no such changes have been made since 20 December 1990, although this is being kept under review. The Metropolitan police instruction manual includes directions to officers as to the procedures to be followed in a wide range of street duties. It contains no specific instructions relating to the detection of offences of indecency. This is because the action to be taken by officers must be determined primarily by the circumstances of each particular case, within the overall guidelines.

Visas

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions are taking place with the European Community concerning the validity of visas issued by one member state throughout the Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The question of co-operation between member states on visa matters is currently under discussion in the EC intergovernmental fora which are examining a draft convention on the crossing of external frontiers. It is too early to predict the outcome of those discussions.

Cash Limits

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to make any changes to the 1991-92 cash limits within his responsibilities and to his Department's running costs limits.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote 3, will be increased by £12,872,000, from £878,445,000 to £891,317,000. At the same time the Home

Office running costs limit will be increased by £9,007,000 from £1,294,993,000 to £1,304,000,000. This mainly reflects the additional provision sought in connection with an increase in the number of asylum applications.

£9,000 of the increase will be offset by a transfer of provision from the Cabinet Office (class XIX, vote 1). The balance of £12,863,000 will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

WALES

Standard Assessment Tasks

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit (a) Sandycroft C. P. school and (b) Connah's Quay Bryn C. P. school, to discuss standard assessment tasks with staff members.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Although we have no immediate plan to visit these schools, my right hon. Friend and I have discussed assessment tasks with teachers in several schools we have recently visited. The Welsh Office in conjunction with HMI and the School Examinations and Assessment Council will be holding a one day conference at the end of June for primary teachers and advisers from all LEAs in Wales to discuss this year's assessment arrangements for seven-year-olds.

Residential Homes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policy initiatives he plans concerning homes in Wales for the elderly mentally infirm.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: We recognise the vulnerability of elderly people with mental infirmities and the need for adequate networks of care for them and of support for their families and friends who provide care.

Where it is no longer possible for an individual to stay in his or her own home, admission to residential, nursing home or hospital care should be a positive choice based on a full assessment of realistic alternatives. Such care should be in appropriately designed and staffed, locally based accommodation.

Our detailed policies and programme of action are set out in the Welsh Chapter of the White Paper "Caring for People: Community Care in the Next Decade and Beyond" (Cm 849), in the guidance on social care plans published by the Welsh Office in September 1990 and in the all-Wales mental illness strategy published in May 1989. Copies of these documents are in the Library of the House.

These are being carried into effect through complementary county plans for mental illness services and social care more generally which are to be published by April 1992. Earmarked Welsh Office funds under the mental illness strategy, the elderly initiative and the new grant scheme to promote more flexible forms of community care for elderly people and those with physical or sensory disabilities are helping to develop the required patterns of local services.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from the Care Homes Association concerning the fees paid to care homes and to nursing homes.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None this year.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he will take to enable local authorities to top up payments to homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Local authorities have the power to top up payments to independent sector residential homes in respect of people receiving the residential rate of income support who are under 65 or who continue in such care from the age of 65. From 1 April 1993, the Government intend that these arrangements will remain in place for those who continue in residential or nursing home care which they entered before that date.

For new residents of all ages from 1 April 1993 there will be new arrangements. Local authorities will manage a single unified budget to cover the costs of social care, whether in a person's own home or in a residential care or nursing home. People who enter homes under this new funding system and who need public financial support will no longer, therefore, have their care costs met by social security. The present rules on local authority topping up payments will, therefore, no longer apply to this group. In place of the present special income support limits, they will be able to claim help from the normal income support system of personal allowances and premiums, and from housing benefit. The financial incentives towards residential care under present income support rules will therefore be eliminated.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many residential homes for the elderly mentally infirm there are in each county in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The number of homes for elderly people as at 31 March 1990 is shown in the following table. Homes catering for elderly mentally infirm residents are included in these figures.

	Local authority homes	Private homes	Voluntary homes
Clwyd	20	151	5

Visits to Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the schools he has visited in 1991.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend visited Ysgol David Hughes, Gwynedd on 20 May 1991 and Ruthin school, Clwyd on 24 May 1991. During the course of 1991 I have visited four county primary schools and seven county secondary schools in Wales. These are as follows:

School		Date
Lansdowne County Primary School	South Glamorgan	18 January 1991
Llanishen High School	South Glamorgan	18 January 1991
Ysgol Pencae (County Primary)	Gwynedd	4 February 1991
Ysgol Aberconwy (Secondary)	Gwynedd	4 February 1991
Ysgol Llwyn Crwn	Mid Glamorgan	22 March 1991
Ysgol Rhydyfelen	Mid Glamorgan	22 March 1991
Ysgol Glantaf	South Glamorgan	26 April 1991
Ysgol John Bright	Gwynedd	2 May 1991
Tywyn Primary School	West Glamorgan	10 May 1991
Olchfa Comprehensive School	West Glamorgan	10 May 1991

Primary School Tests

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet teachers' unions to discuss the impact of standard assessment testing on staffing levels in primary schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I recently met the representatives of the Welsh Secondary Schools Association and will shortly meet with representatives of the National Association of Head Teachers in Wales to discuss assessment issues.

Cash Limits

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to make any changes to the 1991-92 cash limits for class XVI, votes 4, 5, 8 and 10.

Mr. David Hunt: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary and revised estimates, the cash limit on class XVI, vote 4 will be increased by £8,408,000, from £143,000,000 to £151,408,000; the cash limit on class XVI, vote 5 will be increased by £724,000, from £399,151,000 to £399,875,000; the cash limit on class XVI, vote 8 will be increased by £10,291,000, from £1,120,386,000 to £1,130,677,000; and the cash limit on class XVI, vote 10 will be reduced by £62,716,000, from £1,827,515,000 to £1,764,799,000.

The increase to vote 4 provides additional resources for training and enterprise councils in respect of employment training.

The increase to vote 5 comprises: (i) the provision of resources for grant-maintained schools (£500,000) which are offset by a corresponding reduction in class XVI, vote 10; (ii) additional provision in respect of various payments to be made to the Department of Education and Science (£1,108,000) which will be offset by a corresponding reduction in class XI, votes 1 and 2; and (iii) a reduction in the provision for rating work by valuation offices, following an amended VAT ruling by Customs and Excise (£884,000). This reduction will be used to offset in part an increase in class XVI, vote 11 in respect of flood, storm and emergency services.

The increase to vote 8 comprises: (i) additional resources towards meeting the cost of the pay awards recommended in the 1991 report of the review bodies for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine and on doctors' and dentists' remuneration (£10,100,000); and (ii) provision for the funding of occupational therapy training (£191,000).

The reduction to vote 10 is made up as follows. (i) There is a decrease of £62,000,000 in respect of the community charge reduction scheme, provision for which is being sought by means of a summer supplementary estimate on class XVI, vote 11. (ii) There is a decrease in the provision for rate support grant (£216,000) following the recalculation of local authorities' entitlements. The latter reduction will offset that element of the increase in class XVI, vote 11 in respect of flood, storm and emergency services (£1,100,000) not covered by the reduction from class XVI, vote 5. (iii) There is a decrease in the provision for revenue support grant (£500,000) to offset an increase in class XVI, vote 5 in respect of expenditure on grant-maintained schools.

As already announced, the increase in respect of review bodies' pay awards and the provision for employment training have been charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. There is no net impact on public expenditure of the other changes shown above.

Children's Homes

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will make a statement about the management of children's homes in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: We have already announced our intention to review local authorities' arrangements for the management and control of their children's homes: I intend to invite voluntary and private children's homes to co-operate in this exercise. The review will be conducted by the social services inspectorate Wales, and the report of its findings will be published.

Separately, following the recent allegations in the press, I have decided to direct Gwent county council to set up a full independent inquiry into the management regime and practical day-to-day running of Ty Mawr community home, and into the county council's arrangements for oversight and control of the local management. Guidance to local authorities on the need for them to take early action to introduce complaints procedures for the children in their care has already been issued. In collaboration with the Department of Health, the Department will be issuing further comprehensive guidance on residential care as part of the process of implementing the Children Act 1989 which comes into force in October. We will take whatever further action is necessary in the light of the reports of the Ty Mawr inquiry and our own review of children's homes when these are to hand.

In addition, officials have recently completed a thorough review of secure care for young people. The review, which took evidence from all interested parties, paid particular attention to the need for secure accommodation to avoid the use of prison for boys on remand. I am presently considering the final report of the review which we will be publishing for consultation next month. The consultation, which will be very wide, will be conducted with all urgency consonant with a proper consideration of the issues.

ENVIRONMENT

Uniform Business Rate (Post Offices)

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received concerning the effect of the uniform business rate on rural post offices; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to provide relief from the uniform business rate for community post offices.

Mr. Key: We have received a number of representations on this subject, and a Post Office survey has shown a varied effect on rates bills for this type of property. Some sub-postmasters have stated that they are better off under the new arrangements.

We do not propose to give rate relief to "community" post offices. Such property is rateable only to the extent that the non-domestic use prevents part of it from being used wholly for the purposes of living accommodation at some time during the day. In view of concerns expressed about the rating of "community" post offices, valuation officers have checked the assessment of these properties.

From 1 April this year, we have also improved the transitional arrangements for properties in mixed domestic and commercial use to limit year-on-year rates increases to 10 per cent. in real terms; this will benefit many rural post offices.

Royal Parks Police

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many police were employed by the royal parks in (a) 1971, (b) 1981 and (c) 1991, respectively.

Sir George Young: The royal parks constabulary was formed in 1974. Prior to that there was a body of park keepers with a strength of 174 in 1971. The authorised complement of the RPC was 159 in 1981 and 160 in 1991.

Ordnance Survey (Expenditure)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount spent by the Ordnance Survey in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Ordnance Survey in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment.

Mr. Baldry: The chief executive will write to the hon. Member.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the basis upon which service personnel and their families living in a group of properties, not having separate rateable values entered in the valuation list, will now be able to benefit under the Community Charge (England) (Reductions) Regulations 1991; and what steps he has taken to inform local authorities of this change.

Mr. Key: The aim of the reduction scheme is to limit the increase in community charges over rates in 1989. The improvements to the scheme announced on 25 March will help people who live in properties where there was only one rateable value covering several residences. Under transitional relief a maximum of two personal community charges only could be compared to the rates. Under the community charge reduction scheme local authorities are now required to compare the rates with the aggregate community charge liability of all the eligible charge payers living in one or more properties covered by one rateable value. This change will particularly benefit service personnel living in properties which did not have separate rateable values. Details of the changes to the scheme were sent to authorities on 26 March and 28 March.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals to the West Yorkshire valuation and community charge tribunals were waiting to be heard on 22 May; how many appeals have been resolved since 1 April 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The available information is as follows:

	Outstanding Appeals	Appeals Cleared since 1 April 1990
(a) 1973 Rating Appeals as at 22 May 1991	339	6,163
(b) 1990 Rating Appeals at end of April 1991	23,610	324
(c) 1990 Transitional and Completion Notice Appeals as at 22 May 1991	2,086	146
(d) Community Charge Appeals at end of April 1991	59	181

Most of the 1990 rating appeals were not transferred from valuation offices to the tribunal until February and March this year. Some of these have already been listed for hearing; the 324 cases cleared are those agreed or withdrawn since 1 December 1990.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent action he has taken to remind local authorities of their duties (a) to collect all the community charges owed to them and (b) actively to pursue non-payers and late payers of the community charge; and if he will introduce legislation to prevent local authorities from passing on the shortfall per head in revenue, caused by those charge payers who do not pay in full, to charge payers who do pay in full.

Mr. Key: All authorities are very well aware of their duty to collect the community charge from all those liable to pay it. In commenting on the latest community charge collection figures published on 29 May my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Local Government and Inner Cities made it clear that authorities were still under an obligation to collect any outstanding charges and that there would be no amnesty for non-payers. It is right than when setting community charges authorities should take account of their estimates of any amounts which will be unrecoverable, as they did when setting rate poundages under the former rating system.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the departmental guidelines issued since February 1991 to local authorities on the poll tax, their date of issue and a brief summary of each of their contents.

Mr. Key: My Department has written to local authorities about the community charge on the following occasions since February:

11 March
"Community Charge and Non-Domestic Rating: Statutory Instruments and Circular Letters"
—This contained a list of all statutory instruments laid in 1990 and 1991 and all circular letters issued by the Department since October 1990.

19 March
"Community Charges in 1991-92"
—This outlined the changes made to the community charge as announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget speech.

26 March
"Community Charges in 1991-92"
—This gave further details of the General Reduction of £140 and of changes to be made to the Community Charge Reduction Scheme.

28 March
"Community Charges in 1991-92"
—This gave further guidance on the effect of the General Reduction in charges and explained in more depth the changes to the Community Charge Reduction Scheme.

25 April
"The Personal Community Charge (Reduction) (England) (Amendment) (No. 3) Regulations 1991"
—This explained the effect of the regulations amending the criteria by which chargepayers are eligible under the Reduction Scheme.

7 May
"The Community Charges and Non-Domestic Rating (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 1991"
—This explained the effect of these regulations on the instalment arrangements for the payment of community charges.

16 May
"Community Charge Liability: British Service Personnel in the Gulf"
—This gave charging authorities guidance about the liability of British service personnel posted to the Gulf in the light of the High Court decision on Bradford City Council v. Anderton, and also gave details about the reimbursement scheme to be operated by the Ministry of Defence.

20 May
"You and the Community Charge: Reductions for 1991-92"
—This enclosed copies of the new leaflet explaining how the £140 reduction and the Community Charge Reduction Scheme will work in 1991-92.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information local authorities are required to provide to community charge payers, on the community charge bill, relating to the item called other adjustments.

Mr. Key: Authorities are required to provide their charge payers with explanatory notes which form part of their community charge bill. These include a note on other adjustments which explains that the main adjustments taken account of in this figure are authorities' estimates of interest payable to or by the authority; changes in income due to movements on and off the community charges register; income from standard charges; and community charges not collected by the authority.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many individuals have been prosecuted for non-payment of the community charge; and what percentage of charge payers are estimated not to have paid their community charge in full.

Mr. Key: By the end of March 1991 local authorities in England had issued 4·1 million summonses for non-payment of the community charge and had obtained almost 3 million liability orders. Information is not available on the numbers of charge payers who have paid their charge in full; but we estimate that by the end of March 1991, 91 per cent. of charge payers had made some payment.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the factors which he takes into account in calculating the standard spending assessments and the total external support for Basildon district council and Southend-on-Sea borough council; and the weighting that was given to each factor.

Mr. Key: The factors and weights used to calculate standard spending assessments (SSAs) which form the basis of grant distribution, are the same for all authorities providing the same range of services. They are set out in the "Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England)" as amended by the "Revenue Support Grant Distribution (Amendment) Report (England)" approved by the House of Commons on 29 January. Copies of both of these are in the Library together with the SSA handbook for 1991-92 which provides details of the service elements of SSA for every authority.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations regarding the lay-out of the community charge bill issued by local authorities and the information it provides.

Mr. Key: My Department received a number of responses from authorities and other organisations on the form of the community charge bill and its accompanying information following the issue of draft regulations on these matters last year.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has given to local authorities about backdating claims for rebate on the poll tax.

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the "Housing Benefit and Community Charge Benefit Guidance Manual", especially paragraph B2.34, which was issued to local authorities in January this year. A copy of the guidance manual is in the Library. In addition, local authorities were informed in March this year about the special arrangements for claims for benefit affected by the Community Charges (General Reduction) Act 1991.

Housing Statistics

83. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the total number of dwellings, the total number of owner-occupied dwellings, the number rented from (i) public and (ii) private landlords and the average rent charged for commercial dwellings in 1979 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Key: National and regional estimates of the stock of dwellings by type of tenure appear in "Housing and Construction Statistics, Great Britain, 1979-1989". The national estimates for December 1979 and subsequent years are in table 9.3. The earliest consistent figures at regional level, showing housing association dwellings separately from private rented dwellings, are for April 1981 and these are in table 9.4. An unpublished table for December 1989 with these categories combined has been placed in the Library. The latest available estimates, for December 1990, appear in tables 2.23 and 2.25 of "Housing and Construction Statistics, Great Britain, December quarter 1990, Part 2".

Estimates for individual authorities which are consistent with national and regional totals and tenure categories are not available. A table giving total stock for each local authority at the end of 1980 and 1990 has been placed in the Library.

National and sub-national information on private sector fair rents registered with rent officers for 1979 are published in the Department's "Note for Rent Officers RO(S)33", a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Comparable information for the fourth quarter of 1990 is in the Department's "Statistical Bulletin 91(2) Rent Officer Statistics, Third and fourth quarters 1990".

Residential Property Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment what is his estimate of the number and average value of residential properties in each English region and in Wales, together with his estimate of the value of the housing stock in each case.

Mr. Key: The table provides the information requested.

Region	Number of domestic hereditaments (millions)	Average value per hereditament (£)	Implied value of housing stock (£bn)
Northern	1·2	50,000	60
North West	2·5	58,000	150
Yorkshire and Humberside	2·0	60,000	120
East Midlands	1·6	66,000	100
West Midlands	2·0	63,000	130
East Anglia	0·8	67,000	50
South West	1·8	82,000	150
South East	4·1	96,000	400
Greater London	2·8	117,000	330

Royal Parks (Contracts)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether all the work allocated by the district works office, royal parks, to Baker Bros. that was paid for, has now been completed.

Sir George Young: With one exception, the type of orders used by the district works office, royal parks, to place work with that company (which is now called Electrical Refrigeration (South East Ltd) requires the work to be completed before payment is made. The exception related to a specific contract which provided for interim payments; the work was completed before the final payment was made.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which district works offices of the Property Services Agency allocated electrical work to Messrs Baker Bros (Grays) Ltd. in the year since 1987.

Sir George Young: The district works offices concerned were central London palaces, City-London north, Kensington, museums and galleries groups 1 and 2, royal parks, special buildings 1 and 2, Whitehall, north and Whitehall, south.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he has taken to assure himself that electrical and buildings maintenance work carried out to the Rose Garden restaurant in Regent's park has been accurately apportioned and monitored;

(2) what steps he has taken to assure himself that the arrangements for allocating work to Messrs. Baker Bros. (Grays) Ltd. on projects carried out at Regent's park were drawn up in compliance with departmental guidelines;

(3) why it was decided not to use measured term contractors in the case of contracts allocated by the district works office, royal parks, for work carried out in Regent's park in the years 1988, 1989 and 1990.

Sir George Young: PSA Services, Building Management, London (BML) is employed to undertake maintenance work at the Rose Garden restaurant. For that type of work detailed procedures exist relating to the selection of the appropriate method by which individual services are to be executed, the supervision of that work and the scrutiny of invoices prior to payment authorisation. The district works officer and regional management are required to carry out regular personal checks of randomly selected orders; and the district works office is the subject of other management reviews, the results of which are passed to BML's management board.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many contracts were given by the district works office, royal parks, to Baker Bros. (Grays) Ltd. of Essex in each year since 1988.

Sir George Young: The number of contracts placed with that company in those years was five.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to assure himself that the allocation of contracts by the district works office, royal parks, to Baker Bros. (Grays) Ltd. of Essex in 1988, 1989 and 1990 complied with all departmental guidelines.

Sir George Young: Three of the contracts were awarded to the company as a result of competitive tendering in accordance with departmental guidelines and in which the company made the most favourable offer. The other two were for very small value works, which the district works officer placed with the company in accordance with his delegated authority.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether contract work to the open air theatre at Regent's park, allocated by the district works office, royal parks, was completed within budget.

Sir George Young: Since the formation of the district works office, royal parks, works services on this site have comprised minor maintenance and minor new works. Some cost overruns have occurred. By its very nature, work in existing property is likely to encounter unforeseeable problems which may result in additional expenditure. However, if the cost of such services exceeds the estimate, procedures require the matter to be referred to management for approval of the additional cost. Since 1 April 1990, the funding of works services in the royal parks has been the responsibility of DOE central's royal parks division, which approves each individual service and any significant variation.

Heveningham Hall

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what agreement as to the implementation of the tree planting scheme of Dame Sylvia Crowe at Heveningham hall was agreed by the purchaser at the time of the sale in 1981; and what steps the owner has taken to fulfil it.

Sir George Young: The purchaser covenanted to use his best endeavours to commence, carry out and complete the tree planting scheme recommended by Dame Sylvia Crowe in her report of November 1975, or an alternative scheme if agreed in writing by the vendor. The implementation of the scheme has been delayed, partly by the loss of a large number of trees in the storms of the past four years. Suffolk county council is currently formulating a new planting programme with the managing agents, Suffolk Coastal district council and Task Force Trees to reinstate these losses. Dame Sylvia Crowe's scheme is also being re-examined in the light of more recent research.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he took to verify the suitability of I. D. Investment Development AG to be the purchaser of Heveningham hall at the time of its sale in 1981.

Sir George Young: The negotiations for the sale of the hall were conducted with the late Mr. Al Ghazzi and his solicitors. It would not be appropriate to give details of the inquiries which were made at the time as to Mr. Al Ghazzi's suitability. The terms of sale include the acceptance of certain covenants by I. D. Investment Development AG and a deed of covenant by Mr. Al Ghazzi guaranteeing the company's performance.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to return the James Wyatt furniture to Heveningham hall.

Sir George Young: This is a matter which will need to be considered when the restoration work is completed.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to identify the ultimate beneficial owner of I. D. Investment Development AG as the legal owner of Heveningham hall and at the time of its purchase of the hall.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend's concern is to ensure that this outstanding historic building is properly restored and maintained. He does not need further information about the ownership of the hall in order to monitor the progress of the work, which is going well.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictive covenants there are to cover the use by the Al Ghazzi family of Heveningham hall.

Sir George Young: There are no restrictive covenants on the use of Heveningham hall.

Radon

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement about the exceptionally high radon levels found in tap water in Alnwick, Northumberland.

Mr. Trippier: A survey of tap water, organised by researchers at Bristol, is currently being conducted at secondary schools round the country. The survey involves the use of a simple kit to test for radon. A single sample from a school in Alnwick was found to contain radon activity of 65 bq/l. I am advised by the National Radiological Protection Board that this result is not a cause for concern.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the outcome of the recent publicity campaign in Cornwall and Devon relating to radon in homes.

Mr. Baldry: I launched a publicity campaign on 11 March to encourage householders in Cornwall and Devon to take advantage of the Government-funded free radon measurement service, which is available on request to householders throughout the two counties. My Department has produced a leaflet, "Radon in Houses", which has been distributed to all households in Cornwall and Devon.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand copies of the leaflet have been sent out. The house-to-house leaflet drop was backed up by a widespread poster campaign. Posters have been displayed in libraries, citizens advice bureaux, DIY shops, estate agents etc, and additional leaflets were made available through these outlets. 160 copies of a Braille version of the leaflet were sent out through the blind welfare officers of the two counties. A public service announcement was recorded for use by local radio stations.

I am pleased to be able to tell my hon. Friend that the campaign has been a resounding success. The leaflet has a tear-off slip to enable householders to apply to the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) for a radon measurement. NRPB carries out radon measurements for Government. Up to the present, over 72,000 requests have been received from householders by the board. All those applying will receive a response within four weeks, and the radon detectors themselves within two months. Over 50,000 measurements are already in progress.

Cornwall and Devon make up the only area of the country which has formally been designated by the NRPB as a radon affected area. About 12 per cent. of homes in the region may have radon concentrations exceeding the level at which householders are advised to take action to reduce it; this is a much larger proportion than anywhere else in the United Kingdom. Long-term exposure to radon increases the risk of contracting lung cancer.

If the results show that the Government action level is exceeded, householders are advised to undertake the necessary remedial measures, which can usually be carried out effectively for relatively modest cost. Advice on remedies is given in the Department's free leaflet, "The Householders' Guide to Radon", a copy of which is always provided with the radon survey results. Local authorities may give discretionary house renovation grants for radon remedial works, subject to a test of resources.

I most sincerely urge all householders in Cornwall and Devon to accept the advice to have their houses measured for radon.

Footpaths and Bridleways

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by year for the past 10 years, and for the current year to date, the number of (a) public footpaths and (b) public bridleways that have been (i) created and (ii) closed to the general public.

Mr. Baldry: Information is not held centrally in precisely the form requested, but records held by the Countryside Commission indicate that the number of public path creation and extinguishment orders made, and known to have to come into operation in England and Wales since the introduction of revised procedures on 28 February were:

	Orders made	Orders known to have come into operation
Creation
1983[1]	65	43
1984	60	47
1985	79	65
1986	93	79
1987	71	55
1988	108	87
1989	97	74
1990	113	76

1991[2]	100	23

[1] After 28 February.

[2] Approximately first half of year.

[3] These figures include orders for diversion or temporary extinguishment; orders made by magistrates' courts; and side road orders, which may include creation and extinguishment within the same order.

Correspondence

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Falmouth and Camborne can expect a reply to his communication of 26 February on behalf of Mrs. Meryl Hellevoort, of 3 Primrose gardens, Mary's Well, Redruth, on rate support grant payments.

Mr. Key: I have replied to my hon. Friend today.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, 21 May, column 405, with regard to the number of jobs created or attracted in urban development corporations, how the figure for Sheffield was calculated; and where the jobs are located.

Mr. Portillo: The figure of 7,787 jobs for Sheffield development corporation is a gross estimate of permanent jobs created or attracted in the UDA, not a net figure as indicated in the answer given in the Official Report, 21 May at column 405. The figure is an estimate of jobs in the development corporation's area arising out of private sector developments completed since the corporation was established and an estimate of jobs created as a result of grant support to local firms for business development schemes. The majority of jobs, about 7,000, are at Meadowhall.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has received to consultation on the separation of local authorities' waste regulation and disposal functions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: On 31 May my Department and the Welsh Office issued a circular giving guidance to those local authorities which are both waste regulation and waste disposal authorities under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 on how to separate those functions as the Act requires.

Some 30 replies were received on the draft circular, issued on 6 March, from local authority associations, individual local authorities and other interested bodies including the waste disposal industry. Responses generally supported the principle of separation, but raised a number of particular concerns.

The local authority associations expressed considerable concern over the extent of separation requested and its possible cost. We have no wish rigidly to prescribe particular administrative structures. We have therefore rewritten the circular to offer authorities more flexibility, provided that they meet the important objective of independence for the regulation authority from pressures arising from their role as disposal authorities. No long-term increase in costs should therefore be involved.

Concerns were also expressed about the future status of waste regulation and I am happy to take this opportunity to reaffirm the Government's policy that the status of waste regulation should be enhanced generally, and that this should be helped not hindered by its separation from waste disposal.

We have set a timetable, taking account of local authority concerns, for them to submit their proposals to the Secretary of State; this should be done as soon as possible and at the latest by 31 December 1991.

We have also now commenced a number of provisions of part II of the Act dealing with the establishment of waste regulation, disposal and collection authorities and some of their functions—in particular, the duty of waste regulation authorities to prepare strategic waste disposal plans for their areas.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will issue the expected circular on new arrangements for waste disposal operations under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, with particular reference to the introduction of competitive tendering for waste disposal contracts and the formation of local authority waste disposal companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: My Department and the Welsh Office issued the circular to local authorities on 29 May. The circular provides guidance on new arrangements for waste disposal operations under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, including the introduction of competitive tendering for waste disposal contracts, and advice on the formation of local authority waste disposal companies (LAWDCs). The new arrangements will provide the basis for fair competition and higher environmental standards in waste disposal and will, together with other parts of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, encourage the provision of improved services for the collection, keeping, treatment and disposal of waste.

There has been consultation with the local authority associations, with the waste disposal industry and with other interested parties. The advice and guidance contained in the circular reflects the concerns which have been expressed to us.

The circular explains that, under the Act, authorities will no longer be able to carry out waste disposal operations themselves. In the first instance, it will be for authorities to choose what sort of arrangements they wish to make in order to satisfy the provisions of the Act; available options include entering into a joint venture with the private sector, privatising the waste disposal undertaking or establishing a LAWDC under direction from the Secretary of State. Any authorities which do not take steps to make satisfactory new arrangements for waste disposal will be directed to form a LAWDC.

Guidance on the formation of a LAWDC is contained in the circular, as is advice on provisions to be included in a scheme to transfer the authority's waste disposal undertaking to a LAWDC. Each transfer scheme must be approved by the Secretary of State. When authorities are directed to form LAWDCs, each authority will be provided with its own individual timetable for the creation of its LAWDC, reflecting that authority's particular circumstances and the Secretary of State's commitment to implementing this policy as soon as possible. Setting the new arrangements for waste disposal in place throughout England and Wales will be achieved through a co-operative effort, drawing on the resources of both central and local government.

The circular also explains that the Act introduces competitive tendering for waste disposal contracts. With effect from 31 May, local authorities must award only new contracts for waste disposal through competitive tender. In framing the terms of any contract, authorities must consider whether to include conditions designed to maximise recycling and to minimise pollution of the environment or harm to human health. Authorities are not required to accept the lowest tender where an alternative offers environmental benefits. At all stages in the process, authorities must take care not to discriminate unduly against particular types of waste disposal contractor. The competitive tendering process will identify the full costs of waste disposal, and will encourage an efficient and environmentally conscious waste disposal service.

Cash Limits

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to make any changes to the cash limit on the Property Services Agency services vote in 1991-92.

Mr. Yeo: Subject to approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class VIII vote 13 will be reduced by £470,000 from £91,416,000 to £90,946,000. The reduction is due to the transfer of £500,000 to Property Holdings (in respect of the transfer of the PSA security group function) offset by an inward transfer of £30,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry following the extension of charging for seedcorn research.

This vote also covers the residual costs of the Crown Suppliers, following the closure on 31 March of the Crown Suppliers trading fund. Pending parliamentary approval of the estimates, urgent expenditure estimated at £5,000,000 will be met by a repayable advance from the contingencies fund.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any changes to announce to his Department's running cost limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Yeo: Yes, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary summer supplementary estimate, the running cost limit for Property Holdings will be increased by £7,058,000 from £49,973,000 to £57,031,000. The increase reflects the transfer of responsibility to Property Holdings of the special services group from class VIII vote 13 and the interdepartmental despatch service from the Crown Suppliers.

Sir Timothy Raison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any changes to announce to his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Heseltine: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised and supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

(i) the cash limit for class VIII, vote 2 (miscellaneous housing administration and grants) will be reduced by £25,588,000 from £221,495,000 to £195,907,000. This mainly reflects a decision to transfer £25,500,000 of capital resources for projects for the single homeless to the DOE Housing Corporation (DOE/HC) non-voted cash limit. These transferred resources will continue to be available to provide for the single homeless. The remainder of the cash limit reduction is to the provision for grants to the priority estates project;

(ii) the DOE/HC non-voted cash limit will be increased by £25,500,000 from £1,495,425,000 to £1,520,925,000. This results from the transfer of resources for capital projects to help the single homeless from the cash limited vote class VIII, vote 2 to DOE/HC as described above;

(iii) the cash limit on class VIII, vote 5 (central environmental services, etc.) will be increased by £665,000 from £326,625,000 to £327,290,000. The increase is required mainly to cover higher charges for environmental research, arising from the introduction of full cost recovery by the Department of Trade and Industry (the offsetting increased receipts appear on class IV, vote 2). The increase also provides for an enhanced better environment awards for industry scheme and for the costs of transporting oil recovery equipment to Bahrain, following the major oil spills during the Gulf conflict;

(iv) the cash limit for class VIII, vote 6 (royal palaces, royal parks, historic buildings, etc.) will be reduced by £1,110,000 from £174,144,000 to £173,034,000. There will be a reduction in provision for the Royal Commission on historical monuments of England of £2,771,000 due to its relocation plans being rephased offset by minor increases in provision throughout the vote;

(v) the cash limit for class VIII, vote 8 (Department of the Environment: Administration) will be increased by £466,000 from £187,951,000 to £188,417,000. There are various transfers which include a transfer of £675,000 from class VIII, vote 7 (Department of the Environment: Property Holdings) in respect of financial and administrative services to be provided for Property Holdings and a transfer of £200,000 to the Department of Education and Science for sport and recreation work;

(vi) the running costs limit for the Department will be increased by £531,000 from £189,530,000 to £190,061,000.

On behalf of the Director General of the Office of Water Services, I have to announce a cash limit reduction on class VIII, vote 11 (Office of Water Services) of £15,000 from £6,300,000 to £6,285,000. The Department's running cost limit will be reduced by £269,000 from £5,713,000 to £5,444,000. The reduction in running costs will offset increases in capital expenditure on accommodation and information technology. There are also some other minor changes on the vote.

These increases will be charged to the Reserve and not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Peacetime Civil Emergency Plans

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation to require local authorities to draw up peacetime civil emergency plans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

We hope to make an announcement shortly.

Vacant Land

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the amount of vacant, dormant, derelict, underused and under-utilised land owned by each Government Department.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, Tuesday 19 February 1991, c115-16]: Holdings of unused and underused land in England at 31 March 1990, the latest available date, as reported by the Departments concerned, are shown in the table. Information about health authorities' land is not available. No unused or underused land is held by any other major Departments.

Individual Departments are responsible for monitoring and managing their own property holdings. The rationalisation of holdings, the disposal of surplus land and the improvement of systems are encouraged through the public expenditure survey discussions and in other ways.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the outcome of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade textiles committee meeting held on 16 May; and if he will make a statement on his policy on renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement for 17 months on existing terms.

Mr. Sainsbury: The textiles committee discussed the basis on which the multi-fibre arrangement should be extended after its expiry on 31 July this year. No decision was reached. A further meeting is expected in mid-June. The European Community, on behalf of the United Kingdom and the other member states, is proposing a 17-month extension on existing terms.

Cash Limit

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limit and running cost limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Lilley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IV, vote 2 (support for industry, international trade, statutory and regulatory work, consumer protection, and administration) will be increased by £4,559,000 from £758,460,000 to £763,019,000. The running costs limit for the Department of Trade and Industry will be increased by £440,000 from £257,796,000 to £258,236,000.

In order to establish the Patent Office and Companies house executive agencies as trading funds, the increase in the cash limit covers net provision of £7,252,000 for loans to Patent Office and £6,037,000 for loans to Companies House to provide initial working capital and finance for long-term projects. This expenditure will require the prior approval of the House to the establishment of the two funds. It is offset by decreases of £4,125,000 in net provision of Companies house and £655,000 for the Patent Office to reflect their transition to trading fund status together with increased appropriations in aid of £3,184,000 on the administration section as a result of receipts from those new trading funds.

There are also increases of £250,000 in the consumer and investor protection programme to provide assistance for the share ownership movement, £120,000 in the space technology programmes in respect of residual espenditure on Dialtech retrieval services, £71,000 for the Department's promotion of consumer safety, to be fully met by receipts from the European Community, and £20,000 in the industrial research programme to meet the United Kingdom's subscription to the European resource centre for economic redevelopment and restructuring.

These increases are partly offset by a net decrease of £268,000 in telecommunications and posts expenditure, comprising increases in subscriptions to international organisations and regulatory publicity which are more than offset by an increase in related receipts; a decrease of £122,000 in administration in respect of consultancies and formal inquiries; and a decrease of £650,000 in the measurement and technology support programme for strategic research paid to the Warren Spring laboratory, the laboratory of the Government chemist and the national physical laboratory executive agencies, to reflect transfers to other Government Departments which will fund such research directly. These net running cost controlled agencies' gross total and appropriations in aid both accordingly increase by £556,000 for WSL, £84,000 for LGC and £10,000 for NPL. Increased appropriations in aid of £34,000 for the national engineering laboratory executive agency reflect recovery of strategic research costs from other Government Departments by NEL, which is on gross running cost control.

In addition, there are net transfers of provision of £195,000 from NPL to LGC in respect of provision of common services and minor capital purchases, and of £255,000 from the support for industrial research and development programme to civil aircraft research and demonstration in respect of a project under the EUREKA programme.

An increase of £206,000 for additional superannuation liability of suppliers of central services is more than offset by a reduction of £355,000 of superannuation liability in the administration section for export services; the net reduction will be matched by reduced receipts on the superannuation vote.

The departmental running cost limit will be increased by £440,000, reflecting the reclassification to running costs of programme expenditure of £305,000 in respect of companies investigations, transfers of £67,000 from the FCO and Civil Service Commission for recruitment, publicity and the establishment of the export services joint directorate, an increase of £230,000 to facilitate DTI's policy of establishing strict customer/contractor relationships between their central services and customer divisions (fully offset by receipts of central service suppliers) and £120,000 from NPL to the national weights and measures laboratory in respect of the provision of common services. These increases are partly offset by a transfer of £282,000 from running costs to programme expenditure in connection with work on copyright policy by the Patent Office trading fund.

This supplementary estimate increases the DTI's public expenditure provision by a net £623,000 when the non-voted public expenditure consequences of creating Patent Office and Companies house trading funds are taken into account. This increase will be charged to the reserve and therefore will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Unemployment

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out his plans for funding education provision for the long-term adult unemployed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Members for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) and for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on 23 January 1991 at columns 196-97; and to the White Paper "Education and Training for the 21st century", Cm 1536.

School Buildings

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science further to his reply of 24 April, Official Report, columns 438-40, if he will give in 1990 prices, by local education authority, the level of capital spending on school buildings for 1978-79, 1984-85 and 1988-89.

Mr. Fallon: The following table shows the information requested:

Correspondence

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science on what date he received the letter dated 12 May from Mrs. Linda Bettany of Sandycroft C. P. school, concerning resources and class size; what reply he has sent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Mrs. Bettany addressed her letter of 12 May to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, who has ministerial responsibility for the matters she raises.

Standard Assessment Tasks

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the operation of standard assessment tasks.

Mr. Fallon: Consultations have recently opened on the statutory orders on testing for next year. Copies of the consultation documents have been placed in the Library. My right hon. and learned Friend has emphasised his commitment to review this summer's operation before deciding on the exact form of tests for next year.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will appoint extra teachers to primary schools where standard assessment tasks are carried out.

Mr. Fallon: The appointment and deployment of teachers is a matter for local education authorities.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations he has had with (a) teachers and (b) head teachers concerning standard assessment tasks.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend has had extensive discussions with teachers and head teachers on this issue, and will continue to do so.

Cash Limits

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any changes to announce to cash limits on votes within his responsibility for 1991-92.

Mr. Eggar: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimates, the cash limits for class XI, vote 1, schools, research and miscellaneous services, and class XI, vote 2, higher and further education, will be amended. The cash limit changes are as follows:

Class and Vote	Current cash limit £	Change £	Revised cash limit £
XI.1	713,445,000	− 582,000	712,863,000

The decrease on class XI, vote 1 results from the appropriation in aid of contributions from the Welsh Office to certain programmes which are on a joint England and Wales basis.

The decrease on class XI, vote 2 results partly from the appropriation in aid of contributions from Wales to the programme of bursaries for the initial training of teachers in shortage subjects. The remainder of the decrease results from the transfer of responsibility to regional health authorities for manpower planning to meet NHS needs across a range of professions allied to medicine and the accompanying costs of training courses. The decrease is net of an increase in provision for the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council to cover the costs to higher education institutions of providing two-year diploma in social work courses to replace certificate in social services courses run in further education colleges. Funding for this will be transferred from the Department of Health.

Student Awards

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will announce the rates of supplementary allowances payable within the mandatory student award in 1991-92.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Subject to Parliament's approval of the necessary regulations which will be laid in due course, supplementary allowances payable within the mandatory student award by local education authorities in England and Wales will be increased in the academic year 1991-92. In most cases, the rises will be broadly in line with the overall increase in student support through the loan and basic grant together which I announced on 22 May, Official Report, columns 499-500. I am placing details of the supplementary allowances in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Swan Hunter

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Prime Minister if he will visit Swan Hunter Shipbuilders on Tyneside.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Professional Association of Teachers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to ensure that the Professional Association of Teachers is recognised in the determination of statutory and non-statutory pay and conditions of employment in each part of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: In England and Wales, the Government recognise the Professional Association of Teachers and consults it on statutory pay and conditions. For the future, the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions (No. 2) Bill will require the new review body, which will deal with statutory pay and conditions, to invite evidence from representative bodies, such as the Professional Association of Teachers. The determination of non-statutory pay and conditions is a matter for local education authorities and the governing bodies of grant-maintained schools.

In Scotland, the Scottish joint negotiation committee determines the statutory pay and conditions of service for school teachers. The Professional Association of Teachers is represented on the committee. In Northern Ireland, the association has not yet met the minimum membership requirement to satisfy the conditions laid down for representation on the Northern Ireland Teachers Council. Under the council's constitution, this is a precondition for representation on its negotiating committee for teachers' pay and conditions of service.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 4 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening, I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

10 Downing Street (Decorations)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what alterations he has made to the internal furnishing decorations within No. 10 Downing street since he became Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister [holding reply 3 June]: None.

ENERGY

Cash Limits

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Wakeham: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised and new estimates, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for class V, vote 2 will be reduced by £7,915,000 from £329,164,000 to £321,249,000. The cash limit for class V, vote 3, will be reduced by £4,392,000 from £46,127,000 to £41,735,000. The running costs limit for the Department will be reduced by £5,530,000 from £49,507,000 to £43,977,000.

These reductions reflect the transfer of ministerial responsibility for the regulation of offshore safety to the Secretary of State for Employment. This follows my announcement to the House on 12 November 1990, columns 329-345.

The cash limit for class V, vote 9, which is a new vote providing for advisers' fees in connection with preliminary work on the privatisation of the coal industry, will be £1,000,000.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 3 June 1991]: There is one dedicated energy manager in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. It is FCO policy that all staff should be aware of the energy policies and the need for conservation. It is therefore impossible to identify the number of person-years devoted to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 3 June 1991]: It is not possible to provide the information in the detail requested as the figures are not readily available. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office only assumed direct responsibility for its fuel and utilities accounts in April 1990, before when they were paid by the Property Services Agency.

In 1989-90, a total of £55,360 (£60,730 in 1990-91 terms) was invested in improving energy efficiency in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. In 1990-91, the cash figure was £57,000, but in addition, the need for energy conservation was drawn to the attention of all staff working in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 3 June 1991]: An energy survey, including an energy audit, of the main Foreign and Commonwealth Office building in Whitehall was carried out in 1990. The consultants concluded that annual savings of £53,000 could be achieved with no capital expenditure and further savings of £7,100 per annum could be achieved with a capital expenditure of £19,400. The majority of the recommendations have already been implemented.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Research

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many ministerial visits were paid to each of the institutes of food research at (a) Norwich, (b) Reading and (c) Langford in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: In the past five years, four ministerial visits have been made to the Agricultural and Food Research Council institute of food research: once to Norwich in 1986, twice to Norwich in 1987 and once to Reading in 1990.

EMPLOYMENT

Cash Limits

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether any changes will be made to the cash limits or running costs limits for 1991-92 within the employment group.

Mr. Jackson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 1 (programmes and central services) will be increased by £90,392,000 from £2,266,849,000 to £2,357,241,000. The increase is the net result of an increase of £105,000,000 for employment training in England and Wales which was announced to the House on 26 February (partly offset by increased receipts of £8,408,000 from the Welsh Office, class XVI, vote 4); a transfer of £4,500,000 to class VI, vote 3 for offshore safety; a transfer of £1,186,000 to the Ministry of Defence class I, vote 1 for payments to participants in their youth training scheme and a transfer of £514,000 to the Employment Service, class VI, vote 2 to reflect the transfer of certain responsibilities for common services and telecommunications.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 2 (Employment Service) will be increased by £17,514,000 from £436,335,000 to £453,849,000. The increase is the net result of an increase of £55,000,000 for the increased costs of the administration of unemployment benefit and associated payments (offset by increased receipts of £38,000,000 from the Department of Social Security, class XIV, vote 4) and additional provision to help unemployed people, including extra counselling and jobsearch seminars, and a transfer of provision of £514,000 from class VI, vote 1 to cover certain common service responsibilities.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 3 (Health and Safety Commission and Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service), will be increased by £18,071,000 from £160,735,000 to £178,806,000. The increase reflects the transfer of the offshore safety function to the Health and Safety Executive and is the net result of a transfer of £12,549,000 from the Department of Energy, class V, votes 2 and 3 (partly offset by increased associated receipts of £353,000); a transfer of £4,500,000 from class VI vote 1; a transfer of £300,000 from the Department of Transport, class VIII, vote 2 (More than offset by increased associated receipts of £325,000); and increased provision of £1,046,000 to cover superannuation payments for offshore safety staff (fully offset by increased receipts to the civil superannuation vote).

The single running cost limit for the Department of Employment (class VI votes 1 and 2) will be increased by £55,000,000 from £1,002,699,000 to £1,057,699,000.

The running cost limit for the Health and Safety Commission (class VI vote 3) will increase by £11,129,000 from £121,957,000 to £133,086,000.

These increases will be charged to the reserve and therefore will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are employed in the east midlands in the textile or footwear industries; what percentage of the total work force of the east midlands this represents; what is his estimate of the number of people in the east midlands whose jobs depend upon the east midlands textile and footwear industry; if he will express this as a percentage of the total work force; and what the equivalent figures and percentages were in 1979.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Estimates of employment at the required level of detail are only available from the census of employment.

The available information is given in the table.

Tourism

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the central Government provision in the standard spending assessment for tourist expenditure and the expenditure on and income from tourism; and if he will take steps to encourage local authorities to recover expenditure on tourism from a tourist tax.

Mr. Key: I have been asked to reply.

Tourism will have an impact on a range of services provided by local authorities. These include those provided by districts, for example, on environmental health, refuse collection and street cleaning. There will also be an impact on a wider range of services, predominantly provided by counties, such as police and highway maintenance. For some services it is possible for the authorities concerned to offset expenditure with income from charges; car parking and leisure facilities are the most obvious examples.

There is no explicit element for tourism within the standard spending assessment for an authority, but, within the standard spending assessment components for district and county level services generally, the annual number of domestic visitor nights spent in the authority is one of the factors used in the distribution. A table showing the amount of standard spending assessment distributed on the basis of this factor alone for 1991-92 has been placed in the Library.

I am also placing in the Library a table showing the latest information on estimated central Government expenditure on tourism-related activities; and one on income from tourism as measured by the estimated spending of visitors.

On the question of a tourist tax, the Government have no specific proposals in this area. However, we are willing to consider as part of the local government review any suggestion for new local sources of revenue which might assist authorities in this area.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Agencies

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost of launching the Benefits Agency at (a) national, (b) area and (c) district levels.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member, and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost of launching the Contributions Agency at (a) national, (b) area and (c) district levels.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his assessment of the effect of the implementation of the Disability Living Allowance and Disability Working Allowance Bill upon entitlement to motability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The motability scheme will be available to people on the higher rate of the mobility component of disability living allowance in the same way as it is to people currently on mobility allowance. The extension of the higher rate of the mobility component to severely mentally handicapped people with severe behavioural problems means that more disabled people will have the opportunity to benefit from motability when DLA is introduced than at present.

Local Offices, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what change there has been in the numbers of claims and the time involved in (a) the assessment of a claim and (b) the notification of the assessment to the claimant in his Department's offices in the Doncaster area, following the installation of computer systems.

Miss Widdecombe: The delivery of social security benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member, and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Pensioners

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he plans to change the pension rules so that expatriate Britons can have their pensions upgraded as they are in the United Kingdom; and how much such a move would cost.

Mr. Jack: Annual pension increases are paid to United Kingdom pensioners living in 32 overseas countries. We have no plans to extend the payment of these increases to all UK pensioners worldwide. Such a move would cost £337 million a year at April 1991 rates of benefit.

Mortgage Debt

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table for the past five financial years showing how much his Department spent servicing mortgage lending debt incurred by borrowing from building societies.

Miss Widdecombe: Estimates of amounts included for mortgage interest in the assessment of supplementary benefit and, from 1988, income support, are given in the table for each of the past five years for which information is available.

Information about building society loans is not collected. The amounts shown relate to the interest on loans from all mortgage lenders. In 1989, some 281,000 claimants had an amount for mortgage interest included in their assessment. For the vast majority, the amount is less than £100·00 per week.

Social Assistance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions are taking place with the European Community concerning the establishment of a minimum level of social assistance in each member state; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Officials have been taking part in preliminary discussions with the Commission and other member states on a draft Council recommendation on common criteria concerning social assistance schemes. The resultant draft has not yet been received by the Government, but the indications are that it will not present serious problems for the United Kingdom, which is one of the member states that already has a comprehensive scheme in the shape of income support.

Cash Limits

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there have been any changes in the cash limits or running costs limits of his Department for 1991-92.

Mr. Scott: Subject to parliamentary approval on the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class XIV vote 4 (Administration and Miscellaneous Services) will be increased by £42,658,000, from £1,838,770,000 to £1,881,428,000. The revision takes account of the work involved in the uprating of child benefit and national insurance contributions on company cars as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget statement (£5,004,000); provision for the work carried out by the Department of Social Security on behalf of the Department of Employment (£4,589,000); a transfer to the Department of Health (class XIII vote 3) of £847,000; a transfer to the Home Office (class IX vote 3) of £4,000; a transfer from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (class XIII vote 6) of £269,000; a transfer from the Office of the Minister of the Civil Service (class XIX vote 1) of £10,000, an increase in agency payments to the Department of Employment (class VI vote 2) of £38,000,000 and a transfer from the civil superannuation vote (class XVIII vote 4) of £40,000. The additional requirements are partially offset by an increase in receipts of £4,403,000. The balance will be charged to the reserve and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

In addition, running cost changes result from a transfer to the Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) (£1,965,000) for the running costs of the Belfast social security centre. There will be a corresponding increase on the Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) vote 3 Administration and Miscellaneous Services; also a reduction of £50,000 to take account of a variation from a previously anticipated pattern of expenditure.

As a result of these changes, the running cost limit of the Department of Social Security is increased by £8,605,000 from £2,107,212,000 to £2,115,817,000.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will recalculate the tables provided, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell) Official Report, 27 March, columns 443-48, to include the effects of the Community Charges (General Reduction) Act 1991.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 8 May 1991]: The information is set out in the tables. All assumptions are as set out in the published tax-benefit model tables. Each family is assumed to live in council property appropriate to its size and to pay estimated average rent and community charge.

The weighted average headline community charge for Great Britain in accordance with the Community Charges (General Reduction) Act is £246 a year as from April. The tables have been adjusted to take into account all the other April Budget proposals/benefit changes, as well as the proposed changes in October.

It should be noted that the results in the tables remain arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people and cannot claim to be representative of the population at large. The tables use hypothetical rents so they do not reflect the full range of housing costs which people can pay.

Notes:

[1] All rates are in respect of not contracted-out employment.

[2] Includes National Insurance surcharge.

[3] Percentage rates are applied to all earnings once the level of earnings reaches a certain point: In 1986-87, for example, NICs would have been levied at a single rate of 7 per cent. on gross earnings of £65·00.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress he has made in setting up the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Jack: Pursuant to my reply of 15 April at column 9-10, no final decisions have yet been made on the location of administration centres for the Child Support Agency, since its establishment depends on the passage of the Child Support Bill currently before the House. However, for planning purposes the assumption is that there should be up to six new offices housing about 3,000 staff—in addition to the CSA staff who will be based in local offices of the Department's Benefits Agency, making a total of about 4,500 in all. It is the Government's intention to locate the new administration centres in different areas throughout the country as part of its policy of relocating civil service jobs.

Substantial progress has been made in identifying suitable locations with over 100 sites visited by my officials at 31 different locations. Detailed negotiations and discussions are being conducted about six particular locations in Falkirk, Belfast, Birkenhead, the black country (Dudley), Hastings and Plymouth—all of which appear to meet the criteria required for supporting a large CSA office. The discussions are aimed at establishing the ability of each location to meet the Department's accommodation specification, cost requirements and timetable. Once I am satisfied on all these matters, I will confirm the final decisions on the locations of the new administration centres. If successful, this will create new jobs for people in the travel-to-work areas in these six locations.

The Department's decision to locate the work of the new agency in different parts of the country should be seen in conjunction with the announcement earlier this year confirming the location of 700 more jobs in the north-east —at Newcastle—for the Contributions Agency, in addition to the 1,000 jobs for Newcastle announced last year. A further 800 DSS jobs are due to move to Leeds from mid-1992 as part of the initiative to relocate work from DSS headquarters offices in London and Southampton. From April 1992, the administration of the new benefits for disabled people will require about 1,100 staff who will be located in a number of areas spread around the country. Relocation of work from London social security offices has been in progress since 1989 and a total of over 1,500 new jobs have been created in Glasgow, Belfast and Ashton-in-Makerfield. By the end of 1992, it is estimated that about 83 per cent. of jobs in DSS will be in locations outside London.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland Railways

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what would be the cost of providing two years' pensionable pay when death occurs during service for employees of Northern Ireland Railways; and what is the cost of the present scheme.

Mr. Needham: Employees of Northern Ireland Railways qualify for membership of the pension scheme administered by the Northern Ireland Local Government Officers' Superannuation Committee under the Superannuation (Northern Ireland) Order 1972.

The cost of providing benefits under the NILGOSC scheme is not recorded on an individual basis. It would not be possible, therefore, without an actuarial valuation to calculate the cost of providing two years' pensionable pay when death occurs during service.

The cost to existing members of the NILGOSC scheme is 5 per cent. of salary for manual employees and 6 per cent. of salary for non-manual employees with employing authorities contributing 6·2 per cent.

Employees of Northern Ireland Railways are, of course, entitled to join a private pension scheme, the benefits and cost of which may differ from the NILGOSC scheme.

Regional Waste Licensing

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions are being made to establish a regional waste licensing system for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The Government are currently preparing proposals for a comprehensive waste management strategy for Northern Ireland which will take into account comments received from district councils on the Aspinwall report. The proposed strategy will be the subject of consultation in due course.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what resources are being allocated to ensure that stated targets for listed buildings, surveying historic monuments and sites and designating conservation areas can be met.

Mr. Needham: In 1991-92, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland will spend £5·1 million, including staff costs and programmes expenditure, on tasks or functions related to historic building and monuments. The Department remains on course for meeting the targets set out in Government's White Paper "This Common Inheritance" (Cmd 1200).

Street Lighting

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used to decide whether any part of a road in the Downpatrick and Craigavon divisions of the Department of the Environment should be provided with street lighting.

Mr. Needham: The criteria used to decide whether any part of a road in the Downpatrick and Craigavon divisions should be provided with street lighting are traffic volumes, road safety, and the density of housing and other developments.

Road Improvement Schemes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what major road improvement schemes have been carried out in the Downpatrick and Craigavon divisions between 1 March 1984 and 31 March 1991.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is:

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what moneys have been invested in major road improvement schemes in each road division in the Six Counties between 1 March 1985 and 31 March 1991.

Mr. Needham: Expenditure on major road improvement schemes in the past six financial years has been:

Ferry Services

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the increased fares on the ferry service between Strangford and Portaferry.

Mr. Needham: One representation to the most recent increase in fares has been received from Down district council.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much it cost to operate the Strangford to Portaferry ferry service in each of the years from 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1991.

Mr. Needham: Operating costs for the Strangford to Portaferry ferry service were:

Financial year	Cost (£'000)
1985-86	484
1986-87	553
1987-88	526
1988-89	674
1989-90	822
1990-91	783

Concessionary Fares

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce reduced transport fares for women on reaching retirement age at 60 years.

Mr. Needham: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland is precluded by the provisions of the Sex Discrimination (Northern Ireland) Order 1976 from making a distinction on age grounds between men and women. The qualifying age for concessionary half-fare travel by bus and rail in Northern Ireland is 65 years for men and women, and there are no plans to alter it.

Youth Services

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the education budget has been allocated to youth services in each year from 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1991 in the Southern education and library board.

Dr. Mawhinney:

Year	Percentage of recurrent block grant allocated to youth service	Percentage of capital grant allocated to youth service
1985-86	2·88	1·80
1986-87	2·80	2·14

1988-89	3·14	1·09
1989-90	3·10	0·84
1990-91	2·74	1·04

Footpaths and Bridleways

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by year for the past 10 years, and for the current year to date, the number of (a) public footpaths and (b) public bridleways that have been (i) created and (ii) closed to the general public.

Mr. Needham: The creation and closure of public footpaths and bridleways is a district council responsibility and the information sought is not held centrally.

Renewable Energy Programme

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Northern Ireland will be included in the review of the renewable energy programme.

Mr. Needham: Yes.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards correcting the under-employment of Protestants on the staff of the Fair Employment Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I understand that the 1991 monitoring return made by the commission shows that 30, 53 per cent., of its employees are Protestant and 27, 47 per cent., are Roman Catholic. The commission's approach to the religious composition of its staff, including its wish to attract more applicants from the Protestant side of the community, was set out in its press release of 16 October 1990, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

Detention Centres (Lay Visitors)

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the criteria for appointments by the police authority in Northern Ireland for the selection of lay visitors to non-paramilitary suspects in Royal Ulster Constabulary detention centres.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The appointment of lay visitors is a matter for the Police Authority for Northern Ireland.

SCOTLAND

Opera House Edinburgh

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for an opera house on the site of the Empire theatre, Edinburgh; and what public bodies are involved in taking this project forward.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been kept advised of Edinburgh district council's plans to convert the Empire theatre into an international venue for opera, ballet, concerts and drama. In addition to the district council, Lothian regional council, Lothian and Edinburgh enterprise company, Historic Scotland, the Scottish tourist board and the Scottish Arts Council are likely to be involved in the project.

Scottish Agricultural College

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which agricultural advice services provided by the Scottish agricultural college are wholly publicly funded.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Services which are undertaken for the public good: that is, the benefits accrue to the whole community and not only to the individual. They include the following.

(a) General advice on what is needed to conform with statutory requirements (Such as those on pesticides, health and safety at work or animal welfare).
(b) All general advice on animal welfare.
(c) Initial general advice on conservation and diversification.
(d) General education and training for the rural community.
(e) Veterinary investigation service tests related to notifiable diseases.
(f) Monitoring services on patterns of animal health, welfare and infertility.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he applies, and by what authority, in determining which advisory work of the Scottish agricultural college shall be partly publicly funded.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Authority for the provision of agricultural advice is derived from section 4(4) of the Small Landholders (Scotland) Act 1911. Advice which is partly publicly funded is advice the benefits of which accrue partly to the community and partly to the individual user. It includes the following:

Specified services which would otherwise be fully chargeable but which are supplied to crofters at a reduced rate because of the effect of low income and relatively poor resources in the crofting area.

Services which are charged at a standard price, which does not cover the cost of delivering them in remote or otherwise disadvantaged areas.

Work associated with animal and crop disease surveillance.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the advisory work of the Scottish agricultural college which is partly publicly funded is chargeable to the client.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the year 1989-90, charges for partly publicly funded advice accounted for some 25 per cent. of total costs.

Arts (Buildings)

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of those buildings used for the arts in Scotland which have been built, renovated or improved with Government funds since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table lists the properties occupied by the three Scottish national institutions, which are directly funded by my Department through building programme grant in aid. All of these properties have, to varying degrees, been subject to building or improvement works since 1979. In addition, the Government provided £9·4 million—on an exceptional basis—towards the construction of the Burrell gallery in Glasgow.

In addition, my Department supports the development of local authority museums, galleries and libraries through the revenue support grant. Other support for the arts in Scotland, including an element for building projects, is provided by the Office of Arts and Libraries, through grants to arts bodies by the Scottish Arts Council.

Specific major capital building and maintenance projects since 1979 include (the figures are rounded to the nearest £0·5m):

1. The conversion of the former John Watson's School to become the Gallery of Modern Art. (£3·5 million).

2. The construction of the first phase of the National Library's accommodation at Causewayside, Edinburgh. (£11 million).

3. Restoration and repair works at the Royal Museum of Scotland. (£8 million, on completion).

4. Stonework restoration at the Findlay Building in Queen Street, Edinburgh (home of the Scottish National Portrait Gallery and of the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland). (£4 million).

5. Refurbishment of the National Gallery of Scotland. (£1 million).

6. Recladding of the hangars at the Museum of Flight, East Fortune Airfield, East Lothian. (£1 million).

Construction work has now begun on the second phase of the National Library's Causewayside Building (which is costing £22 million), and I have committed resources of £22 million (exclusive of VAT and fees) to the construction of the new Museum of Scotland. Other major projects to be financed by the Government are: the provision of new storage accommodation for the National Museums (over £4 million), a major programme of fire precaution works at the National Library's HQ Building in George IV Bridge, Edinburgh (£4 million); and restoration work at the Royal Scottish Academy Building in Princes Street, Edinburgh (over £5 million).

Footpaths and Bridleways

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by year for the last 10 years, and for the current year to date, the number of (a) public footpaths and (b) public bridleways that have been (i) created and (ii) closed to the general public.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not kept centrally.

Fish Farms

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are in place for formal consultation when marine fish farms, which were established before the formal consultation procedures were introduced in 1989, apply to the Crown Estate for the renewal of their sea bed lease.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Each lease will be subject to individual review by the Crown Estate as and when it falls due for renewal. The Crown Estate will undertake any consultations it considers necessary in the light of the circumstances at each review.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the Crown Estate's very sensitive areas in Scottish waters and the number of fish farm leases allocated in each;

(2) how many sea bed leases for (a) salmon farms and (b) shellfish farms are located in areas designated as very sensitive areas by the Crown Estate.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table shows the number of sea bed leases allocated to salmon and shellfish farms in the very sensitive areas defined and identified by the Crown Estate:

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sea bed leases for marine fish farms are now in force in Scotland, for (a) finfish and (b) shellfish; and how many of each were established before the formal consultation procedures were introduced in 1986.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand from the Crown Estate that there are currently 308 sea bed leases for finfish farming and 392 for shellfish farming off the coast of Scotland. Of these 158 finfish and 112 shellfish leases were granted before October 1986.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of extant sea bed leases for marine salmon farms in Scotland, including (a) map reference, (b) area in hectares, (c) date of lease agreements, (d) date of expiry of lease, (e) production limits and when imposed or revised and (f) whether each application was subjected to (i) the formal consultation procedure, (ii) statutory environmental assessment and (iii) consideration by the advisory committee.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand from the Crown Estate that the information requested at points (a), (b), (c) and (d) is not available in the form requested except at disproportionate cost to public funds. Lists of leases giving basic information are, however, made available by the Crown Estate on request. I am also informed that Crown Estate leases granted under the formal consultation procedures contain conditions specifying the equipment which may be installed; the consequential production limits are not separately listed.

All new site applications submitted to the Crown Estate have been subject to the formal consultation procedures since October 1986, and to the provisions of the Environmental Assessment (Salmon Farming in Marine Waters) Regulations 1988 which came into effect on 15 July 1988. One application has met the criteria for which such an assessment is required.

One case has been referred to the advisory committee for its consideration.

Whisky

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much whisky was sold in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) in export sales for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Lang: The statistics requested are as follows:

Whisky sales—1981-1990

Substandard Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is his estimate of the number of houses in Renfrew district which are below minimum required standards; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a table showing the number of (a) houses of all forms of tenure which are below tolerable standard, (b) local authority houses which have rising and penetrating dampness, (c) Scottish Homes houses which have rising and penetrating dampness, (d) local authority houses with condensation and rising and penetrating dampness and (e) Scottish Homes houses with condensation and rising and penetrating dampness, in (i) Renfrew district and (ii) Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office does not make estimates of houses that are below minimum required standards.

Local authorities' estimates of the number of dwellings in their districts below the tolerable standard at 31 March 1990 were published in tables 16 and 17 of the "Scottish Office Statistical Bulletin HSG/1991/2". Copies were sent to all Members representing Scottish constituencies and are available in the Library.

Local authorities provide estimates of the numbers of local authority dwellings affected by condensation and dampness to the Scottish Office each year. The figures for Renfrew district and Scotland setting out the position as at 31 March 1990 are shown in the table. Comparable information for Scottish Homes stock is not held centrally.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about investment in housing for disabled people; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A small number of local authorities have made such representations in recent months in the context of housing capital allocations for 1991-92, and these were taken into account when decisions on final allocations were made in March. The Government have made gross housing capital allocations to local authorities for 1991-92 of £452·5 million on the HRA block for investment in authorities' own housing stock and £111·1 million on the non-HRA block for investment in private sector housing. It is for local authorities to make decisions on investment in housing for disabled people, in the light of local priorities and the resources available.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to improve transport for people with disabilities in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office works closely with the Department of Transport's disability unit to ensure that public transport is easier to use and that personal mobility is increased for disabled people. We have made a grant of £20,000 available to Disability Scotland to enable it to run a mobility roadshow in Scotland, at the Ingliston exhibition centre from 20 to 22 September 1991. This will be the first event of its kind in Scotland, and will be modelled on the biennial event held at Crowthorne, Berkshire. It will assist disabled people in Scotland to make informed choices on the vehicles, equipment and mobility aids best suited to their requirements.

A Scottish Office official acts as an observer on the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee, the statutory committee set up to advise the Government on transport and mobility matters relating to disabled people. Two of the 20 members of this committee are Scottish. The Scottish Office also has an observer on the access and mobility committee of Disability Scotland.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will bring forward proposals to confer on the police additional powers to prosecute those who abuse or illegally use orange badges intended only for the benefit of genuinely disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is already an offence for an able-bodied person to use a parking place reserved for an orange badge holder on public roads or in a local authority off-street car park which has been designated by an order made under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984. It is also an offence for a non-badge-holder to display a badge on a vehicle which is parked illegally in circumstances where a badge holder would have been entitled to park. Both offences carry a maximum penalty of level 3 on the standard scale. However, in the light of comments made during debate on aspects of the orange badge scheme at the Committee stage of the Road Traffic Bill in another place, further consideration is being given to the introduction of an offence which would be committed by the display of an orange badge when the legitimate holder is not with the vehicle.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to launch a public campaign to discourage the abuse of parking in areas designated for (a) the specific use of disabled people and (b) the exclusive use of disabled people in possession of orange badges.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The regulations relating to the orange badge scheme of parking concessions have been the subject of a major review. The abuse of parking areas designated for orange badge holders was among the matters considered in the review. Appropriate publicity will be arranged when amending regulations are introduced to advise the public of the changes to the scheme and of the importance of respecting the concessions on parking for the disabled.

Housing Finance

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the housing authorities with capital debt at high enough levels to attract Government subsidy in each year for the past 10 years; if he will show the total of subsidy to each authority in each year; and if he will express the subsidy as per house.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A local housing authority receives housing support grant when estimated eligible expenditure exceeds estimated eligible income in respect of the authority's housing revenue account. The level of capital debt is one of the factors which influences estimated eligible expenditure. The amounts of housing support grant paid to individual authorities in each year since 1981-82, expressed as a total and as an amount per council house, are shown in the table.

Horticulture

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office spent on the promotion of the Scottish horticultural industry in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department has a general sponsoring role in relation to the Scottish horticultural industry. This is discharged in a variety of ways and detailed costs are not held centrally.

The Department funds research and development on horticulture at the Scottish Crop Research Institute, Dundee. Since 1981-92, expenditure has been as follows:

1981-82	1,698
1982-83	1,567
1983-84	1,174
1984-85	1,064
1985-86	918
1986-87	1,104
1987-88	1,080
1988-89	835
1989-90	840
1990-91	1,168
1991-92	855

Hospitality

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by the Scottish Office on hospitality in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lang: The information is shown in the table:

Year	Amount spent on hospitality £
1979-80	15,283
1980-81	19,427
1981-82	20,762
1982-83	31,588
1983-84	26,287
1984-85	27,301
1985-86	35,815
1986-87	38,315
1987-88	41,983
1988-89	42,987
1989-90	60,173
1990-91	65,123

Rents to Mortgages Scheme

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sales have been completed under the rents to mortgages scheme in Renfrew district; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: By 30 April 1991, 15 sales had been completed under the rent to mortgage scheme within Scottish Homes' Renfrew and Inverclyde district and a further six applications were being processed. Since the extension of the rent to mortgage scheme to local authority tenants from 1 April 1991, some 20,000 expressions of interest have been received from across the country, including over 1,300 from Renfrewshire and Argyll.

Homeless Persons Act

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have been considered for priority under the Homeless Persons (Scotland) Act by Renfrew district council in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers of households that applied to Renfrew district council under the homeless persons legislation and were assessed as being in priority need are set out in the table. The returns do not record the numbers of persons in these households. Returns for 1990-91 are not yet complete.

Year of application	Number
1980-81	390
1981-82	486
1982-83	612
1983-84	520
1984-85	572
1985-86	979
1986-87	867
1987-88	693
1988-89	800
1989-90	727

Ferguslie Mills

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to reach a decision on the application to demolish the category A listed Ferguslie Mills in Paisley; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The hon. Member has written to my right hon. Friend on this matter. I expect to be in a position to reply to him shortly.

Party Conferences

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the relevant chief constables giving the total policing costs arising from (a) the Conservative party conference in Perth and (b) the Labour party conference in Aberdeen in 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand from the chief constables of the forces concerned that the additional costs involved were £120,000 and £560, respectively. The level of resources provided for the policing of party conferences is an operational matter for the chief constable concerned in the light of all the circumstances including the threat assessment.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount spent by the Registers of Scotland in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Registers of Scotland in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total amount spent by the Registers of Scotland was £38,234·59 for contracts placed with CCTA system consultancy service of HM Treasury to assess their information systems requirements.

"Registration: Proposals for Change"

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, following the publication of the White Paper "Registration: proposals for change" (Cm. 939), he will consider the introduction of legislation to enable secular marriages to be carried out by magistrates, mayors or provosts, to allow them to take place in civic and other specified buildings and to allow greater flexibility in the services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The White Paper, Cm. 939, presented proposals for change in England and Wales. Scotland's registration system, governed by more recent legislation, already provides considerable flexibility, notably the opportunity for couples to be married in a civil ceremony at any office where there is an authorised registrar, and not just in the area or areas of residence of the parties. The registrar general has invited local authorities to consider how additional flexibility might be provided within the present system, and to submit to him schemes for such improvement. As an example, he has suggested that authorities might wish to designate suitable rooms in other civic buildings as part of registrars' offices, for the purpose of holding civil marriage ceremonies there. My right hon. Friend has no plans for legislation to permit the solemnisation of civil marriages by persons other than registrars.

Students' Allowances

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish details of any changes in students' allowances for session 1991-92.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am publishing today the main rates of allowances payable under the postgraduate students' allowances scheme for vocational postgraduate courses which do not attract student loans, together with the rates of various supplementary allowances payable to both undergraduate and vocational postgraduate award holders. The main rates of maintenance allowance for undergraduates will remain frozen at their 1990-91 cash levels following the introduction of student loans.

Details of the new rates have been placed in the Library. The increases in these rates are broadly in line with the 6 per cent. increase in the overall student maintenance provision announced by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science.

In addition, there are two significant changes to the terms of the students' allowances scheme with effect from session 1991-92. These are:

(i) Eligible students undertaking full-time courses leading to the award of a Higher National Certificate, and certain analogous courses, will be offered assistance under the Scheme; and

(ii) Eligible students who have successfully completed a Higher National Diploma, or any comparable 2-year course, may qualify for assistance from year two of a degree course, irrespective of the subject being studied.

Caledonian MacBrayne

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what decisions he has reached on the location of the company headquarters for Caledonian MacBrayne Ltd. and the future of the company's services on the upper Clyde.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has accepted the advice of the board of Caledonian MacBrayne Ltd. that, on grounds of cost effectiveness, the headquarters of the company should remain in Gourock. He welcomes, however, the company's commitment to Oban, as indicated by the substantial improvements made to shore facilities for passengers and commercial vehicles in recent years.

My right hon. Friend has also decided, in the light of current demand uncertainties, arising particularly from the proposed closure of the Holy Loch naval base, that arrangements for Caledonian MacBrayne's services in the upper Clyde, between Gourock and Dunoon and between Wemyss bay and Rothesay, should continue unchanged meantime. He will ensure, however, that the board of the company, and the Scottish Office, monitor the position closely over the coming months; and he has not ruled out privatisation of these services in the longer term.

Cash Limits

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to make any changes to the cash limits for 1991-92 within his responsibility.

Mr. Lang: Yes, I intend to make changes to six of the cash limits within my responsibility as follows.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XV, vote 3: Training programmes; roads and transport, and industrial support, Scotland, previously known as training programmes and industrial support, Scotland, will be increased by £161,194,000 from £444,488,000 to £605,682,000. This increase reflects the transfer of responsibility for roads and transport from the Scottish Office Environment Department to the Scottish Office Industry Department with effect from 29 July 1991, and takes account of increased provision of £13,600,000 for Scottish Enterprise and £1,400,000 for Highlands and Islands Enterprise in respect of Scotland's share of the increased provision for adult training, previously announced by the Secretary of State for Employment on 26 February 1991. There will be a consequent reduction of £146,192,000 in the cash limit for class XV, vote 5, roads, transport and environmental services, Scotland from £279,635,000 to £133,443,000.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XV, vote 13, law, order, miscellaneous health services and social work services, Scotland, previously known as law, order and miscellaneous health services, Scotland, will be increased by £31,326,000 from £180,438,000 to £211,764,000 to reflect the transfer of provision for social work services from class XV, vote 14, education, arts and libraries and also to cover the transfer of the provision for Scottish prison headquarters staff from class XV, vote 20, Scottish Office administration. This latter transfer will increase the running cost provision on class XV, vote 13 by £2,797,000 from £100,662,000 to £103,459,000.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class XV, vote 14, education, arts and libraries, Scotland, previously known as education, arts, libraries and social work, Scotland, will be reduced by £32,041,000 from £253,004,000 to £220,963,000 to take account of the transfer of responsibility for social work services from the Scottish Office Education Department to the Scottish Office Home and Health Department. A corresponding increase is being sought on class XV, vote 13, law, order and miscellaneous health services, Scotland.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class XV, vote 20 will be decreased by £2,797,000 from £143,239,000 to £140,442,000 to cover the transfer of prison headquarters staff to class XV, vote 13. Accordingly the running cost provision on class XV, vote 20 will be decreased by £2,797,000 from £139,395,000 to £136,598,000.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XV, vote 26, hospital, community health, family health (part) and other health services, Scotland is being increased by £26,162,000 from £2,306,242,000 to £2,332,404,000 to help meet the costs of pay awards following the 1991 report of the review bodies for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine and on doctors' and dentists' remuneration. This also includes an amount of £3,462,000 as a result of the transfer of provision for training from class XV, vote 13, law, order and miscellaneous health services, Scotland to class XV, vote 26.

There is no change overall to the Department's running costs limit. As already announced the increase in respect of the review bodies' awards and the provision for employment training have been charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. There is no net impact on public expenditure from the other changes shown above.

First Aid

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to assist local education authorities to meet their responsibilities for first aid provision in schools and colleges.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 June 1991]: My Department drew the attention of education authorities in October last year to the revised version of the Health and Safety Commission's approved code of practice which gives practical guidance with respect to the Health and Safety (First Aid) Regulations 1981. In addition my Department is currently preparing guidance on first aid provision in schools and colleges in Scotland which will be issued to education authorities this summer.

Gas and Oil Policies

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money his Department has invested in educational establishments, organisations and individuals for training and retraining in work connected with the gas and oil industry over each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 June 1991]: This information is not collected centrally.

Gas Pipeline

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from local fishermen, marine-ferry operators and local authorities, concerning the laying of a gas pipeline between Rothesay and Dunoon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 June 1991]: None. The Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department consulted interested parties, including the local fishermen's association. A licence for the pipeline, required under the provisions of part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, was issued by the Department on 2 May 1991.

Farming Statistics

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farmers, partners, directors and farm workers were employed on a county-by-county basis in Scotland in June 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Scottish counties ceased to be used for agricultural statistics purposes after 1975 following local government reform. The number of farmers, spouses doing farm work and farm workers employed on main holdings in June 1990, by local authority region, is shown in the table. Partners and directors are not separately enumerated in the census, but are included either as farmers or farm workers.

Region	Number of farmers	Number of spouses doing farm work	Number of farm workers
Borders	1,296	512	2,492

Trunk Road Schemes

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about progress on trunk road schemes during 1990-91 and the progress expected in 1991-92.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 24 April, at column 460.

Road Schemes

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about progress on road schemes from (a) Ballygrant to Bridgend, Islay (A846), (b) Salen to Tobermory (A848) and (c) Strachur to Leanach (A886).

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: These roads are local roads and, as such, are the responsibility of Strathclyde regional council as the local roads authority.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Information for the period prior to 1 April 1990 is not available. My Department is currently collecting details of energy consumption and costs in 1990-91, and I shall write to the hon. Gentleman when the information is complete.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 June 1991]: A part-time energy manager has been appointed and many staff with other duties devote part of their time to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Thirty-five audits were carried out in my Department, excluding the associated Departments and the Scottish prison service, and these led to a large number of recommendations—mainly of a technical nature—designed to improve energy efficiency.

DEFENCE

Job Losses

1. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received concerning job losses in the defence industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others.

The Gulf

11. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what analysis he has made of the effect of air power in winning the war in the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The success of the allied air campaign clearly paved the way for the liberation of Kuwait. We are continuing our detailed analysis of the conflict, together with the conclusions to be drawn from it.

"Options for Change"

12. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to report to the House on his consideration of "Options for Change".

Mr. Tom King: We are proceeding in consultation with our NATO allies to carry forward our work on "Options for Change". The achievement of agreement on the United Kingdom role in the rapid reaction corps is an important further step forward in this. As I have already made clear, I intend to set out the progress so far, and the way ahead, in the annual defence White Paper, which I hope to publish before the summer recess.

19. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about the role of the Territorial Army as part of his "Options for Change" discussions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have received a number of representations concerning the Territorial Army's role in our future plans for the armed forces.

24. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings have taken place with civil service trade union representatives regarding the "Options for Change" study.

27. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings have taken place with civil service trade union representatives regarding the "Options for Change" study.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Progress on the work on "Options for Change" has been discussed at the last two meetings of the departmental Whitley council and at the last four meetings of the joint industrial Whitley council. In addition, there have been a number of informal meetings between trade union representatives and Ministers and senior officials.

Low Flying

15. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any new radar equipment for use in low-flying training exercises has been set up on the Scottish side of the border in the vicinity of Spadeadam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No. A number of mobile ground radar installations are, however, held at RAF Spadeadam and are deployed as necessary during low flying exercises.

Chieftain Tank

17. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further delays he anticipates before the announcement of the replacement for the Chieftain tank.

29. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the outcome of the completion for replacing the Chieftain tank.

Mr. Allan Clark: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle).

Frigates

18. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current number of frigates on order for the Royal Navy and when he expects the next ship of the type 23 class to be brought into service.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There are currently seven type 23 frigates on order. The next ship of the class is expected to enter service before the end of the year.

Nuclear Weapons

20. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are taken to minimise the risk of accidental detonation of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The designs of all British nuclear weapons comply with stringent safety standards. Nuclear weapons are afforded the highest practicable procedural and physical safeguards during manufacture, storage and transport.

22. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has of the development of nuclear weapons by countries outside NATO and the former Warsaw pact.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Outside NATO and the Warsaw pact, China is the one declared nuclear weapons state. Argentina, Brazil, India, Israel, Pakistan and South Africa all have significant nuclear facilities not subject to International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) safeguards, as does North Korea which is not recognised as a state by Her Majesty's Government. None of these countries has declared itself to have or to be seeking nuclear weapons. In addition, Iraq was thought to have an active nuclear programme prior to the Gulf conflict. UN Security Council resolution 687 requires that Iraq unconditionally agrees not to acquire or develop nuclear weapons.

Gurkha Regiments

21. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Gurkha regiments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend told the House this afternoon, detailed work on the composition of the Army and the future of specific regiments continues. Once the process of consultation within the Army on how to proceed is complete, we shall come forward with more detailed announcements.

NATO

23. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with other Defence Ministers regarding NATO forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Garrett).

Closures, Yorkshire

25. Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to close any defence establishments in Yorkshire.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Detailed measures implementing the changes foreshadowed in the statement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 25 July 1990 will be announced at the appropriate times.

Indonesia

26. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met his counterpart in Indonesia; what was discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has not met General Moerdani, though he hopes to have the opportunity to do so at some stage.

Fighter Aircraft

28. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to meet the German Minister of Defence to discuss the numbers of European fighter aircraft to be ordered by the German air force and the RAF; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend has regular meetings with his German colleague at which a wide range of issues are discussed.

Manufacturing Industry

30. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the British defence manufacturing industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) on 23 May 1991 Official Report, column 613.

Cash Limits

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he can announce any changes to the defence cash limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Tom King: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary summer supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

Defence cash limits

£'000s

Class and vote	Current cash limit	Change	Revised cash limit
I, 1	10,203,592	+256,740	10,460,332
I, 2	8,680,982	+868,841	9,549,823
I, 3	1,615,717	+4,630	1,620,347
I, 5	487,395	+26,523	513,918

These changes, which increase the block defence cash limit by £1,156,734,000 from £22,875,780,000 to £24,032,514,000, are principally to cover increased expenditure identified so far arising from the United Kingdom military commitment in the Gulf area, and its related effect on other parts of the defence programme. This increase is within the estimate of about £1·5 billion announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 18 April 1991 at column 558. The increase in defence provision for 1991-92 will be charged to the Reserve and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure. This increase will be offset by the cash contributions from other Governments expected to be received in this financial year.

Ceremonial Duties

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the performance of soldiers and horses concerned with ceremonial duties.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The consistently outstanding performance of both the soldiers and the horses concerned with ceremonial duties is a source of national pride. I look forward to seeing them at the Queen's birthday parade on 15 June.

Gulf Trust Fund

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been collected for the Gulf trust fund; which organisations or individuals have benefited, and by how much; what he intends to do with any remaining or additional money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Donations to the Gulf Trust currently total around £2·5 million. This money is being passed to the service benevolent funds where it will remain earmarked to meet the needs of service personnel and their families which have arisen as a result of death or injury in the Gulf conflict. Individual grants are being made by the benevolent funds in accordance with their trust deeds.

Army Command Structure

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the Army command structure in Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I expect to be able to make an announcement shortly on the reorganisation of the United Kingdom land forces district structure and its implications for Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will meet the chairman of the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve for Wales, Maindy barracks, Cardiff to discuss the Army command structure in Wales;

(2) if he will meet the Assembly of Welsh Counties to discuss the Army command structure in Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans for such meetings.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has had concerning the Army command structure in Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A number of representations have been made, principally in the form of letters from Members of Parliament and parliamentary questions.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 5 June 1991

EMPLOYMENT

Redundancies

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to introduce further legislation to protect employees made redundant by closure of businesses.

Mr. Forth: Debts owing to employees whose employers have become insolvent may, within certain limits, be paid by my Department. In the case of statutory redundancy pay, the employee may be paid even where there is no formal insolvency. I have no plans at present for further measures.

New Businesses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new businesses have been created in the past five years as a proportion of the number lost; what were the comparable figures for 1974 to 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Between the end of 1984 and the end of 1989, there were an estimated 1,082,000 new registrations for VAT, 29 per cent. greater than the number of deregistrations. Between the end of 1974 and the end of 1979, there were an estimated 809,000 new registrations for VAT, 12 per cent. greater than the number of deregistrations.

TRANSPORT

Articulated Lorries

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will now bring in regulations which forbid the use of articulated lorries built before 1982 which do not have brake variable sensing units fitted on the trailers.

Mr. Chope: We are looking at the feasibility of requiring variable sensing units to be fitted to trailers built before 1982. This will involve balancing the technical and cost implications against the likely benefits.

ENVIRONMENT

Construction Industry

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to assist the construction and building industry.

Mr. Yeo: Government policy is to bring inflation under control, to reduce interest rates accordingly and thus to enable the construction industry to take full advantage of market opportunities.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next plans to meet representatives of the construction industry to discuss the recession.

Mr. Yeo: The Secretary of State and his Ministers are engaged in a continuing round of discussions with representatives of the construction industry.

Pollution Control

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the research conducted on behalf of his Department on the utility of tradeable permits in pollution control.

Mr. Baldry: This research, by the consultants London Economics Ltd., is still continuing.

Kuwait Oil Fires

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has from the World Meteorological Organisation's global atmosphere watch about (a) pollution in the global atmosphere as a result of Kuwait oil fires and (b) the effects of Kuwait oil fires in (1) western China, (2) the Himalayas and (3) the Indian sub-continent.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Only limited data are available at the World Meteorological Organisation in Geneva from this programme. Very small concentrations of soot particles have been detected in Mauna Loa, Hawaii, but there are no indications of significant atmospheric pollution on a global scale. Information on the specific regions mentioned is not available at present.

CIVIL SERVICE

Chief Executives

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service (1) how many of the 50 executive agency chief executives are Oxbridge graduates;

(2) if he will list each executive agency, the chief executive and the subject of first degree possessed by him or her.

Mr. Renton: This information is not held centrally.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Goodwin Sands

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much aggregate was dredged from the Goodwin sands last year; and what were the comparable figures for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In 1990 402,084 tonnes of aggregate was dredged from the Goodwin sands. Comparable information from 1980 is as follows:

Year	Quantity dredged
1980	Nil
1981	Nil
1982	Nil

Year	Quantity dredged
1983	Nil
1984	599,200
1985	887,856
1986	253,361
1987	Nil
1988	2,716,789
1989	2,432,732
1990	402,084

Inland Revenue (Cash Limit)

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any changes are proposed in the cash limit and running cost limit for 1991-92 for the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Maude: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class XVIII, vote 6 will be reduced by £24,857,000 from £1,568,465,000 to £1,543,608,000. There is no change in the Department's running cost limit. The change in the cash limit arises from an increase in the charges paid by the Department of Social Security to the Inland Revenue in respect of the costs of collecting national insurance contributions.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of the Treasury in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Expenditure on measures to improve energy efficiency are aggregated with maintenance costs and could only be separately identified at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in the Treasury in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Two energy audits have been carried out in the Department in the last five years. The first, in 1987, concentrated on the lighting efficiency of Treasury buildings. Its main recommendations will be taken on board as part of a major rewiring exercise of the building starting in summer 1991. The second is currently being undertaken in the Great George street building, and its findings are not yet available.

DEFENCE

Fishery Protection Vessels

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to order fishery protection vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Fishery protection is undertaken by a variety of ships including mine counter-measures vessels and offshore patrol vessels. We have no current plans to order new vessels specifically for this role, although we plan to place further orders for mine counter-measures vessels. The size and timing of orders has yet to be decided.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if public notice of a tender for a fishery protection vessel would need to be inserted in the European Community's Official Journal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There is no requirement to publish a public notice of a tender in the European Community's Official Journal for those Royal Navy vessels which perform fishery protection duties.

Royal Air Force

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) of 17 May, Official Report, column 304, what further changes to the Royal Air Force are planned under "Options for Change".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal Air Force will shortly be implementing two further measures foreshadowed in the statement by my hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on "Options for Change" on 25 July at columns 470-73. First, there will be a small reduction in the number of Nimrod aircraft in service at RAF Kinloss and RAF St. Mawgan, from 1 July 1991. One aircraft will be withdrawn from service at RAF ST. Mawgan, and two from RAF Kinloss.

Secondly, the Buccaneer operational conversion unit at RAF Lossiemouth will start to disband from 1 October 1991, with residual training requirements met by the Buccaneer squadrons themselves. This is the first step in the programme to replace the Buccaneer force at RAF Lossiemouth with Tornado aircraft equipped with Sea Eagle missiles for the anti-surface warfare role. These changes are not expected to result in any redundancies at the three stations.

The Gulf (Women)

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women were deployed to the Gulf; and to which units they were attached.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1991]: At the beginning of March 1991, nearly 1,100 service women were deployed in the Gulf. The ships and units in which they served were:

HMS Battleaxe
HMS Brilliant
HMS Hecla
HMS Herald
RFA Argus
HQ 1st Armoured Division and Signal Regiment
HQ British Forces Middle East

PRIME MINISTER

White Papers (Costs)

Mr. Straw To ask the Prime Minister what was the total cost of the design, preparation, printing and distribution of the White Papers "Education and Training", Cm. 1536, volumes I and II and "Higher Education", Cm. 1541.

The Prime Minister: The total cost of the design and preparation of the White Papers "Education and Training", Cm 1536, volumes I and II, and "Higher Education", Cm 1541, was £51,000. This does not include the costs of printing, publishing and distribution, which are borne by HMSO, and which aims to recover its costs from sales revenue.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total cost of the launch at the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre of the White Papers, "Education and Training" and "Higher Education", on 20 May, including the cost of the hire of the centre and other charges.

The Prime Minister: The total estimated cost of the launch at the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre for the White Papers "Education and Training" and "Higher Education", including the hire of the venue, will not exceed £48,000.

HEALTH

Cardiac Resuscitation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the general district hospitals and trusts that do not have a training officer for cardiac resuscitation employed to train both nurses and doctors on their staff.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The estimated expenditure in the financial year 1990-91 on management and computer consultancy projects is £13·8 million. A list of consultancy firms and the projects they carried out in 1990-91 has been placed in the Library. None of the projects was carried out for an executive agency.

Mental Health Hospitals

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those mental health hospitals which closed in 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Dogs

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been brought in respect of powerful breeds of dog, including rottweilers, pit-bull terriers, the Tosa and dobermans, in respect of powers or offences under (a) section 20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861, in respect of a dog owner's recklessness, (b) section 28 of the Town Police Clauses Act 1847, (c) section 2 of the Dogs Act 1871, (d) section 1 of the Dogs (Protection of Livestock) Act 1953, (e) the Animals Act 1971 and (f) the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989 since 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The following information relates to offences in 1989, the latest year for which statistics are available, and covers all types of dog.

	Prosecutions	Convictions	Cautions
Town Police Clauses Act 1847	93	60	71
Dogs Act 1871 and Dangerous Dogs Act 1898	967	166	1,112
Dogs (Protection of Livestock) Act 1953	466	395	66

No statistics are available for civil cases concerning dogs brought under the Animals Act 1971, or for offences specifically relating to attacks involving dogs under the Offences Against the Person Act 1861.

Remand

32. Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many convicted criminals are known to have committed additional crimes while on remand pending trial in the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) how many people remanded on bail are known to have committed offences while so remanded, in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten: I regret that the information requested is not available. However, Home Office statistical bulletin 30/90, "Reasons for refusing unconditional bail, January to February 1989", estimates that 19 per cent. of those remanded in custody had previously reoffended on bail. A copy of this bulletin is in the Library.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent attempt by French demonstrators to enter England through the channel tunnel; what measures were taken to resist this incursion; and what measures are to be taken to restrict access to the channel tunnel to authorised persons only.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On the night of 16 May, an organised group of men gained unauthorised access to the channel tunnel in an apparent attempt to walk to the United Kingdom. They turned back at the ventilation fan station, where the way had been blocked by TML, the construction contractors. They used no violence and caused no damage. On leaving the tunnel at the French end, they were interviewed by French police but not detained. The French and United Kingdom authorities were in close contact throughout the incident.

The access control arrangements for the United Kingdom and French terminals have been approved by the channel tunnel intergovernmental commission as appropriate to the tunnel's current status as a private construction site. All security arrangements relating to the tunnel are subject to the approval of the United Kingdom and French Governments and are kept under review.

Crime Statistics

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list statistics for each year from 1980 to 1990 showing; (a) the number of persons aged 18 to 25 years convicted of theft, (b) the number of persons aged 16 to 17 years convicted of theft, (c) the number of persons aged 18 to 25 years convicted of soliciting, (d) the number of persons aged 16 to 17 years convicted of soliciting, (e) the number of persons aged 18 to 25 years convicted of begging and (f) the number of persons aged 16 to 17 years convicted of begging.

Mr. John Patten: Information for the years 1980, 1983, 1986 and 1989 is given in the following table. To produce further information for the other years requested would involve disproportionate cost.

Number of persons convicted of theft, soliciting and begging by age group for the years 1980, 1983, 1986 and 1989 England and Wales

Age groups	1980	1983	1986	1989
Theft
16–17	30,266	27,721	22,609	11,888
18–25	70,165	73,411	66,648	49,496
Soliciting
16–17	18	3	11	15
18–25	242	164	152	122
Begging
16–17	10	25	2	60
18-20[1]	32	43	38	214

[1] For the summary offence of begging it is not required to record the age of the offender if over the age of 21.

Dogs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of (a) pit bull terriers and (b) rottweilers in Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: Estimates have been given to us that there are up to 10,000 pit bull terriers and about 100,000 rottweilers in Great Britain. We have no estimates for Wales.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Lords Amendments

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to conduct the trial to cover the proposals in the second report of the Procedure Committee for Session 1990-91 to deal with the documents required for Commons consideration of amendments from the Lords to Bills when they are considered by the House.

Mr. MacGregor: Following the successful completion of a non-operational trial by the Public Bill Office, I intend to initiate an operational trial using the Criminal Justice Bill when it returns from the Lords. The arrangements involve the production of a conflated paper containing Lords amendments and Commons notices on white paper on the day of consideration within the criteria and cut-off time set out in paragraphs 26 and 28 to 32 of the report. I hope that all Members will co-operate in this trial and that they will pass their comments to the Public Bill Office, so that a full assessment of the trial may be made.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Research Councils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list, for each research council, for the latest available year (a) the amount of money allocated to each research council and spent in Wales and (b) the proportion of public money allocated to each research council that was spent in Wales.

Mr. Alan Howarth: In 1990-91, the research council's expenditure in Wales from the science budget and the proportion as a percentage of the total were as follows:

	Expenditure in Wales derived from the science budget (£ million)	Percentage of science budget to council
AFRC	2·6	2·9
ESRC	0·6	1·6
MRC[1]	1·1	0·6
NERC	10·9	8·1
SERC	6·7	1·5

[1] 1989-90 figures.

Details of research council expenditure in Wales from all sources of public money are not available.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has given any indication to the Advisory Board for the Research Councils of his view of the future and the future use of its flexibility margin.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend announced to the House on 22 May 1991 at column 500 his acceptance of the ABRC's advice on the allocation of the flexibility margin.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has received any representations on the ethical standards of the Science and Engineering Research Council.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations about the review by the Science and Engineering Research Council of its forward programme. I am not aware of any which refer to the council's ethical standards.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he plans to review the future of the Science and Engineering Research Council.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to review the future of the Science and Engineering Research Council.

Student Loans

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to lay before the House the new student loans regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Education (Student Loans) Regulations 1991 were laid today to come into force on 1 August. They are modelled closely on the current regulations. They employ the new loan rates announced on 22 May at columns 499-500 and include improvements introduced in the light of experience over the past year. The regulations will ensure that the scheme continues to operate efficiently and to the advantage of all borrowers.

Quangos

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the individual appointments excluding casual vacancies he is scheduled to make to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations in (a) 1991 and (b) 1992, indicating in each case the title of the post, the salary if any and the duration of the appointment.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to the reply, 7 May 1991, column 392-396]: Contrary to the information given in my earlier answer, the chairman of the National Council for Educational Technology is unpaid. Eight, rather than nine, new appointments were made in 1991.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Industrial Strategy

6. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's industrial strategy.

Mr. Lilley: I gave a comprehensive statement of the Government's industrial policy in my speech to the Institute of Directors in Birmingham on 30 April. A copy of the speech has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Cammell Laird

17. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken or plans to take to avert the closure of Cammell Laird shipyard.

Mr. Leigh: The future of Cammell Laird is a matter for the commercial judgment of VSEL, its parent company. It is actively seeking a buyer for the yard and the Government will continue to do all they can to assist VSEL's efforts.

GATT

18. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the general agreement on tariffs and trade negotiations.

Mr. Lilley: A successful conclusion to the GATT Uruguay round negotiations remains a top priority for the United Kingdom. Now that the United States Administration has obtained an extension of its fast-track negotiating mandate, we hope that all parties will redouble their efforts to bring the talks to a successful conclusion no later than the end of the year.

Recession

19. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet representatives of the north-west regional Confederation of British Industry to discuss the recession in industry.

Mr. Lilley: I have no present plans to meet representatives of the NW regional CBI, although my officials do so regularly. I met the presidential committee of the CBI on 24 April and the CBI's national president on 15 May.

23. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has recently received from British industry about the recession.

Mr. Lilley: I continue to receive representations from British industry supporting the Government's determination to defeat inflation, thereby creating the conditions for a resumption of sustainable economic growth.

Privatisation

20. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any proposals to privatise further industries.

Mr. Redwood: Bills before Parliament will enable privatisation of the British Technology Group and the Insurance Services business of the ECGD. I intend to privatise the National Engineering Laboratory, but have set no timetable.

25. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the number of companies that have been returned to the private sector since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: The privatisations undertaken by my Department were listed in the answer I gave to the hon. Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Grocott) on 20 December 1990 at column 340.

Car Industry

21. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on prospects for the car industry.

Mr. Leigh: The current success in export markets has enabled the United Kingdom car industry to maintain production despite the downturn in the domestic market. Medium and long-term prospects for the United Kingdom car industry are excellent, with annual production likely to reach 2 million units by the mid to late 1990s.

24. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the increase in British car production that is expected to follow the investments being made in this country by Japanese car companies.

Mr. Leigh: The investment projects currently being undertaken in the United Kingdom by Nissan, Toyota and Honda will bring at least 500,000 units of new production capacity to the United Kingdom by the mid to late 1990s.

Trading Standards

22. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the Local Authorities Committee on Trading Standards to discuss consumer contracts.

Mr. Leigh: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have current plans to meet with the Local Authorities Committee on Trading Standards.

26. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the Local Authorities Committee on Trading Standards to discuss product safety.

Mr. Leigh: I have met trading standards officers and members of their representative organisations on several occasions at which product safety was one of the issues discussed. Also, officials of my Department have regular contact with the Local Authorities Co-ordinating Body on Trading Standards Officers to discuss product safety.

32. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the Local Authorities Committee on Trading Standards to discuss product safety.

Mr. Leigh: I have met trading standards officers and members of their representative organisations on several occasions at which product safety was one of the issues discussed. Also, officials of my Department have regular contact with the Local Authorities Co-ordinating Body on Trading Standards and individual trading standards officers to discuss product safety.

Inward Investment

27. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on the level of inward investment into Cumbria.

Mr. Leigh: In recent years, the main source of inward investment into Cumbria has been through developments by existing companies in the area. However, in conjunction with INWARD, the North West regional development organisation, we are working closely with local agencies to ensure that Cumbria's attractions are presented effectively to new potential inward investors.

28. Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Britain's recent record in attracting inward investment from the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Leigh: According to the Federal Ministry of Economics in Bonn, German direct investment in the United Kingdom at the end of 1989 totalled DM 16·5 billion, an increase of 320 per cent. since 1983. Despite growing international competition, particularly from the former GDR, outward investment figures for the first six months of last year published by the Institut de deutschen Wirtschaft indicate that 1990 will be a record year for the United Kingdom in attracting investment from Germany.

Square D

29. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the takeover of Square D by the French firm Schneider.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's main consideration in deciding whether or not to refer a merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission for investigation remains its effect on competition as it affects the United Kingdom consumer. In addition, as my right hon. Friend announced on 26 July 1990, in deciding whether to make such a reference he will in future pay particularly close attention to the degree of state control, if any, of the acquiring company. It would not be appropriate to comment further on the acquisition by Schneider SA of the Square D company in advance of my right hon. Friend's announcement of his decision on whether to refer this merger to the Commission or not. My right hon. Friend will take all relevant considerations into account when reaching his decision.

Aerospace

30. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the major companies in the aerospace industry about current problems facing the industry.

Mr. Leigh: The Secretary of State met British Aerospace in December and Rolls-Royce in March.

Manufacturing Output

31. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to boost manufacturing output.

Mr. Sainsbury: Manufacturing output will be helped by our policies of fostering and extending the competitive environment, encouraging innovation and controlling inflation.

Parcels Service

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the privatisation of Royal Mail Parcels and Operation Danill.

Mr. Leigh: We have no present plans to privatise Royal Mail Parcelforce.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Mr. Leigh: My Department's expenditure on consultants engaged in the financial year 1990-91 is estimated to be £5,576,000 of which £3,492,000 is for consultancy contracts excluding hardware and software purchases. These figures do not include expenditure by DTI executive agencies, information on which is not held centrally. The chief executives of the agencies have been asked to reply direct to the hon. Gentleman with the relevant information. Copies of their answers will be placed in the House of Commons Library. The following lists the management or computer consultancy contracts awarded for the financial year 1990-91:

Fair Trading

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in any future restatement of his Department's objectives, he will include a statement of his policy to work for fair trading conditions world wide and for strengthened General Agreement on Tarriffs and Trade rules and disciplines, as well as for trade liberalisation.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently published revised departmental objectives. These include the objective of working for trade liberalisation worldwide. The Government's top priority in this field at present is the early successful conclusion of the GATT Uruguay round of trade negotiations. This will produce a strengthened framework of rules and disciplines for international trade and fairer and more open trading conditions for all participants.

Textiles

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been received from the United Kingdom textile and clothing industries about subsidies by the French Government to the VEV group of textile companies; and if he will press the European Commission to investigate subsidies of French textile companies.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have received representations about these alleged subsidies from representatives of the industry. The European Commission has been made aware of the United Kingdom's interest in seeing this matter properly investigated.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet representatives of the textile and clothing industry to discuss the effect of the recession.

Mr. Leigh: I have no present plans to do so.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to improve the speed of action possible by trading standards officers in banning the sale of imported children's clothing which proves on testing to be a fire hazard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: Trading standards officers already have powers under section 14 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 to issue suspension notices immediately prohibiting for up to six months the supply of goods where they have reasonable grounds for suspecting that they contravene any safety provision.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current status of the multi-fibre arrangement, the Government's position on it, and other measures that the Government are taking to protect the British textiles industry from unfair competition.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) on 4 June at column 170. The question of unfair competition is being addressed in the substantive textiles negotiations.

Debt Collecting Agencies

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what obligations debt collecting agencies are under to ensure that the information upon which they act is accurate and true; and what responsibilities are held by companies employing debt collecting agencies on their behalf.

Mr. Leigh: Debt collecting is a licenseable activity under the Consumer Credit Act 1974. The licensing system is administered by the Director General of Fair Trading and he has the power to refuse or revoke a licence if he believes that a business is not fit to engage in the activities covered by the licence. In reaching his decision, he will take account of any business practices which appear to him to be deceitful or oppressive or otherwise unfair or improper, whether unlawful or not. I will ask the director general to write to the hon. Member.

EC Funding (Cleveland)

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which projects involving European Community funding in the Cleveland county area since 1987 have involved additionality costs to the United Kingdom Exchequer.

Mr. Leigh: In setting the Government's public expenditure programmes, account is taken of expected receipts from the European Community. This enables the programmes to be larger than they otherwise would be.

London Underground Ltd.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on London Underground Ltd. will be published.

Mr. Lilley: The report is published today. The Commission were asked to conduct a wide ranging inquiry into the efficiency and costs of and the service provided by London Underground Ltd. The Commission recognises that there are serious constraints on the ability of London Underground to improve efficiency and quality of service. The underground is an old system, which suffers from many years of neglect of its basic infrastructure. The Commission gives due credit to London Underground management for achievements in many areas, notably in the field of safety. However, they conclude that the efficiency with which London Underground uses its present resources still leaves much to be desired.

The report concludes that there is significant scope for improving efficiency and reducing costs, without affecting safety or service standards. The Commission recognises the need for LUL to have a stable investment programme funded partly by the Government and partly by improvements in efficiency but also takes the view that there will have to be an enhanced contribution from real increases in fares. They recognise there has been substantial investment in recent years.

Reflecting the breadth of the inquiry, the Commission has made over 100 recommendations aimed at assisting LUL to improve its performance, giving particular priority collectively to six matters: control of cash against the external financing limit set by the Government management information systems; utilisation of manpower; fares policy and levels; management of investment programme and projects; and renewal and maintenance of the network. In these and other areas, the Commission has set target dates for the implementation of their recommendations.

LUL will be producing a preliminary response to the Commission's findings within three to four months, in the light of which my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Transport will make a statement.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Thirty-one members of staff are designated energy managers as part of their duties. The Department devoted approximately four man years to energy mangement in 1990-91.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Until recently, responsibility for such investment has been divided between the Property Services Agency and the Department, with the result that this information for past years could only be assembled at disproportionate cost. In 1989-90, £236,000 (£221,000 in 1990-91 terms) was spent on the installation and replacement of equipment and fabric in projects which had a significant energy saving content in their specification. Figures have not yet been fully compiled for 1990-91 but will be rather higher.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I am sorry that information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 3 June 1991]: One full energy audit has recently been carried out which indicated potential saving of over £20,000 a year for a capital outlay of £45,000. Measures are in hand to implement the recommendations.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the Christmas bonus payable to senior citizens in 1972 in (a) cash terms and (b) at 1991 prices.

Miss Widdecombe: The Christmas bonus payable to senior citizens in 1972 in cash terms was £10, and which at April 1991 prices would be worth £59·17. The cost at this rate would be about £700 million.

Contributions Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the total staff of the Contributions Agency are on secondment from Government Departments.

Mr. Jack: The Contributions Agency, along with other DSS executive agencies, is a part of the DSS. Accordingly it is staffed by departmental civil servants.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Miss Widdecombe: The total expenditure on management and computer consultancy contracts in the financial year 1990-91, excluding software and hardware purchases, is £69·75 million.

Details of the individual contracts awarded in the 1990-91 financial year are given in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Victoria Hospital

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have taken place with trades unions about the status of the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: Before it was submitted, sponsors of the Royal Group of Hospitals' application for HSS trust status met trade unions on many occasions.

Trades unions are among the bodies invited, as part of the public consultation, to comment on the application.

Tobacco

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans his Department has to mark World No Tobacco Day on 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department had no specific plans for marking World No Tobacco Day. Northern Ireland Departments adopted a formal policy on smoking in 1987. The introduction of a non-smoking policy is being actively pursued in the Northern Ireland Office.

Road Improvement Schemes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what minor road improvement schemes have been carried out in the Downpatrick and Craigavon divisions between 1 March 1985 and 31 March in the current year.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Education (Access Funds)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many students are currently receiving access funds from each education board in Northern Ireland;

(2) what was the total amount of access funds allocated to each education board in Northern Ireland;

(3) how many students were refused access funding by each education board in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is:

Board	No. of students in receipt of access funding	Access Funds allocated (1990-91 financial year) £	No. of students refused access funding
Belfast	67	29,000	10

WALES

School Tests (Moderators)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for the training and appointment of moderators for school tests at (a) seven and (b) 11 years-old.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Moderation is part of the national curriculum assessment arrangements which, for seven and 11-year-olds, is the responsibility of the individual local education authorities.

Each LEA, supported by total grant approved expenditure of £2·2 million in 1991-92, is required to develop assessment implementation plans which cover the administrative and training arrangements for moderation. The School Examinations and Assessment Council has provided detailed guidance on moderation which will be updated later this year for use in the 1992 arrangements.

Radioactivity

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table indicating levels of Strontium 90 detected in rainfall in Wales in each year since 1961; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Monitoring of Strontium-90 in rainfall has been conducted on a regular basis at only two sites in Wales. The available information is given in the table.

General Practitioners

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has any proposals to issue guidelines to general practitioner fund-holders and to hospitals regarding preferential placing on hospitals waiting lists for general practitioner fund-holders' patients.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I do not propose to issue guidance at present.

Road Safety

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state how many people have been killed as a result of road accidents in Wales in each of the past 10 years, and what is the total to date this year.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is given in the table:

Persons killed as a result of road accidents in Wales

1982	300
1983	245
1984	250

[2] 1991 data from all police authority areas are only available centrally to end of January.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he proposes to take any further measures to improve road safety in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: We are continually seeking to improve road safety. For example, we are currently encouraging the use of rear seat belts which will be compulsory as from 1 July.

Roads

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects (a) to invite tenders for the construction work on the A465 Glynneath-Aberdulais improvement and (b) construction work to start on the A465 Glynneath-Aberdulais improvement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The 1991 supplement to "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s" shows the scheme as scheduled to start before April 1994. It is not possible to give a firmer indication of timing at this stage.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he proposes to improve valley road links to the motorway system.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Responsibility for improving these roads rests with the respective local highway authorities. A number of major improvement schemes are receiving transport grant support from the Department and information is given in the Welsh Office departmental report published in February.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the north-south road links in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have received a number of representations. The Government's policy is to upgrade the A483 and A470 by means of selective improvements. Details of planned schemes are set out in "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s" published in 1989, and the supplement published in February 1991.

Smoking

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken to discourage tobacco smoking in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: In Wales the campaign against smoking is carried out on many fronts. In 1987 the Government established a special authority, the Health Promotion Authority for Wales (HPAW), to promote better health in the Principality. The authority has taken on the work of Heartbeat Wales in promoting programmes to stop smoking and to stop people from ever starting.

HPAW in association with other organisations has mounted a number of national and local campaigns including National No Smoking Day in Wales, the recent launch of a passive no smoking leaflet, two mobile life education centres which feature the effect smoking has on the body and which are currently touring primary schools in Wales, and initiatives for employers, public transport operators and the retail and catering trade to provide no smoking areas. Moreover, HPAW, ASH-in-Wales (which has Government support) and Tenovus are jointly funding the forthcoming Smokebusters Cymru project, partly through additional exchequer funding made available for the project.

Recently the Department produced protocols for investment in health gain in the areas of cancer and cardiovascular diseases which acknowledge the health gain benefits of discouraging smoking. These protocols are aimed mainly at district health authorities (DHAs) and family health service authorities (FHSAs) to assist them to develop their local strategies for health. These strategies will cover local approaches to tackling heart disease, strokes, cancers, etc. and include a section on health promotion and influencing lifestyle factors detrimental to good health one of which is the incidence of smoking. Furthermore, many DHAs in Wales have a declared policy on non-smoking on NHS premises and whose health promotion units run anti-smoking programmes at local level. In the development of patient care GPs have been obliged by their terms of service to provide health promotion advice to their patients. GPs who organise and provide advice through health promotion clinics including anti-smoking clinics may be entitled to a special compensation fee.

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the capital allocation to each of the health authorities in Wales for each year since 1985, at 1985 prices.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information is given in the table.

The discretionary capital allocations, notified to each health authority in Wales at the start of each financial year in the period 1985-86 to 1991-92 were as follows:

£ million 1985-86 prices

Dog Bites

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) children under 16 years and (b) adults have been treated under the national health service for bites by dogs in each of the past five years.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not held centrally.

Development Board for Rural Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning the future of the housing stock of the Development Board for Rural Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I shall be consulting shortly upon draft regulations to govern the disposal of Development Board for Rural Wales housing stock.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Development Board for Rural Wales houses there are; and in what towns and villages they are situated.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Development Board currently owns 1,259 dwellings located as follows:

Location
Newtown	1,186
Llandrindod Wells	20
Tywyn	26
Bala	10
Dolgellau	7
Abercrave, Ystradgynlais	10

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Development Board for Rural Wales houses have been sold in each of the past 10 years; and what was the total income from house sales in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information requested is given in the following table:

	Number of dwellings	Income (£000s)[1]
1981	12	144
1982	20	230
1983	27	352

Source: Development Board for Rural Wales sales returns.

[1] Income figures are totals of the selling prices of disposed dwellings and as such no account is taken of mortgages granted by the Board on any of these dwellings: 6 such mortgages were granted over the period.

I am sure that the hon. Gentleman, like me, welcomes the extension of home ownership that these sales represent.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Development Board for Rural Wales houses have been involved in the rents to mortgages scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Board has received 105 formal applications and has completed sales of 23 dwellings. This represents almost 3 per cent. of the board's eligible stock and is as successful as the initial take-up under our right to buy policy.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consult the tenants of Development Board for Rural Wales houses before he permits a change of status of such houses.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The draft regulations will include provision for tenants to express their wishes.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Development Board for Rural Wales housing stock is earmarked for housing association status.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: It will be for the board to formulate its proposals in the light of regulations to be made in due course. I shall in no way prejudge my response to such proposals.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) trade unionists, (b) lawyers, (c) women, (d) men and (e) business men have been appointed to training and enterprise councils in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: At May 1991, board members of the TECs in Wales included (a) three trade unionists, (b) one lawyer, (c) nine women, (d) 87 men and (e) 68 business men.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he proposes to enable road and rail traffic to have better access to the channel tunnel rail link.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The provision of rail links is a matter for British Rail, which published its plans for channel tunnel services in December 1989 as required by section 40 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987. British Rail is now working up its proposals. Planned road improvements are set out in "Roads in Wales: Progress and Plans for the 1990s', and the 1991 supplement. Further major schemes to improve communications in north-east Clwyd and south-east Wales were announced on 14 May.

SCOTLAND

Broadleaved Forest

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what area of Britain's broadleaved forest is at present productive for timber; and what percentage of the United Kingdom's hardwood timber needs this satisfies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are 811,000 hectares of broadleaved woodland in Britain, of which 615,000 hectares are classed as productive for timber. Some 23 per cent. of our total hardwood timber consumption is at present met by broadleaves grown in this country.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how the management of Britain's broadleaved forest is being directed towards achieving a reduction in imports of socially and ecologically sensitive tropical hardwoods.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government's broadleaves policy is successfully encouraging an increase in the area of broadleaved forest in Britain. In addition, the Government will be making management grants available from April 1992 under the Forestry Commission's woodland grant scheme to encourage the improved management of existing woodlands. Taken together, these measures can be expected to lead in due course to a significant increase in the total production of timber from Britain's broadleaved forests. However, hardwood timber grown in Britain currently meets only a quarter of total consumption, and direct substitution of certain tropical hardwoods by domestic timber supplies may not always be feasible because of the different qualities of timber involved.

Dogs

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what information he has on the number of dogs in Scotland;

(2) if he will estimate how many (a) rottweilers and (b) pit bull terriers there are in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dogs have been destroyed under the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 in each of the past five years; and of these how many were (a) rottweilers and (b) pit bull terriers.

Mr. Allan Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Forestry Commission (Land)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to whom the Forestry Commission has disposed of any land notified as a site of special scientific interest since 1986.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Forestry Commission sold 36 areas of land containing sites of special scientific interest in the period from 1 April to 31 March 1991. Permission from the purchasers to divulge their names has been given in respect of 17 of these areas, details of which are given in the following table:

County	Property	Year sold	Purchaser
England
Bedfordshire	Marston Thrift	1987	Bedfordshire county council
Buckinghamshire	Hog and Hollowhill	1987	Buckinghamshire county council
Cumbria	Pool Bank	1988	Nature Conservancy Council

Strathclyde	Tiroran/Scobull	1989	D. M. Holman

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all lands owned by the Forestry Commission which have been notified as SSSIs.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A list of the 393 areas of Forestry Commission land notified as SSSIs has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all land in England and Wales which was owned by the Forestry Commission and has been sold; and if he will show in his answer the name of the purchaser.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 14 March 1991, Official Report, column 691. A list of the areas of forest land sold by the Forestry Commission in the period from 27 July 1981 to 31 December 1990 has now been placed in the Library. It includes the names of those purchasers who have given their consent to such information being made public.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all land in England and Wales which was owned by the Forestry Commission and has been sold, for which local authorities have been able to enter into an access agreement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No such agreements have been entered into pending the introduction of the procedures outlined by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) in the answer he gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 21 November 1990, Official Report, columns 164-6. The Forestry Commission has prepared draft guidelines setting out the details of these procedures which are currently the subject of consultation with a wide range of public and private bodies concerned with public access to the countryside, forestry and land management. The new arrangements will be introduced as soon as these consultations have been concluded.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of unfilled speech therapy posts in Greater Glasgow health board for the Southern general hospital, the Western infirmary and Gartnavel hospitals, the Victoria infirmary, the Royal infirmary and Stobhill hospital.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is one full-time speech therapist vacancy at Gartnavel general hospital and one full-time vacancy at the Southern general hospital. Both posts were advertised on 30 May.

Forestry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to produce a new set of objectives for forestry policy in England and Wales, covering (a) environmental needs (b) public enjoyment and (c) timber products.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The objectives of the Government's forestry policy have evolved in recent years to reflect the increasingly diverse role perceived for forestry in Britain, with a greater emphasis being placed on social and environmental benefits as well as on timber production. There are no plans to produce a new set of objectives at this stage.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he plans to control the commercial afforestation of hilly areas in England and Wales.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Forestry Commission's consultations with local authorities and other statutory bodies in relation to grant-aid applications act as an effective control over new planting schemes. The consultation procedures have been strengthened by the introduction of arrangements whereby the Forestry Commission may require grant applicants to carry out an environmental assessment of new planting proposals where these are likely to have significant effects on the environment. In addition, the Forestry Commission continues to operate a presumption against the large-scale planting of predominantly coniferous species in the English uplands. Taken together, these measures represent an effective system of regulating planting in the uplands.

Birds of Prey

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number, species and cause of death of birds of prey discovered in 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as shown in the following table:

		Cause of death
Species	Number	Trauma	Disease	Starvation	Poisoned	Unknown
Barn owl	1	1	—	—	—	—

Health Board Contracts

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the contracts for hospital and health board services awarded so far under the competitive tendering process by Ayrshire and Arran health board, including successful tenderer and value of contract.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Contracts awarded in the Ayrshire and Arran health board area are expected to release savings of over £2·5 million. These savings release resources for reinvestment in direct patient care.

The information is as follows:

Hospital Unit	Service Type	Contractor	Previous cost £000s	Tender value £000s

Sports Grounds (Safety)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals, in relation to section 15A of the Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975, to introduce mandatory, all-seating facilities to football stadia and other sports grounds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The grounds of 31 Scottish football clubs and the national rugby stadium at Murrayfield are designated under the 1975 Act. The Scottish football authorities have set up the Scottish stadia committee to monitor the progress made by the owners of designated football grounds and the committee will be reporting progress annually to my right hon. Friend. The Scottish Office Education Department circular number 10/1991 of 28 March 1991 made it clear that, should progress on a voluntary basis be inadequate, we would consider seeking statutory enforcement powers.

Caledonian MacBrayne

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance has been given in each of the past five years by the European Community to Caledonian MacBrayne to operate essential public passenger ferry services between the mainland and the islands and among the islands; what sums are to be provided by the European Community for this purpose in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The financial assistance provided to Caledonian MacBrayne by the European regional development fund through grants towards new ships, piers and shore terminals for essential ferry services over the past five years is as follows:—

Year	£ million
1986-87	1·45
1987-88	1·79
1988-89	2·19
1990-91	3·35

It is not possible to predict the amounts for the years 1991-92 to 1993-94 as Caledonian MacBrayne, like other bodies, will require to make applications in respect of proposed capital expenditure. Such applications will be considered on their merits by a programme monitoring Committee which includes representatives of central and local government, the European Community and other organisations. However, grants from the European regional development fund will cease to be available in their present form in 1993. No guarantee can, therefore, be given that individuals applications which may be approved in principle will receive grant.

Licensing Legislation

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines he has issued to local authorities about the changes in licensing legislation brought about by the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office Home and Health Department issued a circular to local authorities, licensing boards and other interested parties on 12 December 1990 explaining the changes to be made to liquor licensing law by part III of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990, which came into force on 1 January 1991. A copy of the circular has been placed in the Library.

Lothian Regional Council

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet hon. Members representing Lothian constituencies to discuss Lothian regional council's financial problems.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 17 May 1991]: I met representatives of Lothian regional council on Friday 17 May to hear their representations against my proposed reduction of £50 in their personal community charge.

I remain satisfied that Lothian's planned expenditure for 1991-92 is "excessive and unreasonable". However, since the financial year is well under way, I have indicated my willingness not to pursue capping action if the council agrees to reduce its charge by £37, the equivalent of a £18·5 million cut in expenditure.

In view of this meeting, during which council representatives raised a number of financial problems, I see no need for a further meeting with hon. Members.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 6 June 1991

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Landlord and Tenant Legislation

Mr. Gill: To ask the Attorney-General whether the Government will implement the recommendations contained in the Law Commission's report on landlord and tenant distress for rent (Law Com. 194).

The Attorney-General: Having considered this report the Lord Chancellor has decided that it would be right to invite views on the conclusions reached by the Law Commission and in particular on the question whether, if the case for abolition is in general made out, the remedy of distress for rent should nevertheless be retained for business tenancies.

ENERGY

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received concerning his payments to stockbrokers for services rendered in the course of privatisation of the electricity supply industry of England and Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Secretary of State has received one representation on the payment of selling commissions in respect of the regional electricity companies' share offers. The process of making the relevant payments is under way.

Refuse-to-energy Plant

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what representations he has received to date about the proposed refuse-to-energy plant in Belvedere;

(2) if he will institute a public inquiry to investigate the proposed refuse-to-energy plant in Belvedere.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend has directed Cory Environmental to advertise its application for his consent to construct a waste-fired power station at Belvedere and a period up to 6 June 1991 has been allowed in which objections from the public can be made to him. In addition the local planning authority has until 12 August 1991 by which to make its views on the application known to him.

Until he has seen all such objections and has received the views of the local planning authority, it is too early to say whether a public inquiry will be necessary. However, if the local planning authority objects to the application there is a statutory obligation to call for a public inquiry to be held.

To date, my Department has registered over 50 objections to the application.

European Energy Council

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on issues discussed and decisions taken at the European Energy Council meeting in Brussels on 31 May.

Mr. Wakeham: The Council adopted the directive on transit of gas, concluding the package of proposals introduced by the Commission in July 1989 as a first step towards liberalising the Community's energy market. The United Kingdom fully supports that process and looks forward to the introduction of further measures by the Commission to increase competition and open markets in energy.

In the field of energy efficiency, a political agreement was reached on the SAVE programme, which the Commission introduced at the Energy Council in October 1990. SAVE is intended to provide a framework for co-ordinating member states' own programmes of efficient energy use. The way is now clear, once the European Parliament has given its opinion, to adopt the decision.

The Council also considered the Commission's proposals on oil crisis measures and contingency oil stocks. The Council recognised that the Community's existing provisions needed review, but did not agree that the Commission's proposals were appropriate, especially in relation to the International Energy Agency. The Commission will reconsider its proposals.

The Council also briefly discussed the proposed European energy charter.

"Energy, Looking to the Future"

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he published his pamphlet, "Energy, Looking to the Future"; how many copies have been printed; at what cost; and to whom the pamphlet is being distributed.

Mr. Wakeham: I published the pamphlet "Energy: Looking to the Future" on 1 May when it was announced via a Department of Energy press release. Initially 1,000 copies were printed at a cost of £1,238. Demand has been such that another 500 copies have been printed at a cost of £658. The pamphlet has been and continues to be distributed to energy and Lobby journalists and to interested parties in the United Kingdom and overseas.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Benefits and Allocations

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of people claiming (a) one-parent benefit and (b) the widowed mother's allowance who are taxpayers.

Mr. Maude: In 1991-92 it is estimated that 280,000 taxpayers will claim one-parent benefit and 35,000 taxpayers will claim widowed mother's allowance.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further progress has been made to enable Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to operate fully on next steps lines.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 13 February the publication of a framework document for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, and of the first three in the series of executive unit framework documents which describe the responsibilities, freedoms and accountabilities in individual units within the Department—Official Report, columns 480-81. Customs and Excise have now published framework documents for each of the remaining executive units, comprising:

Accountant and Comptroller General's Office
Belfast Collection
Birmingham Collection
Dover Collection
East Anglia Collection
Edinburgh Collection
Enforcement Divison
Glasgow Collection
Information Technology Divisions
Internal Audit Unit
Investigation Division
Leeds Collection
Liverpool Collection
London Airports Collection
London Central Collection
London North and West Collection
London Port Collection
London South Collection
Northampton Collection
Northern England Collection
Reading Collection
Solicitor's Office
Southampton Collection
South Wales and Borders Collection
South West England Collection
Tariff and Statistical Office
Training Services Division

Copies of each of the documents have been placed in the Library. This is an important step towards the full operation of Customs and Excise on next steps lines, and is accompanied by continuing progress on the action programme annexed to the framework document for the Department.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the Treasury, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The hon. Member was given the consumption figures for 1989 in cash terms in the answer of my right hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Norfolk (Mr. Ryder) on 14 May 1990, in column 274. The information at 1990-91 prices, which covers major offices only, is as follows:

	'000 therms	£'000	'000 kWh	£'000	'000 litres	£'000

Riverwalk House, London SW1 (72,200 sq ft)	57·0	14·8	1,449	79·0	—	—

Note: All figures rounded.

Figures for years before 1989 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Taxation

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the extra yield in a full year if income tax were unified with national insurance contribution at a rate of 34 per cent. assuming (a) no change to higher rate income tax and (b) higher rate income tax at 49 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 4 June 1991]: At 1991-92 income levels, it is estimated that the net yield of increasing the basic rate of income tax to 34 per cent. and of abolishing national insurance contributions for employees and the self-employed would be about £0·8 billion. This yield would increase to about £3·8 billion if the higher rate of income tax were increased to 49 per cent. These estimates ignore any behavioural effects which might result from such changes.

TRANSPORT

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for which the contract was carried out.

Mr. McLoughlin: Expenditure in the financial year 1990-91 was £3·055 million. Contracts awarded were as follows:

JMP Consulting	Routine Maintenance Management System data capture device
WS Atkins	CHART/DEFLEC/CHAPS programme maintenance

Road Tax Evasion

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he plans any new initiatives to combat evasion of road tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: With the co-operation of the police, the Department has recently run successful campaigns against road tax evaders in the London and Strathclyde areas. In June, a regional blitz has been launched covering the north-east of England and more are planned during 1991. Such action is very effective both in deterring potential evaders and in catching offenders who have failed to heed the warnings given.

Railway Crossings

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many accidents there have been involving motor vehicles at railway crossings with barriers (a) in Wales and (b) in Britain in each year since 1985-86;

(2) how many accidents there have been involving motor vehicles at open railway crossings (a) in Wales and (b) in Britain in each year since 1985-86.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested in respect of Britain as a whole for the years 1985-89 is set out in the table. Details for 1990 are not yet available, but will be published in the Health and Safety Executive's annual report on railway safety later in the year. Separate information for Welsh crossings is not readily available.

Open crossings (includes those with and without traffic signals)

1989	10

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the approximate capital cost and annual service costs for installing and running crossings with barriers.

Mr. Freeman: Installation costs range between £100,000 and £135,000, depending on the type of crossing. Annual running costs for crossings with automatic half barriers are about £12,000. Running costs for manually controlled crossings depend on the level of manning.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress being made in introducing barriers at open railway crossings.

Mr. Freeman: Following the accident at an automatic open crossing at Lockington in 1986, Professor P. F. Stott was appointed to carry out a review of safety at this type of crossing. He recommended that safety at some crossings might be improved either by providing half-barriers or by a reduction in the speed at which the train approaches the crossings.

All proposed speed reductions at crossings have now been implemented. Under the Stott recommendations 126 crossings were to be converted to half-barriers. Of these, 38 crossings have been converted to standard automatic half-barrier protection and six have been converted to automatic barrier crossings locally monitored by the train driver.

BR's target for completion of this work is late 1992. The Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate is keeping the programme under review and regularly monitors progress.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many railway crossings are open crossings and how many have barriers (a) in Wales and (b) in Britain.

Mr. Freeman: The numbers of automatic open railway crossings and automatic crossings with barriers are as follows:

	auto open crossings	auto barrier crossings
(a) In Wales	29	10
(b) In Britain	190	370

Note:—(b) include (a)

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been killed in each year since 1985-86 in accidents involving (a) open railway crossings and (b) crossings with barriers.

Mr. Freeman: The information for 1985-89 is as follows; that for 1990 is not yet available.

Year	Fatalities at crossings with barriers	Fatalities at open crossings[1]
1985	3	2
1986	5	[2]11
1989	—	2

[1] Includes those with and without traffic signals.
[2] All fatalities in one accident at Lockington.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the approximate capital cost and annual service costs for installing and running open railway crossings.

Mr. Freeman: For automatic open level crossings the average installation cost is £73,000 and the annual running costs are about £12,000. Figures for open crossings with no lights are not readily available.

Motor Cycle Licence

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current cost of a motor cycle licence; when it was last increased; and what was the cost before the increase.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is:

	Current £	Previous £
Motorcycles not over 150cc	15	10
Over 150cc up to 250cc	30	20
All other motorcycles	50	40

The last increase was in 1985.

Decca Navigation System

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has made a decision on extending the life of the Decca navigation system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend is considering a revised offer put forward by Racal Electronics plc to extend the life of the Decca navigator system into the next century. He expects to reach a decision shortly.

Driving Licence Records

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list the organisations which have shown reasonable cause as outlined in section 15(1) of the Road Vehicle (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971 to receive personal data from the DVLA; whether he has discussed the DVLA's disclosure procedures with the Data Protection Registrar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Regulation 15 of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971 requires the Secretary of State to provide, free of charge from the vehicle register, names and addresses of vehicle keepers to the police and local authorities for use in connection with an offence. The information must also be made available to others who can show reasonable cause for their inquiry. There is no list of organisations which have shown reasonable cause as each request is dealt with on its merits when it is received.

The advice of the Data Protection Registrar has been sought on a number of occasions about DVLA's disclosure procedures, most recently on 15 April 1991. He has expressed himself satisfied.

Train Doors (Accidents)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss fatal accidents concerning train doors.

Mr. Freeman: After I have received the report of the study now being carried out by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on what action is to be taken by the railways inspectorate following the examination of a door which revealed a fault in its slam-shut locking mechanism during an investigation into the death of a passenger who fell from the Birmingham to London InterCity train on 3 December 1990.

Mr. Freeman: At the coroner's inquest into this fatality at Carpenders park, an open verdict was returned. No evidence was available to show from which door, or in what circumstances, the deceased had fallen from the train. I understand that when BR examined the train later, a hinge on one door was found to be faulty, but not unsafe.

The Health and Safety Commission announced on 3 May that Her Majesty's railway inspectorate, and other specialist resources within the Health and Safety Executive, will undertake an investigation into the pattern of falls from passenger trains and whether, or the extent to which, they could be attributable to the design of doors or locks. The results of the investigation, which is now under way, will be published.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission to discuss the inquiry into fatal falls from British Rail trains.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend has not met the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission to discuss the current investigation into train doors. He plans to meet Dr. Cullen shortly to discuss railway safety generally.

Policy Proposals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional resources he is making available to support his policy proposals on transport announced on 28 May.

Mr. Rifkind: Any additional resources needed for transport will be discussed in the public expenditure survey in the usual way.

Dornoch Firth

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for the creation of a rail bridge across the Dornoch firth.

Mr. McLoughlin: None. It would be for British Rail to bring forward any such proposals.

Orange Badge Scheme

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will now introduce regulations to revise the orange badge scheme for disabled drivers in conformity with the views of the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee and other disabled person's organisations.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on 21 March at column 212.

Rail Electrification, Scotland

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to reply to correspondence from the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North regarding investment criteria governing rail electrification in Scotland.

Mr. Freeman: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 3 June.

Speedlink

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the annual volume of freight traffic to be transferred from rail to road if the closure of Speedlink is proceeded with.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail is still in consultation with customers about the alternative rail options for Speedlink traffic and it is not possible to estimate exactly how much freight traffic will transfer from rail to road when the Speedlink network closes on 8 July.

I understand that British Rail expects to retain well over half the 3 million tonnes of domestic freight currently carried. Wagonload traffic lost to rail is likely to amount to some 1 per cent. of total rail freight.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue directions to British Rail that the Speedlink rail freight service should continue to operate.

Mr. Freeman: No. The Speedlink wagonload network has losses of well over £30 million a year on a turnover of £45 million. To compete with road, rail has to be efficient, competitive and commercial. British Rail plans to develop train load freight services rather than individual wagon services.

Turbo-trains

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has discussed further orders of BREL network turbo trains for regional British Rail lines with the chairman of British Rail.

Mr. McLoughlin: Six such vehicles have been ordered for the Oxford-Worcester service to complement the order for 59 vehicles for Paddington services, which my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State approved on 28 March. The chairman has made no further proposals on other routes.

Track Gauge

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans for the introduction of continental gauge track for the carriage of freight between the United Kingdom and the continent.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail has no such plans. Its commercial judgment is that low-platform wagons offer the most cost-effective means of conveying continental-size containers and swap bodies on the British rail network.

Class 158 Trains

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the incidents involving potential safety risks reported to his Department since the introduction of class 158 trains; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Railways (Notice of Accidents) Order 1986 (SI 1986 No. 2187) categorises accident types and specifies the circumstances in which accidents should be reported. The following list shows all accidents, together with causes, involving class 158 trains since their introduction which have been reported to the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate in accordance with the order. The details for 1991 should be regarded as provisional:

21 January 1990
Upper Leigh/Newton	Unit struck animal on track
24 November 1990
Aberdeen (Clay Hills)	Buffer collision in sidings
24 November 1990
Balloch	Unit struck animal on track
26 November 1990
Falkirk High	Small fire on DMU
29 November 1990
Portlethen	Unit struck animal on track
3 December 1990
Edinburgh Waverley	Coupling failure
8 December 1990
Glasgow Queen Street	Coupling failure
13 December 1990
Cadder	Unit struck trespasser—fatality
2 January 1991
Inverness	Unit struck animal on track
31 January 1991
Urmston	Unit struck road vehicle (not at a level crossing)
5 February 1991
Aberdeen	Derailment of empty coaching stock

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects direct passenger services to operate between Scotland and the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail awaits proposals from the manufacturers on the delivery and cost of trains for through day services between places north of London and the continent, and do not expect these trains to be ready before 1994. British Rail still plans to run through night services from the opening of the channel tunnel.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer Monday 3 June 1991]: Energy consumption figures for the Department of Transport are set out in the following table. These show that between 1985-86 and 1990-91 total annual expenditure at constant prices has been reduced by approximately £1·4 million. During this period the Department of Transport estate remained broadly constant in size. In 1990-91 the Department occupied 3·66 million sq ft of accommodation.

1985-86
(a)	£ thousands at cash prices	1,832	588	624	11
(b)	£ thousands at 1990-91 prices	2,459	789	838	15
(c)	Units of consumption	39	2	3,599	171
1986-87
(a)	£ thousands at cash prices	1,906	616	410	12
(b)	£ thousands at 1990-91 prices	2,472	799	532	16
(c)	Units of consumption	41	2	3,865	187
1987-88
(a)	£ thousands at cash prices	1,773	623	138	11
(b)	£ thousands at 1990-91 prices	2,183	767	170	14
(c)	Units of consumption	39	2	1,440	176
1988-89
(a)	£ thousands at cash prices	1,761	496	76	6
(b)	£ thousands at 1990-91 prices	2,018	568	87	7
(c)	Units of consumption	33	2	660	108
1989-90
(a)	£ thousands at cash prices	1,865	525	81	7
(b)	£ thousands at 1990-91 prices	2,010	566	87	8
(c)	Units of consumption	35	2	701	126

		Electricity KWh (millions)	Gas Therms (millions)	Liquid fuel Litres (thousands)	Solid fuel Tonnes
1990-91
(a)	£ thousands at cash prices	2,128	426	102	0
(b)	£ thousands at 1990-91 prices	2,128	426	102	0

Notes:

1. Separate Department of Transport statistics on energy consumption and expenditure are not available before 1985-86. Before then the Property Services Agency managed matters centrally.
2. The breakdown by fuel for 1989-90 is estimated by applying the 1988-89 breakdown to the total expenditure for 1989-90.
3. 1990-91 figures are based on estimated outturn.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

Comptroller and Auditor-General

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the chairman of the Public Accounts Commission what was the total number of staff of the Comptroller and Auditor-General in 1961, 1970, 1980 and 1990; and how many were qualified accountants in each of those years.

Sir Peter Hordern: The number of staff employed by the Exchequer and Audit Department and its successor body, the National Audit Office, are shown below together with the numbers of qualified accountants. It should be noted that the role and responsibilities of the National Audit Office as set out in the National Audit Act 1983 are significantly enhanced from those of the Exchequer and Audit Department.

	Total staff	Trained Accountants	Qualified Accountants
1961	536	364	3
1970	585	383	5
1980	689	398	15
1990	911	161	278

Before 1975, all recruits to the audit grades has to pass external examinations following a three-year training programme specially designed to meet the Department's needs but not leading to a recognised accountancy qualification. Since 1975, all audit staff recruits have been required either to possess a recognised accountancy qualification or to study for one.

In addition, at 31 December 1990, 240 staff were at various stages of training towards a professional qualification.

PRIME MINISTER

Military and Defence Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements exist between the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Trade and Industry for conducting trials for military and defence contracts for foreign sales.

The Prime Minister: In the case of technical or operational trials of defence equipment, arrangements for trials are normally made between the customer country and the United Kingdom company involved. On occasion, the Minister of Defence can assist in such trials on a repayment basis. If the conduct of a trial requires equipment to be taken overseas, the DTI would consider any application for an export licence in the normal way.

Cabinet Structure

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will now list his Cabinet committees and sub-committees and specify any changes made in Cabinet organisation and committee structure since November 1990.

The Prime Minister: There continue to be four standing committees of the Cabinet: a defence and overseas policy committee and an economic affairs committee under my chairmanship; a home and social affairs committee under the chairmanship of my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Privy Seal; and a legislation committee under the chairmanship of my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council. Sub-committees of the standing committees will be continued or established as appropriate. Membership and terms of reference of the standing committees and their sub-committees will remain confidential.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what matters he discussed during his meeting with the President of Zimbabwe.

The Prime Minister: President Mugabe and I discussed the situation in South Africa and the prospects for the October Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting as well as developments in Zimbabwe, including the structural adjustment programme for Zimbabwean economy.

Arms Control

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the middle east arms control and non-proliferation initiative announced by President Bush on 29 May; and whether Her Majesty's Government have made any response to the United States Government on the initiative.

The Prime Minister: We warmly welcome President Bush's imaginative initiative to combat proliferation and the unrestrained spread of conventional weapons in the middle east. We look forward to taking his proposals forward, together with our own ideas, at the forthcoming meeting of the five leading arms exporters in Paris, and thereafter at the London economic summit.

ENVIRONMENT

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for which the contract was carried out.

Mr. Heseltine: The total spent by my Department, excluding PSAS, on management and computer consultancies was £9·1 million.

Rented Accommodation

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage an increase in the availability of rented accommodation suitable for older people.

Mr. Yeo: The Housing Corporation is now the major provider of new subsidised housing for rent. Its capital programme is set to rise significantly—from £1·1 billion in 1990-91 to over £2 billion in 1993-94.

Both the housing needs indicator, by which the Housing Corporation distributes resources to housing associations, and the generalised needs indicator, by which the annual local authority housing investment programme allocations are made, take into account the housing needs of the elderly.

My Department has recently commissioned an independent study of the housing needs of the elderly, to help review the provision of subsidised specialised housing for elderly people.

Disability

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports he has made, under section 7 of the Disabled Persons Act 1981, on improvements of access provision for people with disabilities, since the Act was first introduced.

Mr. Yeo: No such reports have been made.

As an alternative to implementing section 6 of the Disabled Persons Act 1981, new building regulations were laid before Parliament on 2 April 1985. These became operational in August 1985. They required that new offices, shops, single-storey factories, educational and public buildings should be made accessible to disabled people.

Further building regulations were laid before Parliament on 20 August 1987 recasting these requirements into functional form. At the same time, an approved document giving practical solutions for meeting the access requirements was published.

Public consultation took place earlier this year on proposals to widen the application of access requirements to all storeys in new non-domestic buildings, to certain alterations and extensions, and to introduce provisions aimed at reducing risks to people with impaired sight and helping those with impaired hearing. The results of the consultation exercise are being considered by my Department and the Building Regulations Advisory Committee. It is proposed to lay regulations before Parliament later this year, which will aim further to improve access requirements for disabled people.

Dogs

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next intends to meet representatives of the RSPCA to discuss a national registration scheme for dogs.

Mr. Baldry: We have regular discussions with the Joint Advisory Committee on Pets in Society, which includes RSPCA representatives, on matters relating to responsible dog ownership and to the implementation of the package of dog control measures contained in the Environmental Protection Act 1990. We will introduce the dog control measures next year. They include a duty on local authorities to enforce the requirement that dogs wear a collar and identification tag when in a public place and to ensure that stray dogs are collected up. We believe that the measures will provide a practical and effective solution to the problems caused by irresponsible owners. We remain of the view that registration would be bureaucratic, expensive to operate and ineffective.

Litter

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any representations from British Rail about provisions for clearing litter under the Environmental Protection Act.

Mr. Baldry: My Department had a number of meetings to discuss the litter provisions with British Rail, during the passage of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 through Parliament. British Rail was represented on the advisory group which drew up the code of practice on litter and refuse. My Department was also in frequent contact with British Rail during the formulation of the Litter (Statutory Undertakers) (Designation and Relevant Land) Order 1991, made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State under subsections (6) and (8) of section 86 of the Act.

Noise

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been undertaken by his Department concerning the evaluation of nuisance caused by noise.

Mr. Baldry: During the past five years the following studies have formed part of my Department's environmental noise research programme:

Survey of numbers and types of complaints made to environmental health officers about noise from domestic premises.
Survey of types of noises heard by people in their homes.
Survey of satisfaction with sound insulation in converted flats.

Studies currently taking place within the programme are:

Survey of levels of amplified music in dwellings.
Survey of attitudes to noise.

Proposed studies within the programme are surveys of disturbances caused by industrial noise, low frequency noise and transportation noise.

Ivory

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current policy on the ivory trade.

Mr. Baldry: The Government remain fully committed to maintaining the current ban on commercial trade in ivory for as long as it is necessary to ensure the survival and recovery of elephant populations. We would not support any proposals to permit trade to recommence unless we were fully satisfied that the conditions for a resumption of trade, drawn up at the seventh conference of the parties to the convention on international trade in endangered species (CITES) had been met.

Environmental Policy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the preparation of the guidance to Departments on incorporation of environmental considerations in their policy-making process.

Mr. Baldry: The guide will be published later in the year.

Housing (Elderly People)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the housing needs of elderly people in the north-west.

Mr. Yeo: Both my Department and the Housing Corporation take account of regional needs in their distribution of resources to housing associations and local authorities.

The housing needs indicator, on which the regional distribution of the Housing Corporation's capital funds is based, and the generalised needs index, which the Department uses in making housing investment programme allocations, are statistical indexes of relative housing need made up of a number of indicators, one of which is concerned with "elderly needs". These indexes are regularly reviewed.

On a national basis, we have recently commissioned an independent study of the housing needs of elderly people to help review the provision of subsidised specialised housing for this group. This will provide representative estimates of unmet need on a regional basis.

Environmental Grant Fund

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make an announcement on who will receive funding under the new environmental grant fund.

Mr. Trippier: Offers of funding totalling £650,000 have today been made to 36 voluntary organisations for projects which will help take forward the policies set out in our White Paper "This Common Inheritance".

There was an overwhelming response to the new fund. I would like to thank all those who applied for getting this first year of the fund off to such a good start and wish those who were unsuccessful this time well for next year when a total of £1 million will be available.

I am especially glad that the new fund is supporting innovative projects and groups new to environmental work, ranging from a Law Centres Federation project to promote awareness of environmental law, through work on environmental awareness among young people organised by the Girl Guides in the south-west, to a project from the Bat Conservation Trust to help Church authorities with the guests in their belfries.

I am also pleased that we have been able to support projects throughout England, including ways of resolving disputes over domestic noise in Bristol; work with the handicapped in Staffordshire; community projects in east London; and environmental networks in the west midlands and Merseyside.

A list of the groups which have been offered support is as follows:

Age Concern
The Bat Conservation Trust
The Bridle Gate Project
Bristol Recycling Consortium
British Dragonfly Society
British Trust for Conservation Volunteers
Community Land and Workspace Services
Council for Environmental Education
The Council for Occupational Standards and Qualifications in Environmental Conservation
Council for the Protection of Rural England
The Environment Council
Farming and Wildlife Trust
Forum for Initiatives in Reparation and Mediation
Friends of the Earth
The Garden History Society
The Girl Guides Association (South West)
Groundwork Foundation (South Leeds Groundwork Trust)
Henry Doubleday Research Association

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Information on my Department's investment in improving energy efficiency prior to 1989-90 is not available. Expenditure on energy efficiency measures for 1989-90 is estimated to have totalled £120,000 which in 1990-91 money terms is £130,000. Expenditure for 1990-91 is estimated to be £140,000. These figures exclude energy conservation work carried out by Property Holdings on behalf of other Government Departments.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 3 June 1991]: A total of eight energy audits of offices and specialised sites in London and the regions carried out by external consultants have been initiated in my Department within the five-year period ending March 1990. Since then the Department's energy management unit has carried out five short in-house energy audits in specialised sites and three lighting surveys have been carried out in regional offices. The majority of recommendations resulting from both major and minor audits have recommended various no-cost or low-cost energy conservation measures. These have been, or are in the process of being, implemented where practicable.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 3 June 1991]: My Department's energy management unit is staffed by four officials whose total effort on energy management represents an approximate total of 1·5 person years. An additional 0·4 person years is dedicated to energy management in the Building Research Establishment.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Nicaragua

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much grant aid has been provided for Nicaragua since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The available figures are:

Year	Total grant aid	of which Disaster relief	Technical cooperation	United Kingdom's attributable share of EC aid
1979	236	93	142	—
1980	1,757	66	61	1,630
1981	1,201	7	84	1,110
1982	1,139	13	36	1,090
1983	1,114	34	30	1,050
1984	2,549	—	9	2,540
1985	2,196	100	16	2,080
1986	1,286	83	3	1,200
1987	1,780	—	—	1,780
1988	2,740	180	—	2,560
1989	61	61	—	—

In addition, grant expenditure under the joint funding scheme—available only by United Kingdom financial year—was:

	£ thousand
Up to 1985-86	162
1986-87	24
1987-88	58
1988-89	39
1990-91	223

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what intentions Her Majesty's Government have to aid the Nicaraguan Government in their attempt to strengthen the country's educational system; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We are looking into the possibility of providing English language training.

European Development Council

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters were discussed at the European Development Council on 27 May.

Mrs. Chalker: We discussed a number of important issues, including human rights, democracy and development and tropical forests. We adopted resolutions on non-governmental organisations and counterpart funds. We also reviewed the special programme of food aid to Africa, during which I announced an additional 60,000 tonnes of food aid for Africa at an estimated cost of £16·5 million. This was widely welcomed by my fellow Ministers and by the Commission.

Biological Diversity

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government has taken to fulfil the commitment given in the White Paper, "This Common Inheritance", in September 1990 to do more to conserve biological diversity in developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: On 5 June—World Environment Day—I published "Biological Diversity and Developing Countries: Issues and Options", which summarises the ODA strategic studies announced in "This Common Inheritance". The document sets out a range of further measures which we will take. I have placed copies of the document in the Libraries.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nicaragua

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government intend to re-establish the British Council in Managua, Nicaragua; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British Council has no plans to open an office in Managua.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to improve diplomatic relations with the Nicaraguan Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We enjoy close and friendly relations with the Government of Nicaragua. I received Sr. Enrique Dreyfus, the Nicaraguan Foreign Minister, when he visited the United Kingdom last December and we held further talks in March when I visited Nicaragua to attend the San José VII meeting of EC and central American Foreign Ministers. The visit also enabled me to visit some of the projects carried out under our bilateral aid programme.

Somaliland

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government plans to establish diplomatic relations with the Somaliland Republic.

Mrs. Chalker: We have no plans to do so.

PHARE Programme

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what moneys are being made available by the United Kingdom and channelled through the PHARE—Poland and Hungary Assistance for Economic Restructuring—programme for the purpose of sending specialist advisers selected and approved by the west to provide information, advice and technical assistance to eastern European countries;

(2) how much money is being devoted under the PHARE programme for direct use in the creation of an infrastructure to support the development of democracy.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The EC's PHARE programme committed some 500 mecu in 1990 and is worth 850 mecu in 1991 and 1 billion ecu in 1992. Our contribution is some 18 per cent., or approximately £63 million, £107 million and £126 million respectively. The PHARE programme promotes economic restructuring in the countries of central and eastern Europe thereby underpinning the newly created democracies. The programme includes the financing of western specialist advisers in these countries, and training in member states.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions the United Kingdom Government impose on the use of moneys under the PHARE programme in terms of the type of end use to which resources can be applied or as to locations from which services can be brought in.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The operation of the PHARE programme is governed by European Community regulations. The British Government are represented on a management committee which oversees disbursements and considers the Commission's proposals. The regulations stipulate that only EC member states and the countries of central and eastern Europe may tender to provide services for projects wholly financed by the PHARE programme.

Algeria

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the status of the Algerian nuclear programme.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Algeria possesses one working nuclear research reactor which has been placed under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards. We understand that with Chinese co-operation Algeria is building a second reactor at Ain Oussera. At a press conference on 29 April a spokesman for the Algerian Ministry of Scientific Research said that this second reactor was for research purposes and the production of radio-isotopes, and Algeria intended to submit it to IAEA inspection. Chinese spokesmen have publicly confirmed this. We welcome these assurances, and hope the Algerian Government will invite the IAEA to inspect the facility as soon as possible.

Disarmament

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the most recent visit to the United Kingdom of Soviet military inspectors under the intermediate nuclear forces agreement verification protocols; and what has been the cost to date of implementation of the 1987 intermediate nuclear forces agreement in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The most recent visit to the United Kingdom by soviet inspectors under the intermediate nuclear forces treaty took place on 28 May 1991; RAF Greenham Common and RAF Molesworth were inspected. Treaty implementation costs in addition to the normal operating costs of the MOD are estimated to have been less than £40,000 since the treaty came into force.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation the United Kingdom had at the United Nations conference on disarmament issues; and whether his Department will be assisting in the distribution of material arising from the conference.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the United Nations conference on disarmament issues which took place in Kyoto, Japan from 27-30 May. A senior official of the Ministry of Defence attended, in a personal capacity. We have taken careful note of his report of the discussions at the conference. The public distribution of material arising out of the conference is a matter for the United Nations.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to provide help to Sierra Leone in dealing with intruders along its frontiers.

Mrs. Chalker: The Sierra Leone Government have made a non-specific request for military aid to deal with intruders from Liberia to which we are responding.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will provide details of the Sierra Leone request for aid in dealing with Liberian intruders along its frontiers.

Mrs. Chalker: We are supplying a quantity of non-lethal defence equipment to the Sierra Leone army.

Non-Government Organisations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 23 May, Official Report, column 579, to the hon. Member for Newport, West on the meeting of 14 May with non-government organisations, if he will list the matters raised in rank order to the proportion of time spent on them, without making direct reference to those parties who initiated the discussions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The discussions at this meeting were off the record. It would not be appropriate to specify how much time was devoted to each of the many topics raised.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Marina Services

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to refer Marina Services to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Redwood: The Secretary of State and I are concerned about the allegations we have heard of possible anti-competitive practices in marinas on the south coast. We have asked the Director General of Fair Trading to look into the allegations and see what the evidence shows. We are still considering this matter.

The Secretary of State has powers to refer the supply of marina services to the Monopolies and Mergers

Commission and would use these powers if evidence emerged which justified a reference. Any evidence of monopoly abuse or anti-competitive practices to provide the basis for a reference should be brought to the attention of the Director General.

Emergency Telephone Service

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken to ensure a comprehensive emergency telephone service under the Government's policy for telecommunications.

Mr. Redwood: All public telecommunications operators including BT, Mercury Communications and the two cellular operators, Cellnet and Racal-Vodafone, are obliged under their respective operating licences to provide an emergency call service to the public free of charge—the "999" service—enabling them to notify emergency organisations (police, fire and ambulance services) of emergencies.

Exit Strategies

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) further to his answer of 13 May, Official Report, column 39, on exit strategies, if he will list how much of the £1 million annually for the support of projects is for (a) salaries and (b) administration in each of the task forces;

(2) if the £1 million is for capital projects or is minus the salaries, rent and administration of the task forces themselves.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 5 June 1991]: The quoted figure of about £1 million per annum refers to project expenditure alone; this may be capital expenditure, project running costs (including salaries and administration), or both.

The task forces' own running costs of salaries, rent, administration and associated expenditure are not included.

Textiles

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to include all children's clothing in legislation covering fire retardant materials in the same degree as presently covers furniture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 5 June 1991]: No. It would not be reasonable for clothing to meet fire resistance requirements to the same degree applicable to the covers of upholstered furniture. Such fire resistant treatments are not suitable for most of the lightweight fabrics used in summerwear, and in the limited range of fabrics where it might be possible the comfort of the garment would be severely affected.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to extend existing regulations under consumer protection legislation to include shell suits and similar fashion wear in respect of fire resistant materials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 5 June 1991]: We have no present plans to extend the scope of the Nightwear (Safety) Regulations to daywear garments for children. However, section 10 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987, the general safety requirement, makes it an offence to supply consumer goods, including articles of clothing, that are not reasonably safe having regard to all the circumstances.

My Department has recently advised the British Standards Institution of its support for the development of a flammability specification that could be applied to children's daywear garments. In the interim, the Department is supporting the enforcement authorities in their discussions with the clothing industry on a voluntary scheme for flammability labelling of childrenswear. We shall continue to monitor developments closely.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Higher Education

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many universities have applied to be renamed as polytechnics.

Mr. Alan Howarth: None, yet.

Veterinary Schools

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he expects the Universities Funding Council to announce a decision on capital grants to veterinary schools;

(2) what representations he has received from veterinary schools for capital grants to develop the student facilities; and if he will discuss such grants with the Universities Funding Council.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Universities Funding Council's capital allocations for 1991-92 were set out in circular letter 7/91, a copy of which is in the Library. My right hon. and learned Friend has not received any representations from veterinary schools on the allocations; nor would he expect to do so since, under the Education Reform Act 1988, it is for the UFC to determine the distribution of funding between individual institutions.

Data Protection (Schools)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools there are in the United Kingdom; what proportion have computers used for administrative purposes; what steps he has taken to satisfy himself about the propriety of personal data held by the governors, head teachers and parent teachers' associations on these computers; whether he has held meetings with local authority associations about the cost of registration of schools under the Data Protection Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The number of schools in the United Kingdom is 34,958. Information is not available on the number of schools with computers used for administrative purposes. The control and use of personal data by data users is a matter for the office of the Data Protection Registrar. No meetings have so far been held with local authority associations specifically to discuss the cost of registration, but draft guidance for schools on data protection was circulated widely to the associations and others at the end of October 1990. Discussions are still taking place with the office of the Data Protection Registrar on the scope of registration by schools and guidance will be issued when these are complete.

List 99

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science why the personal information associated with List 99 is not kept on computer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The information held in relation to a decision by my right hon. and learned Friend to exclude a person from teaching or work with children or young persons on grounds of misconduct and add his or her name to List 99 could not easily be converted to a computer record.

Further Education

Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many persons aged 19 years have followed non-advanced education courses in schools and colleges in the last five years.

Mr. Eggar: The number of full or part-time students aged 19 years in schools and on further education courses in publicly funded colleges is as follows:

Thousands

	Schools	Further education	Total
1985-86	[1]3	89	92
1986-87	3	88	90
1987-88	3	83	85
1988-89	3	82	85
1989-90	3	82	86

[1] Includes adults in Special Schools.

Notes:
Numbers may not add to total because of rounding.
Age is at 31 August at the start of the academic year.
Adult Education Centres have been excluded.

Schools Reorganisation

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of each proposal for a reorganisation or closure of schools involving the transfer of sixth form provision to (a) a sixth form college or (b) a further education or tertiary college, with name of area, and local education authority and colleges concerned, the approximate number of pupil/students involved, the decision of the Secretary of State, and date, for each year since 1979 for which data are available.

Mr. Eggar: The full information requested could be provided only at a disproportionate cost. Those proposals decided by the Secretary of State which involved the establishment of tertiary or sixth form colleges from 1984 onwards include the following:

Students

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the numbers and percentage of the total of students aged 16 to 18 years in full-time education in (a) school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges and (c) further education, including tertiary, colleges for each year since 1979 for which data are available.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is as follows:

Full-time 16 to 18-year-olds

	Further education		Sixth form colleges		Other schools[1]		Total
	Number (000)	Percentage	Number (000)	Percentage	Number (000)	Percentage	Number (000)	Percentage

[1] The data for "other schools" are all 16 to 18-year-olds in schools (including special schools), whether or not they are in the sixth form. Data for sixth form students aged 16 to 18 are not available centrally.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the numbers of (a) full-time, (b) part-time and (c) full-time equivalent students in (i) universities, (ii) polytechnics, (iii) other higher education institutions and (iv) (i) plus (ii) plus (iii), for each year since 1979.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information is given in the table:

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the total numbers of full-time equivalent students in higher education aged 18 to 21 years in each year since 1979; and what percentage of the same age group they represented.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information is given in the table:

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the proportion of (i) 16-year-olds, (ii) 17-year-olds, (iii) 18-year-olds and (iv) 16 to 18-year-olds in receipt of (a) full-time education, (b) full-time training, (c) (a) plus (b), (d) part-time training and (e) a full-time or part-time education or training, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested for the academic years 1978-79 to 1988-89 is given in the Department's statistical bulletins 2/87, 9/90, copies of which are in the Library (these show part-time education for 1979-80, 1981-82, 1983-84, 1987-88, 1988-89). Figures for 1989-90 will be published in a new statistical bulletin 13/91 shortly and are as follows:

Age as at 31 August at the start of the academic year.
Columns may not add up to totals because of rounding.

Examinations

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the number of entries to and passes in the advanced supplementary level and advanced level examinations for each year since the introduction of AS-level; and what percentage the number of entries to, and passes in AS-level was of the number of entries to and passes in A-level in the same years.

Mr. Eggar: The numbers of leavers attempting at least one AS examination as a proportion of those who attempted A-level examinations was 5·3 per cent. and for passes the proportion was 3·6 per cent.

Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to collect data on the number of national vocational qualifications levels 2 and 3, or equivalent qualifications or ones of a similar standard obtained by 16 to 19-year-olds in all types of institution and training.

Mr. Eggar: We are undertaking a pilot survey, jointly with the Employment Department, of information held by the main bodies responsible for awarding vocational qualifications. The aim is to extend the survey to cover virtually all vocational qualifications. We will also be consulting shortly about proposals for FE colleges to publish their results and send copies to the Department.

Recreation and Sports

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to promote training and educational opportunities in recreation and sports for ethnic minorities.

Mr. Atkins: We have made physical education a foundation subject in the national curriculum for all pupils aged five to 16, including those from ethnic minorities. In addition, the Sports Council, which this Department funds, is chairing the Industry Lead Body for Sport and Recreation which is working to produce a structure of national vocational qualifications in the area of sport and recreation. These will be delivered on an equal opportunity basis.

Schools Inspectorate

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn on 8 May 1991 at column 469, how long the thorough internal review of the structure and role of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools will take; whether and when its conclusions will be published; and whether there will be a period of public consultation before decisions on the review are made.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The internal review got under way immediately following my reply of 8 May 1991 at column 469 to the hon. Member. I have asked it to report at the beginning of July. I do not expect to publish the review itself which will take the form of confidential advice to Ministers. I shall wish to consider how to act on the conclusions of the review once I have received them.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will be inviting evidence from outside his Department in the course of the review of the structure and role of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The review team will not formally invite or receive evidence. However, the team is seeking views from a wide range of people and bodies within the education world and beyond it.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the names, grades and posts of those conducting the internal review of the structure and role of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The internal review is being conducted by a team consisting of three officials in the Department and a member of the inspectorate. Their grades are as follows:

Assistant Secretary—DES-team leader
Staff Inspector—HMI
Higher Executive Officer (Development)—DES
Personal Secretary—DES

Following normal practice, I do not intend to disclose the names of individual officials who are preparing advice for Ministers.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn on 8 May 1991, at column 469, whether, under any new arrangements for the inspection of the education service, it is his intention that the head of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools should continue to publish annual reports independent of, and unamended by, Ministers.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I would expect any inspectorate to be free to publish annual reports independent of and unamended by Ministers. I am looking to the review to offer advice on this and any other related matter if the team wishes but I have no complaints about the present arrangements for HMI so far as reporting is concerned.

Government Scientists

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what involvement Government-employed scientists have had with the system for the analysis research and training programme operated by the international geosphere-biosphere programme of the International Council of Scientific Users.

Mr. Alan Howarth: No Government-employed scientist has been involved with the international geosphere-biosphere programme global change system analysis research and training (START) initiative, but a member of staff of the Natural Environment Research Council attended, in a personal capacity, the workshop in Bellagio, Italy at which the main objectives and the proposed implementation strategy of START were established.

HEALTH

Cancer

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table indicating the death rate from cancer for the United Kingdom and for each of the other members of the European Community.

Mr. Dorrell: A table listing death rates from malignant neoplasms, all ages for members of the European Community follows. The most recent data available for Spain is 1985, and for Belgium 1986. Data for 1987 are the latest available for all other members, with the exception of the United Kingdom, which is 1989. 1987 data for the United Kingdom are however also provided for comparison purposes.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from City hospital, Nottingham regarding NHS trust status; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: An application for NHS trust status from April 1992 has been received from the City hospital, Nottingham and is currently the subject of a three-month public consultation exercise conducted by Trent regional health authority.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations has he had from University hospital, Queens medical centre, Nottingham regarding NHS trust status; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The University hospital, Queens medical centre, Nottingham expressed an interest in becoming an NHS trust from 1 April 1992. The unit subsequently decided to defer its application.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy on answering written parliamentary questions relating to NHS hospital trusts.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Rochdale (Sir C. Smith) on 30 October 1990 at column 445.

Low Income

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will consider extending the valid period of certificates issued under the health benefits low-income scheme from six to 12 months;

(2) if he will introduce a formal right of appeal for late claims for refunds of costs incurred for dental, optical and prescription charges.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, 22 May, column 530, if he will make a statement on the remit of the review of the health benefits low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The review of the low income scheme will be wide-ranging. It will examine all aspects of the administration of the NHS low income scheme, particularly the amount of information intending claimants are asked to provide, the adequacy of existing forms, leaflets and publicity, and current procedures for assessing entitlement under the scheme. In addition, we shall examine current exemption arrangements, including the present six-month period for which certificates are valid, the time limits for obtaining refunds for charges incurred and the scope for improving existing review arrangements.

As my earlier reply made clear we aim to produce proposals for change by the end of 1991.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has conducted to establish that glasses are available at a cost not exceeding the full value of vouchers issued under the low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department undertakes surveys each autumn to monitor the effectiveness of the voucher scheme.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on the health benefits low income scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently received a report from the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux (NACAB) concerning the NHS low income scheme. This detailed report is most welcome and particularly timely in light of the Department's review of this scheme. As the review is taken forward officials will be discussing with NACAB the issues and recommendations which they have made.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will extend the period during which a person may apply for a refund of dental and optical charges under the health benefits low income scheme;

(2) if his review of the health benefits low income scheme will examine the cost-effectiveness of replacing the health benefits low income scheme by transferring the costs to the national insurance contribution scheme.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve the provision of leaflets and claim forms for the health benefits low income scheme in languages other than English.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Present arrangements already allow for refunds of most dental and optical charges to be made up to one month after payment of the charge and beyond that time if there is good cause for the claim being delayed. The review of the NHS low income scheme will provide a fresh opportunity for the question of time limits for refunds to be reconsidered.

Government policy on NHS charges are based primarily on the principle that those who can afford to make a contribution should do so, whilst those who have difficulty in paying the charges should be protected. There are no plans to change this policy.

The provision of leaflets in languages other than English will be considered as part of a more general examination of the low income forms and leaflets.

Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now reply to the letter sent to his Department on 9 April by the hon. Member for Gower regarding a constituent resident in Mumbles, Swansea.

Mr. Dorrell: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State replied yesterday.

HIV

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has given to inquiries from legal representatives of patients who have been infected with HIV through national health service blood transfusions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have placed in the Library a copy of a reply which I have sent to Mr. Graham Ross of J. Keith Park and Co.

General Practitioners

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners in Great Britain bought added years (old style) pension rights in 1975; how many of those general practitioners were under 43 years old in 1972; what were the figures for general practitioners aged under 44 years in steps of £500 based on average updated earnings to October 1972; and how many of the general practitioners are still paying for the added years.

Mr. Dorrell: In England and Wales, approximately 30,000 general medical and dental practitioners took advantage of the NHS pension schemes (old style) added years provisions. The majority of these have since retired with benefits from the scheme.

Further information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information about parallel schemes in Northern Ireland and Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and for Scotland.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to issue guidance to general practitioner fundholders on how they should respond to inquiries from hon. Members representing their area on matters of policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: There are no plans to do so. If an hon. Member has a concern about the activities of a GP fundholder I would suggest he raises it with the relevant family health services authority.

Rabies

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list incidents of rabies in humans recorded in Britain in each year since 1970.

Mr. Dorrell: Cases reported were as follows:

1975	2
1976	1
1977	2
1978	1
1981	1
1986	1
1987	1
1988	2

No cases were reported in the remaining 13 years between 1970 and 1990 inclusive.

Health Benefits Scheme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what obligation there is on opticians and dentists to provide information and advice on claiming under the health benefits low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The National Health Service (General Ophthalmic Services) Regulations 1986 require opticians to display prominently a notice showing possible entitlement to vouchers under the low income scheme. Dentists are required by their terms of service (set out in the National Health Service (General Dental Services) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1990) to display prominently a notice, indicating NHS charges which are payable under general dental services and entitlement to exemption from and remission of NHS charges.

Mobility Needs

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the mobility needs of adults with arthritic and rheumatic diseases.

Mr. Dorrell: It is a matter for health authorities to assess the need for health care of their resident populations including help with mobility, and to make appropriate provision. Individual assessment is a matter for clinical judgment. Mobility allowance is also available, from the Department of Social Security, to assist with long-range mobility needs.

Local Authority Service Provision

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what areas of local authority service provision for which he has responsibility payments are required to be made to individuals who are not employees (a) in the form of a grant or one-off payment and (b) on receipt of paid invoices.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There is no requirement on local authorities to make any such payments.

Private Ambulance Services

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what conditions govern the issuing of operative licences to the proprietors of private ambulance services;

(2) if the applicants for licences to operate private ambulance services are vetted for details of previous criminal convictions.

Mr. Dorrell: Private ambulance services are not subject to any vetting or licensing procedures.

Preventive Health Care

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to include sections on maternal, child and mental health in the imminent Green Paper on preventive health care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The health of pregnant women, infants and children and mental health, together with suggested objectives and targets, is discussed in the Green Paper "Health of the Nation" which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State published on 4 June.

Social Services

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision his Department has made to each county for social services (a) in 1991-92 and (b) the previous year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Provision for the main part of personal social services revenue expenditure is determined through standard spending assessments. Figures for the English counties for 1990-91 and 1991-92 are shown in the DOE standard spending assessment handbooks for 1990-91 and 1991-92 respectively, copies of which are in the Library.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many copies of his departmental report No. 39 on nuclear accident countermeasures have been printed; at what cost; and to whom copies have been distributed.

Mr. Dorrell: A total of 1,500 copies of this report were printed. The costs of printing and publishing were borne by Her Majesty's Stationery Office, which I understand aims to recover them from sales revenue.

Copies have been distributed to: regional and district health authorities; family health services authorities; local authority county emergency planning officers; members of the United Kingdom working group on stable iodine prophylaxis; and Government Departments with responsibilities for nuclear emergency planning. A copy is also available in the Library.

Disability

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of adults is visually impaired;

(2) what percentage of the population has impaired hearing;

(3) what percentage of disabled people is receiving 24-hour help.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on the prevalence of different types of disability, and such information as is available centrally about the proportion of disabled people who receive 24-hour help, is given in the reports published in 1988-89 in the survey of disability carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of adults are registered as disabled in Britain.

Mr. Dorrell: At 31 March 1990, approximately 3·2 per cent. of people aged 16 years and over were registered with local authority social services departments in England as being physically disabled. Equivalent figures relating to Wales and Scotland are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland.

Residential Care

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will increase the number of residential care places in Britain.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Decisions about the amount of residential care provision required for people seeking public financial support must be based on the assessment by each social services authority of the needs of the population it serves.

Moves made under our community care policy towards increasing the amount and range of day and domiciliary services enable a greater proportion of people to remain in their own homes.

Social Work

Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many social worker posts remained unfilled in local authorities in England and Wales on the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. Estimates of the number of full-time vacancies among field workers will be included in the "Social Services Employment Survey", due to be published shortly by the Association of Directors of Social Services and the Local Government Management Board, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the number of cases referred to local authority social services in England and Wales that remained unallocated on the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

WALES

Waste Disposal

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the projected investment costs forecast to be incurred in 1991-92 and 1992-93 for landfill sites by each listed waste disposal authority in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not available centrally. This is a matter for the waste disposal authorities.

Teachers

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of women head teachers in each local education authority in Wales in (a) primary schools in 1985 and 1990 and (b) secondary schools in 1985 and 1990.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is given in the following table:

(a) Primary Schools

	1984-85	1990-91
Clwyd	80	77
Dyfed	114	133
Gwent	110	112

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state the amount of capital invested on landfill sites in Wales by each waste disposal authority in Wales since 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Information on capital invested on landfill sites is not available centrally. However, the figures for capital spending on refuse disposal, which includes landfill, are given in the table.

Gross capital expenditure on refuse disposal 1984-85 to 1989-90[1]

Disability

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the organisations representing disabled people in Wales which have contacted his Department; and on how many occasions since 1987 he has met each such organisation.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Welsh Office maintains close contact with the major all-Wales organisations representing people with physical or sensory disabilities or mental handicaps.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and his ministerial colleagues meet such organisations from time to time. For example, my right hon. Friend formally opened the new regional headquarters of the Spastics Society in Cardiff on 16 January this year; and in June last year, my predecessor formally opened the new offices of the Wales Council for the Deaf.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the number of disabled people in Wales, by category; and if he will publish his latest estimate.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The latest available wide-ranging information on the incidence of physical and sensory disability is contained in the reports of the OPCS surveys published in 1988-89. These showed that 16·4 per cent. of adults and 3·1 per cent. of children in Wales have such disabilities, the proportions in the upper severity categories 6 to 10 being 6 per cent. of adults (the highest in the United Kingdom) and 2 per cent. of children (equal highest in the United Kingdom).

The latest available figures show that in 1989-90 there were 10,406 people in Wales known to have serious mental handicaps.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policies he has initiated since 1987 to assist people with disabilities in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: On 8 May 1990 the Welsh Office issued a circular giving comprehensive guidance to health and local authorities on good practice in the development and delivery of services for people with physical and/or sensory disabilities. Authorities are expected to have regard to that advice in preparing their local strategies for health and their social care plans, which in Wales are being jointly prepared by all the statutory and voluntary agencies concerned.

We have introduced this year a new grant scheme, unique to Wales, to promote the development of more flexible forms of community care for elderly people and for people with physical or sensory disabilities.

The all-Wales mental handicap strategy has been in place since March 1983. We are currently undertaking a comprehensive review of the strategy and propose shortly to publish for consultation our provisional conclusions on the framework for service development from April 1993.

Deafness

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he proposes to take in order to ensure a greater supply of teachers of the deaf in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: We are seeking to increase the number of teachers in Wales who are qualified to meet the educational needs of deaf pupils through a programme of in-service training. Over £100,000 has been approved by my Department for this purpose this year through the grants for education support and training programme.

More generally, the recently introduced criteria for the approval of initial teachers training courses requires that, on completion of their course, students should have developed the capacity to identify pupils with special educational needs or with learning difficulties and to understand the ways in which the potential of such pupils can be developed.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he proposes to help deaf children in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Children Act 1989, to be implemented on 14 October 1991, lays a general duty on local social services authorities to promote the welfare of children who are in need by providing an appropriate range and level of services. Section 17 of the Act defines children in need so as to include deaf children. By virtue of schedule 2 to the Act, services to such children should be designed to minimise the effect of their disability and give them the opportunity to lead lives which are as normal as possible. Guidance on these provisions is contained in chapter 2 of the publication "The Children Act 1989: Guidance and Regulations—Volume 2 Family Support, Day Care and Educational Provision for Young Children" (HMSO 1991), a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Further guidance is in preparation which will give advice to local authorities on the discharge of their duty to children with disabilities.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to increase the number of speech therapists in Wales;

(2) how many speech therapy posts in Wales are currently unfilled.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Information on the current number of unfilled speech therapy posts in Wales is not held centrally. However, the results of the 1990 annual manpower resource planning (MRP) exercise carried out by Welsh district health authorities indicated a shortage of 27 speech therapists across Wales as at September 1989.

The extent and location of training provision for speech therapy in Wales is being considered along with that for other health care professions in the light of the manpower resource planning results and the new arrangements to be introduced for the planning and funding of certain pre-registration education and training at the all-Wales level.

In the short term, speech therapy shortages are being addressed by my Department through the sponsorship of students. As a result of Welsh Office funding in 1990 and 1991 an additional 10 speech therapy students are being sponsored by Welsh health authorities on the understanding that they work for at least two years in Wales on completion of their training.

Health Boards

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the annual remuneration of (a) health authority chairman and (b) health board members in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Health authority chairmen are remunerated at different rates. These are currently as follows:

Band 1—£17,610 per annum
Applicable to Clwyd, Gwent, Mid Glamorgan and South Glamorgan and West Glamorgan Health Authorities.

Band 2—£15,659 per annum
Applicable to East Dyfed and Gwynedd Health Authorities.

Band 3—£13,812 per annum
Applicable to Pembrokeshire and Powys Health Authorities.

All non-executive health authority members receive remuneration of £5,000 per annum. Executive members receive their appropriate NHS salaries.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what criteria he has adopted for appointment to health boards in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Members are appointed on the strength of the skills and experience they can bring to an authority's work.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those hospitals whose managements he has written to, or spoken to, about acquisition of hospital trust status.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The director of the national health service in Wales has written to all managers of health service units explaining Ministers' view that although national health service trusts are seen as the natural organisational model for hospitals and other units providing health care, the decision on whether to seek self-governing status is a matter for individual units, taking account of local circumstances and enthusiasm.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which hospitals in Wales are eligible for hospital trust status.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Any hospital or other health service unit actively providing patient care may apply to become a national health service trust. This would include hospitals, community-based services (whether alone or together with hospitals) and ambulance services.

Health Service Grading

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nurses there are in each health authority area in Wales with regrading appeals outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The numbers of regrading appeals outstanding at the three different levels are as shown in the following table:

Health authority	Outstanding appeals at: District level	Regional (all-Wales) level	National (negotiating council) level
Clwyd	75	117	11
East Dyfed	229	66	5
Gwent	282	287	2
Gwynedd	—	166	36
Mid Glamorgan	616	206	—
Pembrokeshire	—	55	—
Powys	—	161	2
South Glamorgan	310	181	17
West Glamorgan	—	103	22

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the replies given to the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy) on 26 March 1991, and to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 28 March 1991.

Aldbourne Associates

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 23 May, Official Report, column 571, what is the total value of the housing consultancy work given to Aldbourne Associates on (a) the priority estates project and (b) housing options for Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information for the years prior to 1989-90 cannot, within the time available, be provided in the form requested. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman in due course.

It is not possible to attribute every payment made to Aldbourne Associates in 1989-90. 1990-91 and 1991-92 precisely to PEP or to HOW. Since its launch in January 1990, housing options Wales has subsumed the priority estates project programme. It is estimated that payments totalling approximately £98,000 can reasonably be attributed to elements of HOW that are distinct from previous work on PEP. The residue of the sums referred to in the previous answer includes payments made in respect of PEP, and of the Department's alternatives for social housing (ASH) programme (also now subsumed within HOW). Payments readily attributable to ASH for these years total some £27,000.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 23 May, Official Report, column 571, whether Aldbourne Associates' contract was awarded subsequent to an open tender.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: No.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 23 May, Official Report, column 571, when Aldbourne Associate's main contract was awarded; what length of time it was scheduled to cover; and what subsequent ancillary contracts were awarded.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The initial contract (with Miss C. Lesley Andrews, rather than with Aldbourne Associates Ltd.) was made in September 1983, in respect of work to be completed by 31 March 1986. Before the end of that period, the Department embarked upon the second phase of its PEP programme; a new contract was therefore made in November 1985, in respect of work to be completed by 31 March 1988. Subsequently, contracts were made in March 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1991 extending the application of the main work in line with the development of the Department's priority estates project, alternatives for social housing and housing options for Wales programmes.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each visit he has made to (a) sixth form colleges, (b) further education colleges, (c) university colleges and (d) polytechnics, in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has visited the following colleges:

	College	Date
(a)	None	—
(b)	Pembrokeshire College	22 May 1990
	Bangor Normal College	20 May 1991
	Pencoed College	22 May 1991
(c)	University College of North Wales	30 July 1990
	University College of Wales, Aberystwyth	12 November 1990
	University of Wales, College of Cardiff	11 February 1991
	University College Swansea	17 April 1991
(d)	Polytechnic of Wales	7 May 1991

Sports Council for Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when he last met the chairman of the Sports Council for Wales;

(2) when he proposes to visit the headquarters of the Sports Council for Wales;

(3) how many times he has visited the headquarters of the Sports Council for Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I have visited the national sports centre for Wales once, on 25 February, when I last met the chairman of the Sports Council for Wales. No further visit has been arranged.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for extra financing of the Sports Council for Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to provide extra financing for the Sports Council for Wales in addition to the generous grant-in-aid settlement announced in my reply to the hon. Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 28 February 1991.

Teachers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which teacher unions he has met.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I met representatives of the NAS/UWT (Wales) on 7 September 1990. We are always prepared to consider requests from the teachers' unions for meetings to discuss educational issues in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he will take to improve the morale of teachers in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 28 November 1990. Our intention to establish a pay review body for teachers will enhance the status of the profession and improve morale further.

Standard Assessment Tests

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to meet the teacher unions to discuss the standard assessment tests.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on Tuesday 4 June.

Health Service Waiting Lists

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority regarding the best means of reducing waiting lists in ophthalmology and general surgery.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I last met the chairman and consultants from South Glamorgan health authority on 24 May to discuss current waiting time issues, including those affecting ophthalmology, and ways of tackling them.

Rail Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will reconsider the contents of his letter of 31 March, addressed to Mr. J. Lazarus, county planning officer of Gwynedd county council, concerning the economic impact of the proposed reduction in British Rail's through services between Holyhead and Euston next autumn.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My letter did not refer to the economic impact of rail services to Holyhead. It did, however, draw attention to improvements to the number of journey opportunities, journey times and rolling stock which British Rail intend to bring to these services.

Social Services

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision his Department has made to each county council for social services in (a) 1991-92 and (b) the previous year.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Revenue support grant (RSG) for each county council in Wales is paid in support of services generally and is not hypothecated.

The level of total standard spending (TSS) allowed for in the local government finance settlement for 1990-91 and 1991-92 is given in the following table. Also shown are the notional amounts provided for personal social services; it is however for local authorities to determine how resources should be allocated to particular services.

Year	Total Standard Spending £ million	Personal Social Services £ million
1990-91	2,114·5	186·8
1991-92	2,433·1	224·0

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what, at 1992 prices, was the total spending on health and personal social services in each year since 1978-79; what is the average percentage increase since May 1979; and what are the equivalent capital provisions within these annual figures.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information, on the new planning total basis, is estimated to be as follows:

£ million at 1991-92 prices

	Total net public expenditure on health and personal social services	of which: Capital
1978-79	1,082	70
1979-80	1,085	62
1980-81	1,177	66
1981-82	1,225	80
1982-83	1,257	83
1983-84	1,274	84
1984-85	1,313	89
1985-86	1,327	85
1986-87	1,381	90
1987-88	1,456	88
1988-89	1,506	78
1989-90	1,537	101
1990-91	1,615	118

The percentage increase for total net spending between 1978-79 and 1990-91 was over 49 per cent. in real terms (about 275 per cent. in cash). During this period, the annual average percentage increase was a little over 4 per cent. in real terms (23 per cent. in cash).

Health Service Waiting Lists

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings with consultant ophthalmologists and general surgeons regarding initiatives to reduce the appropriate waiting list he has conducted during each month since January 1991.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I met general surgeons at Prince Charles, Morriston, University hospital of Wales, and the Royal Gwent hospitals and consultant ophthalmologists at the University hospital of Wales and Singleton hospital at a series of meetings on 24 and 29 May to discuss waiting list problems. In addition I have discussed the matter when visiting other hospitals over the past six months.

Anaesthetic Services

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken by the Welsh Office to make provision for additional hospital-based general anaesthetic services for tooth extraction in Wales in the light of the Poswillo report.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Consultation upon the Poswillo report is continuing. The outcome will be announced in due course.

Education

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of the booklet, "How is Your Child Getting on at School"; and by what means it is being distributed.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Total production costs of the bilingual version of the booklet issued in Wales were £27,600.

Free copies were distributed through the Central Office of Information to all primary schools, main post offices and libraries.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the maximum and minimum basic rates of pay recorded in the Doncaster area of the Employment Service from advertised posts in (a) the manufacturing sector and (b) the service sector for (i) full-time and (ii) part-time work, showing figures for (1) men and (2) women for the latest date he has available.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested is not available, but figures on average earnings in April 1990 in South Yorkshire metropolitan county, for full-time men and women workers, are published in part E of the 1990 new earnings survey report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for which the contract was carried out.

Mr. Jackson: The amount spent by my Department in 1990-91 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases, was £10·8 million.

The following firms were awarded consultancy contracts by the Department of Employment Group during 1990-91:

Ex-offenders (Training)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what were the levels of expenditure on employment training for ex-offenders for each year since the inception of employment training;

(2) whether expenditure on employment training for ex-offenders has increased since the launch of Training and Enterprise Councils.

Mr. Jackson: Trainees do not have to say whether they are ex-offenders so there is no reliable information on their involvement in ET.

Earnings

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide the latest information available showing the level of average earnings for (a) manual and (b) non-manual males and females in full-time employment in (i) the county of Lancashire, and (b) England as a whole.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested can be found in tables 108, 109, 111 and 112 of part E of the 1990 new earnings survey report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Employment Credit Schemes

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make the results of the Government's market research into the viability of employment credit schemes, and the pilot action credit scheme, available to the training and enterprise councils; and which training and enterprise councils are planning to adopt a form of such schemes in each area.

Mr. Jackson: The results of the market research carried out on behalf of the Employment Service were published in July 1990 under the title "Action Credit: Survey of Clients", and a copy was placed in the Library of the House. The results of the pilot action credit scheme will be published shortly. They will be made available to TECs through Employment Department regional offices. No central record is kept of the extent to which TECs are planning such schemes, but it is understood that few TECs currently have such plans.

Health and Safety Inspectors

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many health and safety inspectors are currently employed wholly or mainly in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: On 1 May 1991 the Health and Safety Executive employed 55 health and safety inspectors working mainly or wholly in Wales.

Early Retirement

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his latest estimate for the number of people over the age of 55 years who have retired early due to redundancy.

Mr. Jackson: Reliable estimates are not available.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

EC Legislation

44. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he has any further plans to review the arrangements for considering EC legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government are committed to carrying out a full review of the new scrutiny procedures at the end of this parliamentary Session. In addition, as I have made clear on a number of occasions, most recently on 29 April, I keep the arrangements constantly under review, and I am presently considering whether to bring forward any proposals in the short term to deal with points that have arisen from the operation of the European Standing Committees.

Recycled Paper

45. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Lord President of the Council what percentage of publications printed by HMSO on behalf of the House of Commons appear on recycled paper; and what plans there are to increase this percentage.

Mr. MacGregor: No publications printed by HMSO on behalf of the House of Commons are produced on recycled paper at present. Much of the material concerned is of archival significance and when the question was considered by the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee during the last Session, it concurred with the advice given by HMSO that recycled paper was currently unsuitable for use in producing parliamentary publications, largely due to the poor archival qualities of the paper. However, the matter is being kept under review and I have asked the Sub-Committee to look again at the proposal that the Vote bundle be printed on recycled paper.

SCOTLAND

Infant Mortality

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the infant mortality rate in (a) each Scottish constituency, (b) each health board area, and (c) each postal district, in the last available year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Provisional figures show that there were 510 infant deaths in Scotland in 1990, giving an infant mortality rate of 7·7 deaths per 1,000 live births. This continues the long-term downward trend. At this level, care must be taken in comparing rates for different areas.

Rates for the 15 health board areas are given below: those based on fewer than 10 deaths are marked with an asterisk.

Rates for the 72 parliamentary constituencies and the 438 postal districts are not given because comparisons at this area level could be misleading.

Infant Death Rates, Scotland 1990 (Provisional)

Health Board Areas	Number
Borders	10·7
Forth Valley	8·1
Dumfries and Galloway	*5·0
Fife	7·2
Grampian	6·8
Highland	8·5
Lothian	7·9
Tayside	9·1
Orkney	*7·4
Shetland	*0·0
Western Isles	*8·7
Argyll and Clyde	10·1
Ayrshire and Arran	6·4
Greater Glasgow	7·3
Lanarkshire	7·4

Justices of the Peace

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many justices of the peace in Scotland are (a) men and (b) women; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table.

I am advised on the appointment of justices of the peace for each district and islands area by advisory committees. The committees have all been given guidance to the effect that it is desirable that the area of selection be wide and the choice comprehensive, so that commissions of the peace may include both men and women and be broadly representative of all sections of the community which they serve.

Justices of the peace in Scotland as at 1 May 1991

	Men	Women	Total
Justices appointed by the Secretary of State	2,893	745	3,638
Ex officio justices nominated by local authorities	235	59	294
Justices by virtue of having held office as a magistrate immediately before 16 May 1975	418	44	462
All justices	3,546	848	4,394

Hospital Services (East Lothian)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultation took place between Lothian health board and the Scottish ambulance service about the implications of closures of hospital services in East Lothian on the workload of the ambulance service before those wards and units were closed; and if he will make a statement on the measures being taken to meet that workload in terms of manpower, equipment and finance.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish ambulance service was consulted by the health board as part of the public consultation of interested parties from 29 May to 30 July 1990.

In order to meet the additional workload and to improve the service, including a reduction in single manning, 14 additional staff were employed in the East Lothian area at a cost of £286,000. No extra vehicles and equipment were required.

Cottage Hospitals

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for the last five years for which figures are available, the bed occupancy rate of Meigle cottage hospital.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is shown in the table.

In-patient bed occupancy rate at Meigle cottage hospital years ending 30 September

Year	Occupancy Per cent.
1986	81·8
1987	74·5
1988	82·6
1989	81·0
1990	83·4

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Government policy concerning cottage hospitals in general, and Meigle cottage hospital in particular.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is primarily the responsibility of health boards to determine the extent and level of services they provide in the light of local circumstances and priorities. Proposals for the future of Meigle cottage hospital are currently being considered by Tayside health board.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many isolates of legionella species have been found in the water supply of Greater Glasgow health board premises in the last year; which hospitals have been affected; and what steps have been taken.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since June 1990 one species of Legionellaceae, namely, Legionella Pneumophila serogroup 1, has been found in the water systems within Greater Glasgow health board's premises.

During 1990 the Glasgow royal infirmary and the Glasgow Western infirmary both recorded cases of Legionnaire's disease. There are currently no outbreaks in Greater Glasgow area.

Greater Glasgow health board has an ongoing programme of water systems disinfection, maintenance and upgrading and are researching the proliferation of legionellae bacterium in water distribution systems. Over the past two years £250,000 has been spent on these measures and an allocation of £500,000 has been made for 1991-92.

Health Boards (Regrading)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the number of regraded medical physics technicians, pharmacy technicians and medical photographers who have appealed against their new grade; and how many of these appeals have been heard.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on appeals lodged with health boards against their implementation of a new pay and grading structure for various groups of technicians and the length of time it has taken to process them is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many, both in absolute and percentage terms, of physiological measurement technicians, cardiology, were upgraded during the recent restructuring exercise in (a) Greater Glasgow health board and (b) all other health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The agreement concluded by the Professional and Technical Staffs B Whitley council in September 1989 related to a new pay and grading structure for various groups of technicians, including physiological measurement technicians and cardiographers. Information is not held centrally on the grades of staff prior and subsequent to implementation of the agreement and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In the financial sense, all staff received an increase on assimilation to the pay spine, which was one of the features of the agreement.

Further Education

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the amount of access funds allocated to each college of further education in Scotland for 1990-91 and the amount paid out to date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The allocations to the individual colleges of further education are listed in the table. All the sums concerned have been paid to the education authorities with the exception of that allocated to Shetland Islands council. It has only recently accepted the requirements for participation in the access funds and has yet to indicate the extent of its commitments for the remainder of the 1990-91 session.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Beef

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he gave approval for the re-boxing of intervention beef at Ulster Cold Stores for the Goodman Group; what information he has on the re-boxing of beef at Ulster Cold Stores; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The re-boxing of intervention beef at the Ulster Cold Stores was approved by the Intervention Board executive agency. Approved re-boxing at that location commenced in November 1986 and continues up to the present. All approved re-boxing up to 5 August 1990 was supervised by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland and since then by the Livestock Marketing Commission for Northern Ireland as agents of the agency.

The procedural rules relating to the Department of Agriculture Northern Ireland/Livestock Marketing Commission supervision of re-packing/reboxing operations require the following conditions to be met:

the beef must remain in the frozen state throughout the re-packing;

the beef must not be mixed or re-packed with non-intervention beef;

only boxes of the same cut can be cut and re-boxed together; mixing of cuts is not allowed;

replacement of boxes must be marked with the net weight; cut name; number of cuts; and the original number;

the correct tare of new boxes and any wrap must be obtained and the net weight of the contents recorded.

Housing

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to reduce the age at which houses may qualify for improvement or repair grants.

Mr. Needham: As part of a forthcoming draft housing order, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland is considering changes to the house renovation grants scheme comparable to those recently introduced in England and Wales under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

These changes provide for all dwellings over 10 years old to qualify for renovation grant aid: dwellings requiring provision for or adaptations to meet the needs of a disabled person are exempt from this criterion.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to change the year specified within the regulations of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's home improvement and repair grant schemes as the threshold year for entry to the grant scheme.

Mr. Needham: Within the terms of the present legislation, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive exercises its discretion to target the availability of grant-aid towards those persons and properties most in need. In doing so, it has, in certain instances, restricted the availability of grant-aid to properties built before certain specified dates.

However, as part of the forthcoming housing order, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland is considering changes to the house renovation grants scheme comparable to those recently introduced in England and Wales under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

These changes would provide for all dwellings over 10 years old to qualify for renovation grant aid: dwellings where works are required to meet the needs of a disabled person are exempt from this criterion.

General Practitioners

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many general practitioners bought added years (old style) pension rights in 1975; how many of these general practitioners were under 43 years old in 1972; what were the figures for general practitioners aged under 44 years in steps of £500 as based on average updated earnings to October 1972; and how many of the general practitioners are still paying for the added years.

Mr. Hanley: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ulster Talks (Chairman)

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the names of the possible candidates for the position of independent chairman of strand 2 of the Ulster talks who have been suggested by the Irish Government and rejected by Her Majesty's Government;

(2) if he will list the names of the possible candidates for the position of independent chairman of strand 2 of the Ulster talks who have been suggested by Her Majesty's Government and rejected by the Irish Government.

Mr. Brooke: I would not regard it as helpful to disclose details surrounding the appointment of the chairman. To do so would also be a breach of confidentiality.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Pensioners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, by location, his Department's war pensioners offices; and if he will make a statement on each one's future.

Mr. Jack: War pensioners' welfare offices are located as follows:

Scotland—Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Dundee, Glasgow
North East—Leeds, Sheffield, Newcastle, Middlesbrough
North West—Preston, Bootle, Manchester
Midlands—Birmingham, Nottingham
Wales—Cardiff, Swansea, Wrexham
South West—Bristol, Newton Abbot
London, North—Euston, High Wycombe, Norwich
London, South—Balham, Basingstoke, Brighton, Portsmouth, Tunbridge Wells
Northern Ireland—Belfast
Republic of Ireland—Dublin, Cork

A report last year of a routine management inspection of the war pensions welfare service made several recommendations about the location of war pensioners' welfare offices. No decisions have been taken on the recommendations. The welfare service has been incorporated into the new war pensions directorate which is considering whether offices are in the right places to deliver the most efficient service to war pensioners. Any proposals for change which may emerge will be discussed fully with the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions and local war pensions committees will have an opportunity to comment. The interests of war pensioners and war widows will be safeguarded and we shall ensure that the effectiveness of the welfare service is fully maintained.

Benefit Scale Rates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the supplementary benefit-income support scale rate for (a) a single adult and (b) a married couple each year since 1970, the level of national average earnings for each of these years, and the single and married scale rates as a percentage of national average earnings for each of these years.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is contained in tables 5.6(a), 5.6(b), 5.11(b), 5.11(c), 6.4(a) and 6.5(a) of, "Abstract of Statistics Index of Retail Prices, Average Earnings, Social Security Benefits and Contributions", published by the Department of Social Security, a copy of which is available in the Library.

National Insurance Contributions (Earnings Limit)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the current numbers and the average number for 1991-92 of individuals with earned income above the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions.

Mr. Jack: Following the recent rise in the upper earnings limit, it is estimated that just under 3 million employees currently have earnings above this level. It is also estimated that during 1991-92 an average of 3·1 million employees will have earnings above the upper earnings limit. In addition, about 0·5 million self-employed people will earn above the upper profits limit.

Pensions

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy regarding index-linking private pensions in the near future.

Miss Widdecombe: Contracted-out occupational pension schemes and appropriate personal pension schemes are already under a statutory obligation annually to increase guaranteed minimum pensions accruing in respect of contracted-out employment from 6 April 1988, or pensions or annuities deriving from protected rights, in line with increases in the retail prices index to a maximum of 3 per cent. Guaranteed minimum pensions in respect of contracted-out employments before 6 April 1988, and any excess over 3 per cent. thereafter, are indexed by the state earnings-related pension scheme in line with the retail prices index.

The Social Security Act 1990 includes a provision which will require occupational pension schemes to provide annual increases in the rate of salary-related pensions (other than guaranteed minimum pensions) accruing in respect of pensionable service from an appointed day. The increase will be linked to increases in the retail prices index to a maximum of 5 per cent. a year. In addition, schemes which have a surplus of assets over liabilities will be required to make comparable increases in respect of service before that day. No final decision has been made as to when this provision will come into effect.

National Insurance (Company Cars)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle), 1 May, Official Report, column 254, whether his estimate includes the effect of changes proposed in the 1991 Budget for national insurance contributions on company cars and fuel.

Mr. Jack: The figure of £750 million given to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) includes an amount of £610 million which is attributable to the extension of employers' national insurance contributions to company cars and fuel, announced in the 1991 Budget.

Pensioners' Expenditure

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimated annual expenditure at current prices of pensioners in the Deeside area on (a) heating, (b) lighting and (c) travel in (i) 1980, (ii) 1985 and (iii) the last year for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested.

Social Fund

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the gross and net budgets of the social fund for each of the local offices in Wales for each year since 1988-89, under the headings of (a) crisis loans, (b) budgeting loans and (c) community care grants, showing the change in real terms since 1988-89 in each case.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the public information office.

Family Credit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will bring up to date the information regarding family credit awards and case load given in his reply on 25 April, Official Report, columns 541-44.

Mr. Jack: The information now available, for August 1990 and subsequent months, is as follows:

	Number of family credit awards current at end of month[1]	Caseload (including backdated awards) as at end of month
		Self-employed	Employees	Total
August 1990	281,414	48,140	276,500	324,640
September 1990	282,019	48,080	278,540	326,620
October 1990	280,744	47,860	278,600	326,460
November 1990	293,343	—	—	[2]324,000
December 1990	284,429	—	—	[2]317,000
January 1991	281,250	—	—	[2]315,000
February 1991	288,924	—	—	[2]322,000
March 1991	294,202	—	—	[3]—
April 1991	292,752	—	—	[3]—
May 1991	300,096	—	—	[3]—

[1] A breakdown between employees and self-employed is not available.
[2] Provisional total: no breakdown between employees and self-employed at this stage.
[3] Meaningful figures not yet available because of claims not yet decided.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families with the main earner (a) employed and (b) self-employed, were receiving family credit of (a) under £10, (b) £10 to £19·99, (c) £20 to £29·99, (d) £30 to £39·99, (e) £40 to £49·99, (f) £50 to £59·99 and (g) £60 or more, at the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Jack: At 31 October 1990, the latest date for which this information is available, the breakdown of the families receiving family credit was as follows:

Weekly amount of Family Credit	Main earner self-employed	Main earner employed
Under £10	3,120	47,920
£10 to £19·99	4,820	59,460
£20 to £29·99	5,820	53,700
£30 to £39·99	5,680	45,880
£40 to £49·99	8,760	35,960
£50 to £59·99	10,280	20,240
£60 or more	9,380	15,440

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for family credit have been refused since April 1988; and what proportion of new claims in each of the months April and May 1991 was unsuccessful.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures he is taking to improve the level of service to family credit claimants.

Mr. Jack: The administration of family credit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the public information office.

Residential Care

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recent representations he has received concerning income support levels and residential care.

Miss Widdecombe: Several representations have been received recently both from individuals and representative bodies.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to meet representatives from the National Care Homes Association to discuss funding arrangements for care in residential and nursing homes.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has agreed to speak at the National Care Homes Association's annual conference on 31 October. He has no plans to meet representatives before that.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what have been the percentage increases in each year since 1988 for the housing benefit non-dependant deductions.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the table.

	Amount of deduction	Percentage increase
1988
Rent Rebates/Allowances
Higher rate	8·20	—
Lower rate	3·45	—
Rate rebates	3·00	—
1989
Rent Rebates/Allowances
Higher rate	9·15	11·6
Lower rate	3·85	11·6
Rate rebates	3·35	11·7
1990
Rent Rebates/Allowances
Higher rate	10·85	18·6
Lower rate	4·55	18·2
1991
Rent Rebates/Allowances
Higher rate	13·50	24·4
Lower rate	5·70	25·3

Notes:

Non-dependant deductions are uprated by reference to the retail prices index for housing.

Variations in the percentage increases are due to rounding.

Child Support Bill

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the benefit savings to be made if the income support of absent parents is to be reduced by virtue of clause 39(2) of the Child Support Bill.

Mr. Jack: Clause 39(2) of the Child Support Bill provides for a power to seek a contribution to maintenance from absent parents on income support by deduction from their income support to reinforce the message that they have the same responsibility as other parents. But those who are sick or disabled, or who are claiming income support for dependent children will be zero-rated. The long-term reduction in benefit expenditure from applying the deduction to those who are fit and able to work is provisionally estimated at approximately £9 million at 1990-91 prices.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received on clause 22 of the Child Support Bill.

Mr. Jack: On initial publication of the White Paper, "Children Come First", we received some 250 written representations of which 56 contained specific responses on our proposals to reduce the caring parent benefit which were reflected in the Bill's original clause 22. Since the introduction of the Child Support Bill we have received about 20 letters on clause 22, some occasioned by representations to Members of Parliament from bodies who had also responded at the time of the White Paper publication.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate has been made of the administrative cost of applying deductions from income support by virtue of clause 35(2) of the Child Support Bill.

Mr. Jack: The long-term administrative cost of all deductions from income support arising as a result of the Child Support Bill is provisionally estimated at about £4 million at 1990-91 prices.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultations he has had on clause 22 of the Child Support Bill.

Mr. Jack: We sought the views of organisations and members of the public on all aspects of the proposals set out in the White Paper "Children Come First", including the measures set out in the former clause 22. We have received many letters on this subject. In addition to representation by means of letter we were pleased to meet some of the principle organisations representing lone parents, when, as part of our wider consultations on the Bill we discussed both the current clause 6 and the former clause 22.

Disability

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to advertise benefits available to disabled people.

Mr. Scott: Since January 1990 we are taking the following steps to advertise benefits available to disabled people:

i. Regular local radio and regional TV broadcasts involving our team of regional information officers.

ii. Displays and mobile advice units in communities across the country, which include talks to carers and disabled people, visits to hospitals, day centres and other similar organisations.

iii. National press campaigns advertising changes to disability benefits aimed at specialist carers and people with disabilities.

iv. A specialist press, mail-out and press editorial campaign to announce changes to attendance allowance.

v. A publicity campaign on mobility allowance directed at carers and advisers of people who are both deaf and blind. This consists of direct mailings supported by free editorial coverage in press and radio.

vi. A campaign to announce a new telephone advice and information service for people with disabilities. As part of this service, for those people with impaired vision or who are blind we are providing letters and forms in Braille and large print.

Special telecommunications facilities are available for those people with hearing difficulties. This advertising campaign is currently being run in southern England and is due to be run nationwide at the end of June.

Students

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider allowing payment of income support to students during the coming summer vacation who are unable to obtain temporary employment; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Financial support for students throughout the year, including the summer vacation, is provided through the educational maintenance system. But certain students such as those who are disabled, lone parents, and student couples with children, may qualify for income support during the summer vacation. We have no plans to extend this concession.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice his Department gives to students who apply for benefit for the period during the summer vacation because there is no temporary work available; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Full-time students are no longer entitled to unemployment benefit. With the exception of certain vulnerable groups, they are similarly unable to qualify for income support and housing benefit. Financial support throughout the year, including the summer vacation, is provided through the educational maintenance system.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefit a student can obtain during the summer vacation who cannot obtain temporary employment; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: With the exception of unemployment benefit, income support and housing benefit, the normal range of social security benefits is available to full-time students who satisfy the appropriate qualifying conditions. Full-time students in certain vulnerable groups, including lone parents, student couples with dependent children and disabled students also retain eligibility to income support and housing benefit. Partners of students may also qualify for these benefits on behalf of the couple.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish in the Official Report such information as is available for the latest period for which it is available regarding the number of sittings of social security appeal tribunals in each region at which no presenting officer appeared.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 26 April 1991 at column 602.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Pensioners (Television Licences)

13. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will meet pensioner representatives to discuss free television licences for pensioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Giving free licences to all pensioners, including those who are well able to pay the fee, would cost £470 million a year, and would mean that everyone else would have to pay £116 for their colour licence. We have no plans to change the present arrangements and a meeting would serve no useful purpose.

Refugees

14. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were given refugee status in each of the past two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Around 3,000 people, including associated dependants, were recognised as refugees in 1989 in the United Kingdom. For 1990 the provisional figure recorded at present is about 1,600, but this is likely to understate because of delays in recording.

Community Service Orders

15. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress being made with community service orders.

Mr. John Patten: National standards on the supervision of community service orders were introduced two years ago, on 1 April 1989. As intended, they have been effective in achieving tighter and more consistent management of this work by probation services. My Department is now circulating to probation services an analysis of the first year's operation of the standards.

Police Authorities

16. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to modify the structure and control of police authorities.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have no plans to modify the structure and control of police authorities. The Government remain committed to the tripartite structure of our policing system and the value of local involvement. There are developments that we need in providing support to the police service and enhancing the delivery of policing as a local service, but these can be achieved using the flexibility of the Police Act 1964. This is the message I will be giving to the Association of Chief Police Officers in a speech tonight.

Prison Service

17. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on industrial relations within the prison service.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are currently 43 local disputes registered under the disputes procedure agreed between the POA and prison service management. The level of disputes is a matter of concern, particularly when it results in industrial action leading to prisoners being held in police cells.

Following a POA ballot last June in favour of industrial action but not strike action on issues of staffing and safety, there has been a series of meetings with the POA to resolve the dispute which have not yet been successful.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will next meet the Prison Reform Trust to discuss implementation of the recommendations of the Woolf report.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend will next month be addressing a conference organised by the Prison Reform Trust. We shall listen with interest to all representations made about the future direction of the prison service while preparing the forthcoming White Paper.

Obscenity Law

18. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to amend the law on obscenity.

Mr. John Patten: If suitable proposals are put forward which appear likely to command wide support, we will of course consider supporting them.

Constitutional Arrangements

19. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the constitutional machinery of Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no such plans. We believe that our present constitutional arrangements serve their respective purposes well.

Television Franchise Applications

20. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to meet the chairman of the Independent Television Commission to discuss the franchise applications.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. It is for the Independent Television Commission, acting independently of Government, to assess the applications for Channel 3 licences.

Sunday Trading

21. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to meet the Shopping Hours Reform Council to discuss Sunday trading.

Mrs. Rumbold: I met representatives of the Shopping Hours Reform Council yesterday. The meeting was one in the extensive programme of separate discussions which I am holding with bodies representing retailers and other interests, to assist in the possible development of acceptable proposals for the reform of the Sunday trading law.

Prisons, Yorkshire

22. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to make an official visit to Yorkshire to inspect prisons.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend's current programme of visits to prisons does not include any in Yorkshire, but I visited HM prison Leeds in April and am planning to visit HM prison Askham Grange in July. I will also be opening HM prison Moorland, near Doncaster, in October.

Sex Offenders

24. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that imprisoned sex offenders have access to appropriate counselling services.

Mrs. Rumbold: Although many prison establishments already undertake individual counselling and group therapy with sex offenders, the current provision is largely unco-ordinated.

The Criminal Justice Bill places particular emphasis on tackling offending behaviour. My right hon. Friend hopes to announce shortly details of a structured programme for sex offenders in prison.

Iraqi Citizens

25. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to change the rules for admission of Iraqi citizens to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. Friend did so on 12 April. Applications by Iraqi nationals now fall to be considered against normal immigration criteria.

Prison Service (Properties)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the constituencies in the United Kingdom that contain domestic properties owned by the prison service and the number of properties in each constituency.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Racial Attacks

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints of attacks with a racial motive have been reported in each year since 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: National figures for racially motivated incidents are collected annually; 6,459 incidents were reported to police forces in England and Wales in 1990.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being taken by his Department to eliminate racial attacks.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Home Office has issued a series of guidelines to all police forces on responding effectively and as a priority to racial attacks. Good practice in preventing attacks, supporting victims and dealing with perpetrators is spread and monitored, in co-operation with Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. We are co-ordinating the work of all responsible agencies in providing further guidance, information and evaluation on national and local initiatives. Broader policies on equal opportunities, quality of service and police training are designed to take full account of the problem of racial attacks.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for which the contract was carried out.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Home Office spent approximately £4,503,000 on management and computer consultancies, excluding hardware and software purchases, in the 1990-91 financial year. Details of the management and computer consultancies awarded, none of which was carried out for an executive agency, are as follows:

Prisons (Assaults)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the procedures under which allegations into serious assault in prisons are investigated; and whether such allegations are automatically referred to the police.

Mrs. Rumbold: If a prisoner is suspected of a serious offence against the law, including assault, the governor has discretion to refer the matter to the police for investigation. The internal disciplinary code includes charges that may amount to a criminal offence, however, and it is normal, therefore, for behaviour that might amount to a relatively minor criminal offence to be investigated and dealt with internally.

Allegations against staff are investigated, and governors may, on prison service headquarters' advice, refer such allegations to the police for investigation if there is evidence that a criminal offence may have been committed. Evidence that a serious assault had occurred would invariably be referred to the police.

Street Lighting and Crime

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the research by Southampton university, funded by the Home Office, into the effect of street lighting on crime in Wandsworth.

Mr. John Patten: We hope to publish the results of this research as a Home Office crime prevention unit paper within the next few months.

Correspondence

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Falmouth and Camborne may expect a reply to correspondence originating from Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Mayne, of Chywarthen, Tarrandean Lane, Perranwell Station, Truro, transferred to his Department on 27 March from the Department of the Environment under their reference K/PSO/5781/91.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend on 29 May.

Violent Crime

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the incidence of violent crime in the United Kingdom; and what information he has on the incidence of violent crime in other countries of the EC and in the United States of America.

Mr. John Patten: There were about 250,000 violent crimes recorded by the police in England and Wales in 1990, about 6 per cent. of all recorded crime.

A recent international crime survey showed that in 1988 the risk of being the victim of violent crime in England and Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland was lower than in most western European countries—for example, Belgium. Within western Europe, risks were highest in Finland, the Netherlands and West Germany. The risk in the USA was the highest of all countries surveyed. The results of the survey are in "Experiences of Crime across the World: Key findings from the 1989 International Crime Survey", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Curtis Howard

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date in 1990 Mr. Curtis Howard, an American citizen, was deported from the United Kingdom; what entry was made in his passport at that time; when and where he is believed to have entered the United Kingdom this year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Mr. Curtis Howard was removed from the United Kingdom to the United States of America as an illegal entrant on 5 July 1990 and his passport was endorsed to show this. Police inquiries into his more recent movements are continuing, but I understand that Mr. Howard did not gain entry in his true identity.

Disability

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the head of programming at the BBC to discuss subtitles for the deaf.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of the BBC from time to time to discuss a range of broadcasting issues. However, programming and subtitling are matters for them to determine, within their public service responsibilities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has taken to ensure that all polling booths are accessible to disabled people.

Mrs. Rumbold: I assume that the hon. Gentleman means polling stations rather than polling booths. As he is aware, district and London borough councils in England and Wales have a statutory obligation to place polling stations in buildings which are accessible to disabled people, wherever this is practicable. My officials last wrote to councils in December 1989 to remind them of their duty in this respect and will do so again shortly.

Police Records

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost of the planned NCIS computer network for intelligence on major crime.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The requirements of the computer system for the national criminal intelligence service have not yet been finalised. Until the specification for the system has been agreed, it is not possible to say what the cost is likely to be.

Women (European Community)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who represented the United Kingdom at the Informal Council on the Conditions of Women in the EC member states held in Luxemboug on 13 May; what was discussed; what priorities were put forward for action; and whether there are plans for a further meeting.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I attended the informal meeting of Women's Ministers in Luxembourg on 13 May in my capacity as chairman of the ministerial group on women's issues. We discussed the implementation of the third medium term (1991-95) Community action programme on equal opportunities for women and men and child care provision in the member states.

The meeting endorsed the overall objective of the Commission's third action programme and there was an exchange of views on child care provision. It is up to each presidency to decide whether to call an informal meeting of Ministers.

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dog owners have been (a) fined and (b) imprisoned because of attacks by their dogs; what was the average fine or prison sentence in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 23 May 1991]: The latest figures in respect of offences under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847, the Dogs Act 1871 and the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989 are as follows:

	Number fined	Average fine £	Number imprisoned
1985	124	33	—
1986	112	41	—
1987	104	43	—
1988	104	38	—
1989	134	51	—

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports of dog attacks he has received in each of the last five years; how many (a) children and (b) adults were injured, seriously injured and killed; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 23 May 1991]: The Home Office is not routinely informed of attacks by dogs and no statistics about them are collected centrally.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Whales

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what efforts the British Government have made to prevent other nations from hunting whales for commercial reasons.

Mr. Curry: At the recent meeting of the International Whaling Commission the United Kingdom continued to play a leading role in ensuring that the moratorium on commercial whaling was upheld. Further, requests for catch quotas by Iceland and Japan were turned down, resolutions were passed against the research whaling plans of Japan and the USSR and ensuring a follow-up to a report on the status of small cetacean populations. At the United Kingdom's suggestion a special review will be undertaken on the humaneness of whale killing methods, an issue about which we are particularly concerned.

Ivermectin

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what monitoring is undertaken to detect traces of ivermectin in farmed salmon on sale in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Ivermectin is not licensed for use in fish in the United Kingdom and, to date, no monitoring has been conducted to detect residues in ivermectin in the edible tissues of farmed salmon on sale in the United Kingdom. However, surveillance for residues in farmed fish is currently being stepped up and testing for ivermectin will be included within the scope of the new arrangements.

Pig Disease

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he intends to introduce a compulsory slaughter policy with compensation for herds affected, or suspected of being affected by blue ear pig disease;

(2) whether he will ban all live pig imports from countries where blue ear pig disease has been confirmed;

(3) what steps he is taking to protect the United Kingdom pig industry from blue ear pig disease.

Mr. Maclean: Until the causative agent is identified, there is no way of knowing if slaughtering herds would be an effective means of controlling the disease. Commission decision 91/237/EEC of 25 April prohibits exports of pigs for breeding or production from infected farms and municipalities in those member states where the disease has been confirmed. No live pigs are being imported from affected countries. There are no approved foot and mouth disease quarantine premises for pigs and there has been no trade interest in such imports.

Artificial Sweeteners

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he intends to take to protect the United Kingdom's crisp and snack industry from adverse affects of the proposed EC directive on artificial sweeteners.

Mr. Maclean: We are continuing to press for the inclusion of these products in the proposed directive.

Pesticides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the pesticide active ingredients which are currently (a) under review and (b) awaiting review, indicating whether each one is due for a full or partial review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The information set out below relates to pesticide active ingredients which are (a) currently under review and (b) awaiting review. Although an indication of full or partial review has been given for these active ingredients listed at (a), it is not possible at this stage to indicate the nature of the reviews that will be undertaken in respect of the pesticides detailed at (b). A decision on the extent of these reviews will be made once approval holders have submitted details of all data held in support of products based on the active ingredients.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 11 December 1990, if he will list all the pesticide active ingredients he (a) received, (b) approved and (c) rejected in 1990 and to date in 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is set out below in respect of applications for pesticides submitted to this Ministry for approval by the six Departments responsible. Applications for which the Health and Safety Executive is not primarily responsible—non-agricultural pesticides—are not included.

	1990	1991
(a) Received (names are commercial in confidence)	7	3
(b) (i) Approved (provisional level)	6 deltamethrin fenoxyprop-ethyl cycloxydim PP321 fenpropathrin fenvalerate	2 teflubenzuron gluphosinate-ammonium
(ii) Approved (experimental permit)	1 oryzalin

	1990	1991
(iii) Decisions deferred pending further data (names are commercial in confidence)	5	1
(c) Rejected	1 ethalfluralin	—
(d) Withdrawn (names are commercial in confidence)	4	1

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 16 January 1990, if he will list the active ingredients which have had their reviews concluded by the advisory committee on pesticides according to the categories (a) approval withdrawn, (b) use restricted and (c) use continues unchanged following their review since 16 January 1990, indicating if they were full or partial reviews; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Approvals withdrawn	P TBTO (some approvals) P Alphaichloralose—commodity substance approvals P Secanol—commodity substance approvals
(b) Use restricted or other amendments to approvals	P Vinclozolin F Diazinon F Toxynil F Bromoxynil P 2-aminobutane
(c) Use continues unchanged	F Maneb F Mancozeb F Nabam F Zineb F Zineb-ethylene-thiuram disulphide adduct

Note: P = partial.
F = full.

Marine Environment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies have been undertaken by his Department into the levels of (a) mercury pollution, (b) plutonium pollution and (c) polychlorinated biphenyl pollution in the Irish sea and their uptake by fish, dolphins and molluscs living in the region.

Mr. Curry: The results of the Department's monitoring of non-radioactive and radioactive contaminants, including mercury, plutonium and polychlorinated biphenyls, in fish and molluscs are regularly published in the aquatic environment monitoring reports (AEMR), copies of which are available in the Library of the House. AEMR No. 26, due to be published shortly, will describe work undertaken in 1988 and 1989. In addition to results on contaminants in fish and shellfish, it will contain a section summarising work on contaminants in marine mammals, including dolphins.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment has been made by his Department of the biogenic sulphur loading in the atmosphere arising from emissions from nutrient-enriched plankton in the North sea.

Mr. Curry: Dimethyl sulfide is believed to arise in surface water from the natural biochemistry of certain species of marine algae. We do not monitor specifically for sulfide loading. However, we have an annual nutrient monitoring programme in the North sea, and there is no evidence for enhanced algal production from nutrients of manmade origin in the open North sea.

Rabies

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional steps will be taken to prevent an escalation in incidents of rabies following the completion of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Maclean: Eurotunnel has implemented measures agreed with the Department to prevent the possible entry of rabies-susceptible animals while the tunnel is built. The state veterinary service and the Department's wildlife scientists have been fully involved in devising the measures to be used once the tunnel is operational. These have yet to be finalised, but will include the use of sealed trains, physical barriers and grids, and the continuous use of baited traps in the tunnel and terminal areas, together with vigorous cleaning and inspection procedures.

The planned control measures will ensure that the channel tunnel presents no greater rabies risk than other forms of cross-channel transport.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many quarantined animals have developed rabies in each year since 1970.

Mr. Maclean: Two animals developed rabies in quarantine in this period, one in 1983 and the other in 1990. None developed the disease after release from quarantine.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many non-organophosphorous compounds for the treatment of sheeps' coats are awaiting licence approval; how long they have been awaiting approval; and when he expects to make a decision on any of these preparations.

Mr. Maclean: Two applications for product licences in respect of non-organophosphorous compounds for sheep treatment were submitted to the veterinary medicines directorate in January 1990 and August 1990 respectively. Licences are issued under the Medicines Act only once a product has been demonstrated to be safe, of sound quality, and effective. We are unable to say when decisions on determining these applications will be taken.

DEFENCE

Tanks

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the possible leasing of Leopard tanks by the British Army.

Mr. Alan Clark: As Leopard 2 (improved) is a contender for Chieftain replacement, discussion on what may or may not be part of any particular offer would breach commercial confidentiality.

German Equipment

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when in the last six months discussions have taken place with his German counterparts regarding the possible use by British forces of German equipment.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend has had a number of discussions with Dr. Stoltenberg in the last six months, concerning a wide range of issues.

Meteorological Office

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the specific performance targets set for the Meteorological Office following on from the initial targets he announced in 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: At column 444 on 2 April 1990, my right hon. Friend set out the initial targets set for the Meteorological Office. The performance achieved against these targets will be reported in the agency's annual report and accounts which will be available in the summer.

Following on from these initial targets I have set further specific and demanding targets for the period 1991-96. These are:

To improve efficiency by an average of 3 per cent. per annum.

To achieve a 50 per cent. increase in uptake of meteorological services, as measured by revenue generated from commercial services to the public, industry and commerce (excluding the Civil Aviation Authority).

To achieve a 170 per cent. increase in the gross contribution of commercial services revenue to offsetting core costs and overheads.

To reduce by 15 per cent. cumulatively the standard error of 48-hour forecasts of mid-tropospheric pressure fields over the North Atlantic and North West Europe.

To achieve high standards of quality and demonstrate a level of customer satisfaction with the services and products delivered. Quantified targets will be set annually for each major customer group.

To provide authoritative advice on climate change issues to Ministers nationally, and internationally through the auspices of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change.

Central Television (Libel Actions)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contact there has been between officials of his Department and Messrs de Normann and Mackenzie Geidt regarding their libel actions against Central Television.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As a date has been set for a hearing it would not be appropriate to comment.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, further to his letter to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South of 23 May, he will give the name and title of the official with whom Mr. Mackenzie Geidt had an informed discussion in October 1989 following his return from Vietnam.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Strategic Objectives

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his precise global strategic objectives; and what exact manning levels for the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force he is proposing in order to meet those objectives.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The strategic environment in which the Government set defence policy and take decisions on the defence programme is set out each year in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" (SDE) which includes manpower statistics for the three services. As stated by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the House on 30 April, we hope to publish SDE 91 before the summer recess.

Iraq (Nuclear Material)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent reports he has had from the International Atomic Energy Agency about Iraq's assurances on the amount of fissionable material (a) safely sealed and (b) destroyed during allied bombing; and what proposals Her Majesty's Government have to monitor radiation in the Tuwaitha area.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I have been asked to reply.

An IAEA team visited Iraq from 14-22 May to begin verification of Iraq's statements to the UN of its nuclear holdings. The IAEA has not made public the findings of its initial inspection. A confidential report will be submitted to the agency's board of governors, of which the United Kingdom is a member. Further inspections which may include the monitoring of radiation in the Tuwaitha area will be necessary to fulfil all the requirements of UNSCR 687.

The Gulf (Pollution)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research is being carried out into the effect of hydrocarbons released by oil fires on the cells of animals' bodies in Kuwait.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I have been asked to reply.

I am not aware of research on this particular topic but as I have already indicated to the hon. Member (Official Report, 28 March, column 458 and 17 April, column 183) a comprehensive assessment of environmental damage caused by the conflict is now being carried out by the United Nations Environment Programme.

Antares (Sinking)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the results of the Royal Navy inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the sinking of the fishing vessel Antares.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have placed a summary of the main findings of the Royal Navy board of inquiry report into this tragic accident in the Library of the House today.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Clothing Grants

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what would be the cost of a non-discretionary school clothing grants scheme administered by his Department.

Mr. Fallon: The cost would depend on the scale and nature of any scheme. We have no plans to introduce such a scheme; it is for local authorities to decide, in the light of local circumstances, when and to what extent to provide clothing grants.

Official Visits

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what visits or other official engagements were undertaken by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science during his visit to the east Birmingham task force area on 23 April 1990.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The programme included visits to the Aston Science Park, a meeting with Sir Reginald Eyre and Heartlands training group, attendance at the Heartlands training event, visit to the east Birmingham task force, East Birmingham college and attendance at the launch of the Asian business handbook.

Natural Environment Research Council

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the level of funding to the Natural Environment Research Council in each year since 1 April 1985.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Details of the level of grant in aid paid by this Department to the Natural Environment Research Council since 1 April 1985 are as follows:

	£ million
1985-86	67·880
1986-87	70·325
1987-88	73·315
1988-89	91·859
1989-90	114·955
1990-91	135·233
[1]1991-92	122·564

[1] Estimates.

TRANSPORT

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures are currently being taken to meet Government targets for the stabilisation of carbon dioxide emissions by the year 2005.

Mr. Chope: Over the past year or so, the Government have taken a number of initiatives which will help to reduce emissions from the transport sector. These include an emissions check in the MOT test, proposals to fit speed limiters to heavy goods vehicles, and improvements to information about new car fuel economy. The tax changes announced in the last Budget statement will also help to improve incentives to choose fuel efficient cars and drive them in a fuel economic fashion.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been undertaken for his Department to show how the Government will meet their target of stabilising carbon dioxide emissions at 1990 levels by the year 2005; and if he will make available any forecasts and associated calculations.

Mr. Chope: My Department has published a report by Dr. M. H. L. Waters on "United Kingdom road transport's contribution to greenhouse gases: a review of TRRL and other research" (Transport and Road Research Laboratory contractor report 223.) This is being followed up by a programme of research into various measures which might help to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide. Where appropriate, the results will be published in due course.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his Department's traffic forecast for the next 15 years; how he estimates these will affect the Government's declared objective of stabilising carbon dioxide emission levels from 1990 by the year 2005; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Department's traffic forecasts are published as National Road Traffic Forecasts (Great Britain) 1989 copies of which are in the Library. They indicate that by the year 2005 traffic will be 31 to 52 per cent. higher than in 1990. The impact of traffic levels on emissions of carbon dioxide will largely depend on the fuel efficiency of the vehicle fleet.

Great Glen Bypass

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made since 1987 in plans for the construction of the Great Glen bypass, Leicestershire, on the A6; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Following public consultation the preferred route for the A6 Great Glen bypass was announced in November 1989. Since that time surveys have been carried out leading to the detailed design of the scheme. We plan to publish draft orders in the autumn.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Residential Homes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people living in residential and nursing homes are paid for by income support; and how many of these are over pension age.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest estimate of the number of people in receipt of income support in residential care and nursing homes is for August 1990, when the figure was 199,000. Information on how many of these were over pension age is not available but, as of May 1989, about 80 per cent. of income support recipients in such homes were over pension age.

Community Charge (Lambeth)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many community charge payers in Lambeth were in receipt of community charge benefit at the last period for which figures were available, based on claims for refunds by his Department to Lambeth council.

Miss Widdecombe: As at 28 February 1991, it is estimated that 38,200 charge payers were receiving community charge benefit in the London borough of Lambeth. This figure is likely to understate the true position as, in addition to having a number of unprocessed claims, a computer-related problem prevented Lambeth from including certain cases in its February stock count.

Social Fund Reviews

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for review by a social fund inspector were outstanding for more than one month on 30 April.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 3 May 1991 at column 350.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's policy on informing the next of kin of deceased unemployment benefit claimants of any outstanding benefits to which they are entitled; and if he will make a statement on the considerations leading to the formulation of this policy.

Mr. Jack: When a claimant dies, any outstanding unemployment benefit may be paid to persons claiming that benefit as legal personal representatives, legatees, next of kin or creditors of the deceased. Ultimately, it is the responsibility of the individuals mentioned to make sure that any outstanding benefit has been claimed. However, following the hon. Member's question, steps are being taken to ensure that in administering unemployment benefit on a day to day basis instructions to employment service offices properly reflect this policy intention and that, where a legal personal representative or next of kin notifies the ESO that a claimant has died, an invitation to claim any arrears will be issued. Instructions to staff in offices of the Benefits Agency will also be reviewed to ensure that similar procedures are followed where this is not already the case.

Information regarding the payment of arrears of benefit following a death can be obtained from offices of the Department of Social Security and unemployment benefit offices. In addition, advice on claiming arrears of benefit is included in social security leaflet D49, "What to do After a Death", which contains detailed information on the action to be taken when someone dies.

Disposable Income

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing disposable income in and out of work, after 16 weeks, for a single-wage family with two children aged four and six years and a mortgage of (a) £50,000 (b) £75,000 and (c) £100,000 assuming offer wages of £200, £250, £300, £350, £400, £450 and £500 a week.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 20 May 1991]: The information is set out in the table. The figures are based on the following assumptions.

Mortgage payments are for interest only and contain no repayments of capital. Where an income support claimant's outgoings are unnecessarily high they may be restricted to the amount that they would need to obtain suitable alternative accommodation. In the table, it has been assumed that no such restriction has been applied. They are shown net of tax. The mortgage shown is the capital outstanding. Mortgage interest is calculated at 12·95 per cent.

In calculating the figures the same assumptions have been used as are found in the tax benefit model tables. Net income in work includes child benefit and any community charge benefit as may be payable. It should be noted that the results in the tables remain arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people and cannot claim to be representative of the population at large.

Married couple with two children aged 4 and 6

Gross Pay (£pw)	Net income in work after mortgage and community charge (£pw)			Net income on income support after mortgage and community charge (£pw)

HOME DEPARTMENT

Iraqi Detainees

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to publish the report prepared by the Red Cross on prison conditions under which the Iraqi detainees in the United Kingdom were kept during the course of the Gulf war.

Mrs. Angela Rumbold: No. The convention is that such reports are made available only to the Government of the detaining country and to the national Government of those detained, and in confidence.

Racial Attacks

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been made to each police authority in England and Wales in the past year regarding improper handling of an offence caused by racial prejudice.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not held centrally and may only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Police Records

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will describe the procedures used by the Metropolitan police when disclosing criminal records to local authorities to allow them to determine who is a fit and proper person to hold a taxi licence; whether he will list the offences deemed to make a taxi driver unfit to hold a taxi licence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not the practice of the Metropolitan police to disclose criminal records to local authorities for this purpose.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has issued advice to local authorities concerning the use of criminal records to determine on who is a fit and proper person to hold a taxi licence; what appeals procedure there is should a criminal record be inaccurate or not relevant to a taxi licence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Home Office has not issued any such advice to local authorities. Anyone aggrieved by the refusal of a district council to issue a licence may appeal to the courts.

Dangerous Dogs

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many successful prosecutions there have been in each of the past five years under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 relating to having an unmuzzled ferocious dog at large in a street, park or open public place;

(2) how many successful prosecutions there have been in each of the past five years under the Animals Act 1971 for injury or damage caused by dogs in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: The table shows the number of prosecutions and convictions under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 Section 28(2) to (4).

Number of defendants prosecuted and convicted under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 section 28(2) to (4) 1985 to 1989 England and Wales

Year	Prosecutions	Convictions
1985	55	28
1986	54	26
1987	52	37
1988	80	43
1989	93	60

Note: Information is not collected centrally on civil offences committed under the Animals Act 1971.

Control of Explosives

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of cases where explosives other than fireworks have caused accidents in the home in the past five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Accurate figures are not available. In 1989, my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) drew my noble Friend's attention to an unfortunate accident in his constituency when a young boy was badly injured while playing with materials used in the home loading of ammunition.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bear the extra cost to the police of carrying out inspections under the proposed control of explosives regulations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The cost of operating the statutory enforcement powers to be conferred on the police as a result of the proposed control of explosives regulations, which should not result in a significant additional burden upon police resources, will be met by police funding in the usual way.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of cases in the last convenient period where explosives have been stolen from private homes.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is no legal requirement to report thefts of explosives. Accurate figures for thefts from private homes are not available, but five are known to have been reported by police since 1969.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now postpone the control of explosives regulations to allow increased consultation time for the guidance notes to be fully studied by all interested parties.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not normal practice for the Health and Safety Executive to consult on guidance notes. They represent an explanation of the regulations and advice on compliance. The proposed control of explosives regulations have been subject to full consultation. We see no need for postponement.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long has been allowed for consultation on the form of the guidance notes applying to the new proposed control of explosives regulations; and what factors underlay the decision to set this length of time for consultation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No general consultation on draft guidance notes applying to the new proposed control of explosives regulations has taken place. Draft guidance notes were sent to a number of organisations by the Health and Safety Executive on 3 May 1991. Comments were requested by 17 May 1991. This time was set to permit the guidance notes to be published prior to the draft regulations coming into force. However, important comments received after this date could be taken into account if printing schedules permitted.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the case histories that led to the proposal by the Health and Safety Executive of new control of explosive regulations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The new proposed control of explosives regulations are part of the ongoing modernisation of the Explosives Act 1875 and related regulations. This forms part of the Health and Safety Commission's programme of work to review and reform existing legislation. So far a number of new explosives regulations have been made. The draft control of explosives regulations are the latest proposals. These proposals are not driven by particular case histories.

Dog Fights

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Greater Manchester on the action taken in connection with publication of "Pit Bull News" by P. Graham from 44 Midland road, Bramhall, Stockport, in respect of possible offences related to promotion of organised dog fights.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable of Greater Manchester police that the police are aware of the publication "Pit Bull News". Together with the RSPCA, they have looked into the possibility of prosecuting the publication for offences relating to the promotion of organised dog fights, but have concluded that there is insufficient evidence for a prosecution to proceed.

Sellafield (Security)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Cumbria as to the investigations being conducted into the break-in at the Sellafield site in the week beginning 20 May, and as to the security implications of these events.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The incident was handled by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary and Cumbria police were not involved.

CIVIL SERVICE

Civil Service College

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what targets he has approved for the Civil Service College for 1991-92.

Mr. Renton: The primary target for the Civil Service College executive agency will be to cover its costs from income: planned costs for 1991-92 are £14,476K. Other agreed targets for the college in 1991-92 are:

	Targets
Student days	82,750
Course days	5,465
Students	20,900
Students at grade 7+	5,501
Number of students in development schemes	4,190
Number of students for formal qualifications	1,980
Number of students from the private sector	450
Percentage of course evaluations in boxes 1 and 2	78
Students per course day at the college's two main sites	16·5
Income from consultancy	£130K

There is also a target for "cost per student day" which is not published for commercial reasons, and a five-year value for money target. The rating of college services as revealed by a detailed survey of the views of students must increase over the five-year period to 1995 by 10 per cent. more than the real cost of the college's output.

I am arranging for copies of the college's stategic plan for 1991-1995 to be placed in the Libraries of the Houses of Parliament.

EMPLOYMENT

Redundancies

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average time for his Department to process redundancies; how many redundancies are awaiting processing; and whether there are any plans to recruit extra staff to increase efficiency.

Mr. Forth: The average time to process a redundancy payment is currently 10 weeks and the number of claims awaiting processing is 53,000. My Department has introduced a number of efficiency measures to improve the time taken to deal with claims, including the recruitment of additional staff.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment has been made of the effect on employment of the introduction of a minimum wage based on two thirds of male median earnings.

Mr. Forth: Officials in my Department have estimated that the introduction of a minimum wage of two thirds male median earnings could over time lead to the loss of over 1 million jobs if wage differentials were restored by 50 per cent. They have also estimated that in the extreme case of full wage restoration the losses could be of the order of 2 million jobs.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what would be the cost to the public sector wages and salaries bill of the introduction of a minimum wage of two thirds of male median earnings.

Mr. Forth: We do not have the information to provide a full answer, and even a partial answer could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Employment Training

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money is set aside for employment training in each English county.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available in the form requested. In 1991-92 budgets were allocated by funding block rather than by individual scheme. Funding block 2 includes employment training (ET) fees, ET allowances and high technology national training (HTNT). The table below shows the money allocated to each regional office in England for funding block 2:

Region	Allocation £ million
South East	57·25
London	93·02
South West	46·51
West Midlands	89·88
East Midlands	67·75
Yorkshire and Humberside	100·49
North West	123·93
Northern	82·63

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action the Health and Safety Executive is taking in respect of the drafting of regulations for the storage of (a) propane or butane gas, (b) petrol and (c) weed killer, in the home.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Commission's current reviews of the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1984 and regulations concerning the storage of petrol in containers include consideration of the domestic storage of liquefied petroleum gas and petrol respectively.

The storage of weed killer in the home is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who has no plans to produce regulations on such storage.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the role of the Health and Safety Executive in respect of safety in private domestic premises as proposed in the new draft of the Control of Explosives Regulations; and on what section of which Act this role is based.

Mr. Forth: None. The Health and Safety Commission has proposed new draft control of explosives regulations to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary. The police will be the enforcing authority for most requirements in the proposals; the Health and Safety Executive for others. The proposed new regulations give the Health and Safety Executive no role in respect of safety in domestic premises.

Training (Finance)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received regarding reductions in funding for people on training schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: A number of hon. Members have written to me about funding for training, including the hon. Member for Truro. It is for training and enterprise councils to allocate funding to training schemes locally. Nationally resources for youth training and employment training now stand at over £1·7 billion for 1991-92. Following a reappraisal of the range of measures available to help unemployed people and a reassessment of the overall demand for ET adjustments were made to the balance of our measures involving an increase in the number of opportunities delivered through the Employment Service.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money has been set aside for the purchase of tools to enable the unemployed to gain skilled employment.

Mr. Jackson: No money has been allocated specifically for the purchase of tools for this purpose.

Skills Training

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans the Government have to provide training for people aged over 25 years in skills necessary to gain employment, including interview skills, literacy and numeracy.

Mr. Jackson: The Government aim to offer to all adults under 50 who have been unemployed for more than two years, and to all unemployed people with disabilities, a place on employment training (ET), enterprise allowance, the job interview guarantee or in a job-club. Many people who need the help described will be included in this group. Other people who need help with literacy/numeracy are eligible to enter ET without being unemployed for 26 weeks.

Job preparation courses are offered as part of the job interview guarantee initiative and are designed to give long-term unemployed people the knowledge and confidence to succeed at a guaranteed interview for vacancies offered at the end of the course.

The Government have recently announced sponsorship of £3 million over the next three years for a new initiative called "Basic Skills at Work" intended to enhance the quantity and quality of literacy/numeracy training.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many people of employment age are on literacy and numeracy training courses; and if he will give these figures for each English county;

(2) what money is available for each English county for people with special training needs in literacy, numeracy and social skills; and what the figures were for 1990.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not available.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Sri Lanka

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much grant aid has been provided for Sri Lanka during each of the past five years; and if he will increase grant aid for next year.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid is being provided to Sri Lanka in this financial year; and what was the figure in each of the previous three years.

Mrs. Chalker: I will write to the hon. Members.

HEALTH

Cancer

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths have been recorded in Gwynedd caused by cancer in each of the past five years; what incidence rate the figure for each year represents; how that rate corresponds to the figure for (a) Wales and (b) Great Britain in each of those years; and if he will break down the total number of cancer deaths in each year into convenient age groups.

Mr. Dorrell: The tables list the number of deaths, and rates per 1,000 population, from malignant neoplasms (ICD 140-208) for the years 1986-90, in Gwynedd, Wales and Great Britain. The data are presented in convenient age groups.

Cervical Cancer

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of research into a vaccine for cervical cancer; and what funds are being made available by his Department for such research.

Mr. Dorrell: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research in the United Kingdom is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science. I understand that no research into this subject is currently being undertaken by the MRC.

The Department's view is that although some strains of human papilloma virus, against which such a vaccine would be used, may pre-dispose to the development of cervical cancer, there is no absolute proof that it does.

It is not normal practice to contemplate developing a vaccine unless there is clear proof that the infectious agent against which the vaccine is directed has been proved to cause the condition under consideration.

Population Statistics

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current population of England, Scotland and Wales who are aged 18 years or over.

Mr. Dorrell: The estimated resident populations aged 18 years and over at 30 June 1990 were as follows:

	Million
England	37·00
Scotland	3·94
Wales	2·22

HIV (Blood Transfusions)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from Mr. Graham Ross in regard to financial help for NHS patients who have become infected with HIV through infected blood transfusions, and their families; what reply he is sending; if there is any action he has taken or will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Edgbaston (Dame J. Knight) on 6 June at column 302.

Sefton General Hospital

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will direct the Liverpool area health authority to publish its plans for the future of Sefton general hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: No. The planning and development of health services locally is a matter for the health authority concerned. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Michael Emberton, the chairman of Liverpool health authority.

Trent Regional Health Authority

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will itemise land and property sales by Trent regional health authority between 1987 and 1991.

Mr. Dorrell: Information in respect of sales of over £50,000 and over 1 acre in area is given in the tables.

Regrading Appeals

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give his latest figures for the number of outstanding nurse regrading appeals at regional and at national level for each health district or NHS trust in (a) Yorkshire regional health authority and (b) Trent regional health authority; and when he expects all the regrading appeals to be completed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 31 May 1991 the number of regional clinical grading appeals in Trent regional health authority and Yorkshire regional health authority was as follows:

Regional Health Authority	Number of appeals outstanding
Yorkshire	1,242
Trent	1,416

Information about regional appeals outstanding for each district or NHS trust in these regions is not available centrally.

At 31 May 1991 the number of national clinical grading appeals outstanding in Trent regional health authority and Yorkshire regional health authority was as follows:

	Number outstanding
Yorkshire
District
Calderdale	1
Dewsbury	1
East Yorkshire	1
Harrogate	1
Hull	1
Pontefract	11
Wakefield	6
York	5
Trent
District
Barnsley	1
Central Nottinghamshire	3
Nottingham	1
Sheffield	4

These figures include appeals outstanding in NHS trusts.

We cannot predict when all the regrading appeals will be completed, but every effort is made to process cases as quickly as possible within the currently agreed procedures.

East Birmingham Hospital

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why he has appointed Mr. John Bettinson to be chairman of the trust for East Birmingham hospital before the end of the consultation period for the proposal to establish a trust for this hospital.

Mr. Waldegrave: NHS trust chairmen and non-executive directors cannot be formally appointed until an NHS trust is established. Our current programme for second-wave NHS trusts envisages formal establishment in the autumn of this year. The names of the chairmen will be provided around the same time.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the applications received for approval in the second wave of NHS trusts.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested is as follows:

Post-registration Education

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are being made to fund both training and time off for training under the post-registration education and practice project.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The post-registration education and practice project has been undertaken by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (UKCC). I understand that the UKCC has just completed consultation with the professions on the project report and that it plans to discuss the outcome with the United Kingdom Health Departments in due course. Any specific proposals addressed to the Health Departments will be considered at the appropriate time.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department has on the links between abortion and subsequent sterility or reproductive complications.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The most recent information that the Department has comes from a major study we have funded of the short and long-term sequelae of abortion. The researchers, who have presented some of their recent findings orally at conferences have concluded that overall, abortion was not materially related to future fertility. However, the findings showed lower fertility in women who had induced abortion in their first pregnancy, as measured in the time it took to conceive again. It was also shown that induced abortion does not increase the risk of non-viable outcome, decreased birthweight of the baby or shortened gestation in the subsequent pregnancy, although certain features of the abortion operation may affect the outcome.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to the national health service over the last year for which figures are available of (a) abortions performed within the national health service, (b) abortions contracted out by the national health service, (c) pre-abortion counselling and preparation, (d) post-abortion counselling, (e) treatment following abortions and (f) other costs associated with abortion in the national health service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The estimated revenue cost of a straightforward abortion as an in-patient in a national health service hospital is £250 in 1989-90 prices. The other information is not collected centrally.

PRIME MINISTER

Middle East (Arms Control)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what recent consultations Her Majesty's Government have had with the United States Government concerning the creation of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the middle east.

The Prime Minister: We worked closely with the United States Government and other members of the United Nations Security Council in the preparation of Security Council resolution 687, which specifically refers to the need to work towards the establishment of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the middle east. President Bush's recent initiative, if implemented, would be an important step towards that objective.

Special Forces

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what questions Her Majesty's Government have answered relating to special forces since November 1990.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces on 24 January at column 317 and on 21 March 1991 at column 230 and by me on 17 May 1991 at column 281 and 20 May at column 333.

National Security

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether GCHQ, or Cleave station, Warminster has undertaken surveillance of any communications in order to assist criminal or civil investigations or to aid the enforcement of court orders since 1979;

(2) whether GCHQ, or Cleave station, Warminster has undertaken surveillance of any communications for purposes other than national security since 1979;

(3) what provisions are in place to prevent the dissemination of information gathered at GCHQ, or Cleave station, Warminster, in cases other than those representing a clear danger to national security.

The Prime Minister: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to discuss the work of the intelligence services. The dissemination of intercepted information is governed by safeguards under the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

NUM

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will request the commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 to report on allegations of the use of intercepted material in pursuit of the enforcement of court orders against the National Union of Mineworkers.

The Prime Minister: No.

Foreign Visits (Journalists)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 34, if he will list by date of journey and newspaper those accounts for journalists travelling on official transport provided for Prime ministerial visits abroad which remained unsettled as of 3 June.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 6 June 1991]: It is not my practice to give details of outstanding accounts.

WALES

Motorways

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many miles of (a) motorway and (b) near-motorway standard trunk road have been started in Wales in each year since 1979.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The number of miles of major new construction involving motorway and dual carriageway trunk roads started in Wales for each year since 1979 are given in the following table:

	Motorway standard	Dual carriageway
1979-80	—	14·5

Cancer

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what investigations have been commissioned by his Department during the past four years into the level of cancer incidence in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: An investigation of data relating to the incidence of cancers in north Wales over the period 1974 to 1983 was undertaken at the invitation of the Welsh Office by Professor Hubert Campbell, emeritus professor of medical statistics, university of Wales. The results were published in July 1988.

"Cancer Registration in Wales: 1974-1984", published in 1988, contained a comprehensive analysis of cancer incidence in Wales based on information held on the Welsh Cancer Registry in respect of the years 1974 to 1984. A further report of the Welsh Cancer Registry, which will include data for 1984 to 1986, is currently being prepared.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further steps he proposes taking to improve cancer services for people residing in Gwynedd.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Consultation on the wide-ranging recommendations in the Deloitte, Haskins and Sells report into cancer treatment services for north Wales produced numerous and varying responses. These are being considered and an announcement will be made in due course.

Sheep

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table indicating the number of farms in Wales affected by the sheep movement prohibition resulting from the Chernobyl disaster, in each year since that disaster occurred, together with an estimate of the number of sheep involved in each year.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is given in the following table:

Date	Approximate number of holdings	Approximate number of sheep (post-lambing)
20 June 1986[1]	5,100	2,000,000
1 January 1987	315	225,000

1 January 1990	416	300,000
14 January 1991[3]	410	292,000

[1] Date of first Statutory Instrument imposing restrictions.
[2] Some re-restriction was necessary during 1987 on about 2 per cent. of those holdings released from restriction during 1986.
[3] Date of most recent Statutory Instrument derestricting part of the restricted area.

Right-to-buy

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing the number of households currently on right-to-buy housing waiting lists in each district council area in Wales and the latest available figures showing the average amount of time spent by applicants on such waiting lists in each district authority.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The number of households on right-to-buy waiting lists at the end of March 1991, the latest available dates, are given in the following table.

Information regarding the average amount of time spent by applicants on right-to-buy waiting lists is not collected centrally.

Music Teaching

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for the provision of peripatetic music teaching in the schools of south Glamorgan of the introduction of local management of schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: We attach great value to the music service in schools and are anxious to see it continuing. Nevertheless, we do not believe that valuable provision of this sort will be threatened if local education authorities decide to delegate the funds to schools. Parents will want to see music provision maintained in the schools that their children attend and so will governors.

Unruly Children

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales where in Wales, when the Children Act comes into operation, children subject to unruliness certificates can be accommodated.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Secure units at Ty Mawr, Silverbrook and Llwyncelyn community homes; and Cardiff and Swansea prisons. This matter is covered in the review of secure care policy in Wales which has been undertaken and which is to be issued for consultation next month.

Children's Homes

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales why copies of the Welsh Office report on three children's homes in Wales published on 4 June were not placed in the Library; why they were not made immediately available to hon. Members via the Vote Office; and whether he will make immediate arrangements for them to be placed in Library and to be made available at the Vote Office.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Copies of the reports were placed in the Library of the House on 5 June and have been provided to the hon. Gentleman. Copies are freely available from the Welsh Office.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Recycled Paper (HMSO)

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of Her Majesty's Stationery Office documents are printed on recycled paper; and what plans he has to increase the percentage.

Mr. Maples: To calculate the proportion of HMSO documents printed on recycled paper would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

HMSO actively encourages increased usage of recycled paper. Currently initiatives includes trials of recycled copier paper, computer stationery and recycled paper for tinted forms.

A catalogue has been issued highlighting the availability of environmentally friendly products.

Mortgage Payments

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by region in tabular form and at constant prices the average monthly domestic mortgage payment payable in the month when interest rates were at their lowest since 1983, the current average mortgage payable and the difference between the two figures.

Mr. Maude: Information for average new mortgages in the second quarter of 1988 is in the table. Details of average amounts outstanding on all mortgages by region are not available.

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to ensure that the price of unleaded petrol is contained to make its use attractive to private motorists; and if he will publish an analysis of the cost of this petrol throughout the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Measures taken in the Budget increased the tax advantage of unleaded over leaded petrol to more than 4 pence a litre (18·4p per gallon). The Government neither have nor seek the power to intervene directly in commercial price setting, but are determined to maintain a free market where the consumer is best served by unfettered competition between the oil companies. Pump prices of unleaded petrol at locations throughout the United Kingdom are published in the Petroleum Times energy report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Economic and Finance Council of the European Community met in Luxembourg on 3 June. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council discussed a Presidency package of proposals on VAT and excise rates and systems, the most important elements of which were a minimum standard VAT rate of 15 per cent., minimum rates for all excises and provision for reduced rates including protection for our own zero rates. There was no agreement on the package as a whole and discussion will resume on 10 June.

In the discussion of VAT rates, I restated the Government's view that the centrally imposed approximation of tax rates was not necessary for the establishment of the single market, but I made a statement that the United Kingdom had no present intention of reducing the standard rate of VAT below the 15 per cent. minimum proposed by the Presidency or indeed of making any change to the current rate of VAT of 17·5 per cent.

On excise duties, I argued that, for health reasons, we needed to agree either high minimum rates for the duties on alcohol and tobacco, or limits on the amounts of these goods which can be brought into any member state tax-paid, and I said that the United Kingdom would in principle be prepared to accept a minimum rate for diesel duty which would not oblige us to make any changes to our present levels. Any final agreement will, of course, be subject to parliamentary scrutiny.

In a brief discussion of export credits and tied aid I urged that the European Community should agree to the Helsinki 5 revised package for revision of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development export credit arrangement and of the Development Assistance Committee's draft agreements on tied aid.

Inland Revenue (Leaflet)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been made to the Inland Revenue by the Royal Mail about the wording of a leaflet advising taxpayers on payment methods; and what action has been taken as a result.

Mr. Maude: The Post Office recently asked the Inland Revenue for a meeting to discuss this subject, and this meeting will take place shortly.

P11D Forms

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report, column 593, what is his estimate of the yield from the outstanding P11D forms.

Mr. Maude: The additional yield from examination of the outstanding forms is estimated at £10·25 million.

Many of the forms on hand in April included benefits returned for earlier years and already covered by adjustments to tax codes.

Security Vetting, Northern Ireland

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many posts in the Inland Revenue in Northern Ireland are subject to reliability checks under the new procedures for security vetting announced by the Prime Minister on 24 July 1990.

Mr. Maude: Since the new procedures were introduced, no posts in the Inland Revenue have been the subject of reliability checks. All new recruits to Northern Ireland complete a security questionnaire which is the basis for counter-terrorist checks.

Investment Income

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of people with annual investment income over £3,000 in 1991-92 who are (a) over the age of 55 years, (b) women over the age of 60 years and (c) men over the age of 65 years.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 6 June 1991]: Available information indicates that approximately 500,000 men aged over 65 and 500,000 women aged over 65 have investment income over £3,000 in 1991-92. I regret that information for those aged between 55 and 65 is not separately available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Textiles

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report all investigations which the European Commission has made into state aids in textiles and clothing in the European Community since 1986 and the eventual outcome of those cases which have been resolved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer my hon. Friend to the European Commission's annual competition policy reports (part 3, chapter 1 and the annexes to the 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th reports on competition policy), copies of which are available in the Library of the House. These list all formal investigations opened by the European Commission into state aids, including those for textiles and clothing, and their outcome.

Interest Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will refer bank margins on interest rates to the Office of Fair Trading for inquiry into the extent and effectiveness of competition.

Mr. Lilley: I would of course ask the Director General of Fair Trading to investigate any anti-competitive practices by banks of which I had evidence. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked his officials, with the Bank of England, to look into concerns which have been raised about bank lending and my regional offices have been arranging a number of meetings between banks and small businesses.

SCOTLAND

Health Service Pay

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the number, in both absolute and percentage terms, of medical physics technicians, pharmacy technicians and medical photographers in each of the new pay scale categories.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: An agreement concluded by the Professional and Technical Staffs "B" Whitley Council in September 1989 introduced a new pay and grading structure for various groups of technicians in the NHS. Medical physics, technicians, pharmacy technicians and medical photographers were assigned to one of the eight medical technical officer (MTO) grades which are assistant, senior assistant, trainee and grades 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. Health boards have stated that on 30 September 1990 the number of staff formerly in these grades in each of the MTO grades is as set out in the following tables.

Health Boards (Regrading)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the time between an appeal against the physiological measurement technicians, cardiology, regrading and the hearing of that appeal;

(2) how many physiological measurement technicians, cardiology, have appealed against their regrading in (a) Greater Glasgow health board and (b) all other health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on appeals lodged with health boards against their implementation of a new pay and grading structure for various groups of technicians and the length of time it has taken to process them is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest number of expressions of interest about hospital trust status received by his Department; and if he will name the hospitals concerned.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There have been seven expressions of interest arising from which South Ayrshire and the Royal Scottish National hospitals have submitted applications and an application from Foresterhill (Aberdeen) is expected shortly. The Victoria infirmary (Glasgow), West Grampian unit and Princess Margaret Rose hospital (Edinburgh) are continuing exploratory work, but I have indicated to those promoting the Forfar proposal that it would not be appropriate for trust status in its original form.

Health Consultation Document

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to publish a green paper in line with "The Health of the Nation", as released for consultation by the Secretary of State for Health; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have already published on 25 March, after an extensive period of consultation, "Health Education in Scotland: A National Policy Statement", copies of which were placed in the Library. The statement identifies our priorities and sets challenging targets for improvements in health in Scotland. It describes the role of the health education board for Scotland, which was established on 1 April 1991 to lead the health education effort in Scotland, and sets the framework within which the board, health boards, local authorities, voluntary organisations, employers, the media and individuals can work together to secure the health improvements we seek. I expect to take further initiatives which will be announced in due course.

Church of Scotland (Expenditure)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate to which vote in the estimates expenditure incurred by or on behalf of the Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland is attributed; and if he will list the amounts provided for the current year and in each of the last three years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The expenditure for 1991-92 is held on class XV vote 13, law, order and miscellaneous health services, Scotland. The amounts provided were:

1988-89	[1]58,000
1989-90	[1]73,000
1990-91	[1]71,000
1991-92	76,000

Lanarkshire Working Group

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if he has received the report of the Lanarkshire working group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I welcome the report of the Lanarkshire working group, which was published today and I commend the way in which the organisations represented on the group have worked together to propose Lanarkshire-wide solutions to the economic problems caused by major steel and related job losses.

The group's report makes it clear that Lanarkshire has many advantages and assets. Building on the Lanarkshire development agency's business plan, and the ideas and plans of the other private and public bodies in the area, the group has offered proposals which would greatly benefit Lanarkshire's economy. These embrace good sites, good communications and infrastructure, improved training and business support, a better environment, and attractive tourism and leisure facilities. All of these together will support the new and replacement jobs Lanarkshire needs. Given the spirit of co-operation evident in the group itself, I expect the local authorities, Scottish Enterprise, the Lanarkshire development agency, East Kilbridge development corporation, Scottish Homes, the local enterprise trusts and British Steel (Industry) Limited, together with officials of the Scottish Office and the Employment Service, to maintain that partnership and work to ensure that in their programmes and activities, projects identified by the working group are given priority and driven forward to successful completion. The financial assistance now being made available by the Government totals £120 million.

The group has identified a number of early action and medium-term projects, achievement of which will require the sustained co-operation of the various local and national bodies involved, as well as the full co-operation of the private sector. It will be for the Lanarkshire development agency to co-ordinate implementation of the 16 early action projects for site development identified in the report. The agency is, I know, keen to get on with the job.

The group laid particular stress on the need for improvements to the road infrastructure of Lanarkshire and, in particular, the need for early upgrading of the A8 between Newhouse and Baillieston to give better access to industrial sites in the Lanarkshire area and to accommodate increased traffic flows. I recognise the need for such improvements and I have, therefore, commissioned Strathclyde regional council to undertake a design study for a revised road scheme for the upgrading of the A8 between Newhouse and Baillieston which would also allow for early upgrading of the existing Shawhead and Chapelhall junctions to facilitate access from local industrial sites in line with the group's recommendations.

The group also noted the economic benefits which construction of a new general hospital would bring to the Motherwell area. I am therefore very pleased to announce that I have today endorsed Lanarkshire health board's proposal in its acute services strategy to build a new district general hospital at Netherton in Wishaw. This decision will enable detailed planning work to go ahead with a view to a start on site well within the period of four to seven years envisaged by the group. Apart from its welcome contribution to improved health care, this project will contribute construction and long-term jobs, and should help attract business, to the area. A fuller announcement will be made in due course about other aspects of the board's strategy.

Throughout the group's report, stress is laid on the need to stimulate private sector investment in Lanarkshire. I strongly support this approach. Now that we have a report which highlights Lanarkshire's assets and its many and varied prospects for development, I shall be looking to the private sector to take up the opportunities available, and to build on the foundations of increased public sector investment.

I look in particular to the positive role which British Steel can play, recognising British Steel (Industry) Ltd.'s important existing contribution to the area, and welcoming its recent initiative in opening a new office in Wishaw. I am also especially pleased to welcome today's announcement by British Steel (Industry) Ltd. that it intends to spend an additional £10 million in Lanarkshire over the next three years on measures to which the Lanarkshire working group also attached priority—particularly the provision of finance for business projects, and additional managed work space. This will integrate well with the proposals in the working group's report, and make a valuable contribution towards their fulfilment.

The report recommends that selected strategic and industrial development sites in north Lanarkshire should be given enterprise zone status, recognising that for an enterprise zone to be designated within an area, it has to satisfy the criteria established by the European Commission. The Government are considering this recommendation against the background of its existing policy on enterprise zones, and the costs which might be involved.

Taken together, the recommendations of the group would represent a substantial call on public expenditure. The bulk of the expenditure needed to implement the proposals on site and business development, training, and environmental improvement would be the responsibility of Scottish Enterprise and the Lanarkshire development agency. Strathclyde regional council and the five Lanarkshire district councils would be responsible for meeting necessary expenditure on local roads, water, sewerage and factory building identified in the report.

I have already made available for the Lanarkshire development agency and the Lanarkshire district councils nearly £28 million of additional funding for expenditure in the course of 1991-92. These resources, which include the £15 million announced in May by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, are over and above Scottish Enterprise's basic allocation to the Lanarkshire development agency of £36 million, the £5 million spent by the Scottish Development Agency in buying key north Lanarkshire sites earlier this year, and the £26 million capital programme for East Kilbride development corporation, and will enable a substantial early start to be made on the site developments and environmental and other improvements recommended by the group.

Through the Department of Trade and Industry the Government will make available some £28 million to assist British Steel employees made redundant who qualify under the iron and steel employees readaptation benefits scheme.

I am also pleased to announce today that the Scottish Office has approved a project proposed by Strathclyde regional council for funding under the urban programme to help redundant steelworkers. The project would be based in Motherwell, and concentrate on the deprived communities in north Lanarkshire.

On European Community assistance, I agree that Lanarkshire's needs should be urgently considered for enhanced support under the Strathclyde integrated development operation. I shall ensure that the other recommendations concerning European Community assistance are drawn to the attention of the European Commission.

The Government will announce their expenditure plans for the years 1992-93 onwards at the end of the public expenditure survey. I shall give the needs of Lanarkshire priority in deciding the allocations to my programmes. I shall also expect the other public bodies represented in the group to give similar priority to projects for which they are responsible. It will be important that the projects which proceed in the short term are those which provide the maximum economic benefits for Lanarkshire, thus ensuring the best use of the resources available.

In Lanarkshire, the Government have identified the problem, established the working group to address it and is now bringing together the measures and resources to respond to it so that, over the next few years, Lanarkshire's economy will have the chance to diversify and regenerate for the benefit of its people and of Scotland as a whole.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Diversification

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he gives to farmers about diversification in the countryside if they wish to develop motor-cross training areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Under the Agriculture Act 1986 there is no charge for general advice to farmers on diversifying their businesses into non-agricultural activities. Such advice is given within the context of the farm's resources, its location and the objectives of the farmer. Activities such as the provision of motor-cross training facilities normally require planning permission and as such, farmers will be advised to consult their local authority, whose responsibility it then is to approve or reject such projects.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial aid is available in the United Kingdom for the breeding and rearing of greyhounds as part of the diversification of agriculture; and whether he has made any such payments.

Mr. Gummer: No such aid is available in the United Kingdom. No such payments have therefore been made.

43 International Whaling Commission

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the members of the United Kingdom delegation from the non-governmental organisations who were represented at the 43 International Whaling Commission meeting at Reykjavik; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom delegation included two representatives from Wildlife Link, the liaison body for major voluntary organisations in the United Kingdom concerned with wildlife.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has completed his review of environmentally sensitive areas policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My review of the ESA policy has been based primarily on an evaluation of the schemes that have been in operation since 1987 in the Broads, Pennine dales, south downs, Somerset levels and moors and west Penrith. I have also received views from a wide range of interests. The achievements of these schemes have been carefully monitored and have proved their value in conserving the special habitats, landscapes and items of historical or archaeological interest in these areas. I have, therefore, concluded that they should continue with the aim of securing further environmental protection and enhancement.

I intend to publish reports on the monitoring together with proposals for these ESAs as a basis for consultation, and to bring revised schemes before Parliament later this year. Agreements with farmers in the remaining ESA schemes in England that were introduced in 1988 begin to expire in 1993 and I will be reviewing those schemes next year.

My right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales have reached similar conclusions concerning the ESAs designated in 1987 in Scotland and Wales. They will also be making proposals for consultation.

Phosphate Waste

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what informaton he has on phosphate waste being discharged into British coastal waters and its effect on marine life.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 7 May 1991, Official Report, column 398.

ENERGY

Sellafield (Illegal Entry)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will call for a report from the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc on the circumstances of the illegal entry of two persons into secure areas of the Sellafield plant during the week beginning 20 May;

(2) if he will make a statement on the security and health and safety implications for the people of Workington of the break-in to secure areas of the Sellafield site in the week beginning 20 May;

(3) if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary on the circumstances of the break-in at the Sellafield site during the week beginning 20 May, and on the security implications of these events.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: British Nuclear Fuels plc has kept my officials fully informed of this incident. I understand that in the late evening of Thursday 23 May two demonstrators were detected and apprehended within the Sellafield perimeter fence. BNFL and the UKAEA constabulary are satisfied that no access was gained to sensitive buildings.

All civil nuclear sites employ defence in depth, these include successive layers of protection around sensitive operations and materials. I understand that in this case, only the outermost layers were involved. Security of the installation was, therefore, maintained and there were no health and safety implications for the demonstrators, the Sellafield workers on site or the public.

Written Answers to Questions

ENVIRONMENT

Public Inquiries

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the criteria for appointing public inquiry inspectors; and on what basis public inquiry inspectors can be sacked.

Mr. Yeo: Before appointing an inspector to hold a public inquiry, the Department considers what issues the case is likely to raise and then selects an inspector with the appropriate expertise and experience.

Salaried inspectors are subject to the same disciplinary code as any other civil servant. Fee paid inspectors are subject to the rules set out in their contracts or terms of engagement. Public inquiries concerned with trunk road orders are conducted by independent individuals, not civil servants, and they are nominated specifically for each inquiry by the Lord Chancellor.

Population Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table showing nationally, regionally and for each district, the total number of households, the number drawing household benefit, the number paying a reduced community charge by bands of reduced charge, and the number on national assistance.

Mr. Key: Information on households at district level is contained in table 39 of the county report to the 1981 census, copies of which are in the Library. Similar analyses from the 1991 census will become available during 1992. Current estimates of the number of households for England and the English regions were given in the reply to the hon. Member's earlier question on 20 May 1991 at columns 327-28.

Estimates of the number of households in receipt of housing benefit are:

Estimated number of households claiming housing benefit

Standard region	Thousands
Northern	295·1
Yorkshire and Humberside	381·5
East Anglia	239·9
East Midlands	110·8
Greater London	533·6
South-East (ex. London)	499·3
South-West	252·2
West Midlands	366·3
North-West	508·2
England Total	3,186·9

The information relates to November 1990 and is based on quarterly caseloads. A table containing this information for districts, where available, has been placed in the Library.

It is not possible to provide the information requested on the numbers who will be paying a reduced community charge at either regional or district level. For estimates at a national level I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 April 1991 to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) at columns 184-85.

National assistance was replaced by supplementary benefit in 1966 which was itself replaced by income support in 1988. Information on income support is only available for the former social security regions. Quarterly details as at February 1991 are as follows:

Social Security Region	Unemployed (000s)	Pensioners (000s)	Others (000s)	Total (000s)
North-East	257	242	232	731
Midlands	250	258	235	743
London, North	249	251	268	768
London, South	221	228	219	667
Wales and South West	199	215	183	597
North-West	241	224	237	702
Scotland	180	151	176	507
National Total	1,597	1,568	1,550	4,715

Urban Development Corporations

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government will be allocating funds over and above those already earmarked for the urban development corporations or promised in grant aid to fund the full cost of completion of projects left unfinished on the termination of the urban development corporations' fixed lifetime.

Mr. Key: I expect satisfactory arrangements to be made to deal with projects which are under way when a corporation is wound up. These arrangements will be determined by the circumstances of the particular case.

Homelessness

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he gives to local authorities on the definition of intentionally homeless.

Mr. Yeo: Section 71 of the Housing Act 1985 provides for the Secretary of State to issue guidance to local authorities on how to apply the homelessness legislation. Local authorities must have regard to this guidance when dealing with homeless applicants. A revised code of guidance—third edition—is currently in preparation, following extensive consultation, and will be issued shortly. The code contains advice on how local authorities should assess whether an applicant has become homeless intentionally, although this decision will be a matter for the authority's own discretion on the facts of each individual case.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider introducing legislation to place a duty on local authorities to provide accommodation for all 16 to 18-year-olds who are homeless.

Mr. Yeo: The Government's 1989 homelessness review concluded that the homelessness legislation provided an adequate safety net to those in greatest need who were homeless through no fault of their own. The homelessness code of guidance contains advice on how local authorities should assess applications from young people who apply as homeless, although this will be a matter for the local authority's discretion on the facts of each individual case.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities in England and Wales which provide rented accommodation for single, homeless people.

Mr. Yeo: Local authorities that retain housing for rent provide accommodation for homeless households when the need arises. However the information available to my Department does not separately identify accommodation let to single people.

For information about Wales I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Transmitter, Northumberland

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to call in the proposals for the erection of a Loran C transmitter near Amble, Northumberland by Trinity House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend cannot call in a development proposal before a planning application has been submitted. I understand that Trinity House is consulting Alnwick district council and other interested parties with a view to exercising permitted development rights under the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 to establish a transmitter at Togston to service the proposed north-west European Loran C system. Exercise of these rights is dependent upon the conclusion of an international agreement on the UK joining the system.

Housing Starts

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his Department's working forecasts for the number of (a) local authority new starts and (b) housing association new starts for each of the next five years.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the Department's annual report—(Cm 1508)—chapter 7, paragraphs 7.30 to 7.47 in particular.

Institute of Horticulture

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received from the Institute of Horticulture regarding garden festivals; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he next proposes to discuss the development of garden festivals with the Institute of Horticulture; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when he next proposes to meet the Institute of Horticulture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: I have agreed to meet the Institute of Horticulture to discuss the future of garden festivals, following a recent letter from the president arguing that further festivals be staged.

Industrial Waste

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken to promote the implementation of policies to ensure that safe and effective arrangements are made for the disposal of industrial waste in the country of origin; what steps he has taken to encourage the adoption of this policy by other countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom has taken a leading part in persuading the international community to accept the principle that industrial and other wastes should be disposed of at environmentally sound facilities in the country of production. The OECD decision-recommendation on the reduction of transfrontier movements of wastes of 31 January 1991 requires member countries to dispose of their wastes in an environmentally satisfactory fashion as far as possible in their own territory. EC directive 91/156 of 18 March 1991 requires member states to dispose of waste to a high level of environmental protection and to establish an adequate network of disposal facilities to enable the Community as a whole to become self-sufficient in waste disposal and member states to move towards that aim individually. The United Kingdom has been advocating the importance of self-sufficiency during the current negotiations on the draft regulation on shipments of waste within, into and out of the European Community which would enable member states to ratify the Basel convention on the control of transboundary movements of hazardous wastes.

Angling

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government intend to introduce legislation to impose the same or similar restrictions on the use of lead shot as imposed on the use of lead weights in angling.

Mr. Baldry: The Government are aware of the potential effects of lead shot on the environment. We have asked the Nature Conservancy Council for England to assess the extent of any danger to wildlife and its habitat, and to monitor the outcome of current research into possible alternatives to lead shot. When we have evaluated all this evidence, we will be able to decide whether voluntary restriction or legislation is more appropriate.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the enterprise zone designated areas by standard region in England, giving the date of designation and expiry.

Mr. Portillo: The table supplies this information.

Region	Enterprise Zone	Designation Date
Northern	Tyneside	25 August 1981
	Hartlepool	23 October 1981
	Middlesbrough	8 November 1983
	Sunderland	27 April 1990
Yorkshire and Humberside	Wakefield	31 July 1981 and 23 September 1983
	Rotherham	16 August 1983
	Scunthorpe	23 September 1983
	Glandford	14 April 1985
North West	Salford/Trafford	12 August 1981
	Speke (Liverpool)	25 August 1981
	Workington	4 October 1983
	N. E. Lancashire	7 December 1983
West Midlands	Dudley	10 July 1981 and 3 October 1994
	Telford	13 January 1994
East Midlands	Corby	22 June 1981
	Wellingborough	26 July 1983
South East	North West Kent	31 October 1983 and 10 October 1986
London	Isle of Dogs	26 April 1982

Note: Each zone has a 10 year life designation; Wakefield, Dudley and North West Kent include zone extensions.

National Parks

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the percentages of planning decisions made in eight weeks by each of the district councils in Staffordshire and in the Peak District national park in the 12 most recent three-month periods for which figures are available.

Mr. Yeo: The information requested is as follows:

Percentage of planning decisions made within 8 weeks in Staffordshire, by planning authority

Per cent.

Local authority	Quarter of decision 1988 1st	2nd	3rd	4th
Cannock Chase	74	83	82	80

Cheshire County Council

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will ask the Audit Commission to investigate the decision by Cheshire county council to replace existing road signs marking the county boundary;

(2) if he will ask the Audit Commission to investigate the decision by Cheshire county council to allocate £60,000 to a public relations campaign to promote its image as the local authority.

Mr. Key: No. These are matters for the auditor who must undertake his duties in accordance with the Audit Commission's code of audit practice. The code requires the auditor to satisfy himself that the body whose accounts are being audited has made proper arrangements for securing economy, efficiency and effectiveness in its use of resources.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the residents of Cheshire about the expenditure by Cheshire county council on public relations campaigns.

Mr. Key: We have received no recent representations from residents of Cheshire concerning expenditure by Cheshire county council on public relations campaigns.

Cheshire Road Signs

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will intervene to prevent Cheshire county council from replacing all existing road signs indicating the county boundary in the light of the review of local government structure;

(2) if he will meet the chief executive of Cheshire county council to discuss the decision of the county council to replace the existing road signs marking the county boundary.

Mr. Key: Local spending decisions are a matter to be determined by Cheshire county council in the light of its knowledge of local circumstances and the relevant powers. Subject to audit, the council will in this, as in all matters, be accountable to Cheshire electors for its decisions.

Local Government Review

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has issued to local authorities on public relations campaigns in the run-up to the review of local government structure.

Mr. Key: The joint circular of 15 August 1988 from the Department of the Environment, the Scottish Development Department and the Welsh Office contains the code of recommended practice of local authority publicity to which, by statute, local authorities must have regard.

Special Grants Scheme

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations that received grants from the Department of the Environment's special grants scheme; and at what level the grants were made for 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Key: In 1989-90 a total of £1·942 million was expended from my Department's special grants programme to support 85 projects in England, which increased in 1990-91 to £2·235 million to 94 projects. I am placing a list of organisations receiving grant for both years in the Library of the House. Separate programmes are administered in Scotland and Wales by the Scottish Office Environment Department and the Welsh Office respectively.

Waste Incineration

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the locations of any high-volume waste incinerators which have received planning permission in the United Kingdom over the last two years; and what conditions were imposed, if any, in each case.

Mr. Baldry: Whether to grant planning permission for a high volume waste incinerator is a function of local planning authorities. We do not collect records of permissions for such developments, or of conditions attached to such permissions.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list current United Kingdom regulations in force or pending which restrict or control the erection of high-volume waste incinerators in the vicinity of food storage and processing premises.

Mr. Baldry: The erection of a high-volume waste incinerator would require planning permission under the Town and Country Planning Acts. Before they can operate, new incinerators must also be authorised under part I of the Environmental Protection Act either by the local authority or Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, depending on the volume of the incinerator.

Water Tower, Southwold

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement outlining the reasons for the listing of the water tower at Southwold in Suffolk.

Sir George Young: The old water tower was listed on 16 May on the basis of clear advice from English Heritage, the Secretary of State's statutory professional advisers, that it is a building of special architectural or historic interest. English Heritage advised that the tower, which was built in 1886, is a very rare example of a wind-powered water tower.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement outlining the procedures that were followed in the listing of the old water tower at Southwold in Suffolk; and if he will give the names of the inspector and of those who were consulted.

Sir George Young: This building was drawn to the Department's attention in April and, in accordance with the provisions of section 1 of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990, English Heritage's advice was sought on whether it was a building of special architectural or historic interest. No other body was consulted in this particular case. The inspector who assessed the building was an historic buildings inspector from English Heritage, but the final decision was taken by the Secretary of State. It is not our normal practice to consult more widely on proposals for listing, or to give the names of the inspectors who advise the Secretary of State.

Heveningham Hall

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of the covenants accepted by ID Investment Development AG, and the deed of covenant by Mr. Al Ghazzi, guaranteeing the company's performance in relation to Heveningham hall.

Sir George Young: The broad effect of the covenants which were entered into at the time of the sale has been explained on more than one occasion. I do not think that there is anything in the present situation which would justify breaching normal considerations of confidentiality as to the detailed terms of the conveyance.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment further to his answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 163, who is re-examining Dame Sylvia Crowe's scheme and in the light of what specific research.

Sir George Young: The re-examination is being carried out by the bodies mentioned in my previous answer in the context of their formulation of a replanting programme; English Heritage is also being consulted. I was referring to general advances in our understanding of historic landscapes over recent years rather than to specific research.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring he has undertaken of (a) 18th century restoration and (b) 20th century restoration of Heveningham hall.

Sir George Young: Monitoring of works carried out under listed building consent is in the first instance a matter for the local planning authority. In view of the importance of the building, English Heritage has also kept closely in touch with the progress of the repair and restoration work.

Council House Sales

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to amend part VI of the Local Government and Housing Act to release capital receipts from the sale of council houses to be invested in the provision of new housing.

Mr. Yeo: Local authorities are required to set aside part of their capital receipts that have accrued from the sale of assets to meet outstanding loan debt and other liabilities. The remainder they may spend in new capital investment. The balance between debt redemption and new investment is kept under review.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to place a duty on local authorities to help provide for another neighbouring local authority with greater housing needs.

Mr. Yeo: No.

Council Housing, London

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of council housing in London is currently not inhabited by council tenants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 May 1991]: From latest available information reported on HIP1 returns it is estimated that 2·9 per cent. of stock owned by London boroughs was vacant at 1 April 1990. A further 0·7 per cent. was recorded as in unlicensed occupation.

The Government have taken steps to ensure that local authorities improve the utilisation and management of their stock. There is certainly considerable scope for improvement on the above figures, particularly among inner London boroughs. Revised housing revenue account subsidy arrangements now incorporate financial incentives for authorities to minimise the proportion of voids in their stock. The publication of performance indicators from this year onwards will highlight standards of housing management, including control of stock, and increase accountability to tenants. London boroughs have received additional allocations of £86 million over the past two years to repair empty local authority homes through the homelessness initiative. It is estimated that more than 5,000 will be brought back into use as a result.

Local Authority Service Provision

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what areas of local authority service provision for which he is responsible payments are required to be made to individuals who are not employees (a) in the form of a grant or one-off payment and (b) on receipt of paid invoices.

Mr. Key [holding answer 6 June 1991]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Holmewood Estate (Finance)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the funding sources and amounts already allocated for improvements to Holmewood estate in Bradford.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 June 1991]: The Department has to date made the following allocations for improvements to the Holmewood estate:

Estate Action Programme	4,958,600
Urban Programme	202,000
City Action Team Special Funding	68,670

Kew Gardens

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total daily admission cost for an unemployed man, his partner and two children over the age of five years to enter Kew gardens for each year since 1985; what account has been taken of the level of unemployment benefit in setting those charges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I have been asked to reply.

The standard daily admission costs for two adults and two children over five years of age entering Kew gardens for each year since 1985 have been, and are, as follows:

	Admission £
1985	0·50
1986	0·50
1987	1·00
1988	1·00
1989	3·00
January-October 1990	3·00
November-December 1990	8·00
1991	8·00

The current standard single adult entry charge is £3, but senior citizens and students can enter at half price and children under 15 for £1. No special provision has been made for visitors who are unemployed.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has issued any guidelines during the past 12 months to the mobility allowance units with regard to the length of time for which mobility allowance is awarded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: An award of mobility allowance is made by the independent adjudicating authorities for as long a period as it is considered that the conditions of entitlement will be met. I understand that no guidance on this point, other than that issued in connection with the changes relating to people without legs, has been issued to staff during the past 12 months.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will arrange to provide a simple medical report form for applicants for mobility allowance who are suffering from sickle cell disease in a similar style to form MY38A used for applicants who suffer from haemophilia.

Mr. Scott: Arrangements to introduce a special medical report form for people with sickle cell disease claiming mobility allowance are already in hand. Benefits Agency staff are liaising with the Birmingham sickle cell and thalassaemia centre about the questions to be included on the form and as soon as the text has been agreed, the form will be printed and brought into use.

Maintenance Payments

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the present criteria for deciding whether his Department will collect maintenance payments on behalf of income support claimants; and in what proportion of cases these arrangements currently operate.

Mr. Jack: The Department will collect maintenance payments on behalf of a claimant to income support if the liable relative does not pay the full maintenance due, pays late or misses a payment. Payments can also be collected by the Department where there are other good grounds for doing so—for instance, if there is a threat of violence from the liable relative.

The latest information held is for May 1989[1], and shows that at that time just under a quarter of maintenance payments for income support claimants were collected on their behalf by the Department.

[1] Source: Annual Statistical Enquiry, May 1989.

Vaccine Damage Payments Act

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures of applications made under the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979; and how many cases have been successful or are still under consideration.

Mr. Scott: Between 1979 and 31 May 1991, 3,447 applications for vaccine damage payments were received. Of these, 848 awards were made, 72 are still under consideration and 44 have been referred at the claimant's request to the independent vaccine damage payments tribunal.

Pensions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated net cost or gain to the Exchequer in the current financial year of the final or incremental 34p by which retirement pension exceeds the single person's income support level inclusive of the £13·75 pensioner premium.

Miss Widdecombe: There is no net gain or loss to the Exchequer. A single pensioner on income support, inclusive of the £13·75 pensioner premium, receives £1·40 more than the full basic level retirement pension.

Belfast Office

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many telephone and fax lines are available at the Belfast office of his Department dealing with benefit claims from applicants in London;

(2) what is the average time taken before claimants receive substantive replies to queries from his Department's office in Belfast sent in by (a) fax and (b) telephone;

(3) what is the cost of the system of phone referrals of local calls from London to his Department's office in Belfast for the year 1990-91.

Miss Widdecombe: The relocation of benefits work to the social security centre in Belfast is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Euro-card

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest position on a European card for pensioners.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Worsley (Mr. Lewis) on 25 March at column 290. I will send him a copy of the letter I wrote to Members of the European Parliament on 28 February.

Attendance Allowance

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people registered disabled receive attendance allowance in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Renfrew district.

Mr. Scott: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Crowther: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are being taken to harmonise the regulations governing prescribed industrial diseases within the European Community.

Mr. Scott: The Government are currently considering the European Commission recommendation of 22 May 1990 concerning the adoption of a European schedule of occupational diseases.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has received from his Department's monitoring exercise of claimants who do not qualify for invalid care allowance in specific weeks because their children return home from residential care on alternate weekends; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Scott: In the 12 months to May 1990, out of a total of about 35,800 invalid care allowance decisions, 120 claims were disallowed solely on grounds of the effects of intermittent care. There are no plans to change the present rules.

Farmers (Family Credit)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what total amount of family credit was paid to farmers in England and Wales during the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Jack: Separate information about farmers is not available. We estimate that in 1989-90 the total amount of family credit paid to families in England and Wales where the main earner was in "farming, fisheries and related occupations" was around £12 million, out of total expenditure on family credit in Great Britain for that year of £425 million.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of farmers currently claiming family credit in England and Wales; and what were the equivalent numbers for (a) 1979 and (b) 1984.

Mr. Jack: Separate information about farmers is not available. As at 31 October 1990, the latest date for which comprehensive information is available, there were 8,980 families in England and Wales receiving family credit where the main earner was in "farming, fisheries and related occupation". Equivalent information is not available for 1984 and 1979, since the occupational classifications used for family income supplement statistics were on a different basis.

Family Credit

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the number of self-employed currently applying for family credit and the total amount paid to the self-employed in family credit during the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Jack: As at 31 October 1990, the latest date for which comprehensive information is available, there were 47,860 families receiving family credit where the main earner was self-employed. We estimate that, in 1989-90, the total amount of family credit paid to families where the main earner was self-employed was around £88 million, which was just over 20 per cent. of total expenditure on family credit in that year.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of families who received family credit payments in each of the last two years.

Mr. Jack: 597,000 awards of family credit were made in 1989-90 and 638,500 in 1990-91. The total of awards made since the start of the scheme in 1988 recently passed the 2 million mark. Awards last for six months, and then a renewal claim has to be made, leading to a further award if appropriate. Therefore, many families will have received more than one award, and information is not available as to the total number of families who have received family credit during a given period.

Common Retirement Age

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the additional costs of providing for all men and women to claim a full state pension at a common retirement age of 60, 62 and 64 years of age, respectively, at the current level of state pension paid in 1991-92;

(2) if he will estimate the common retirement age for men and women for state pension purposes which would be cost neutral at 1991-92 levels of pension;

(3) if he will make a statement of Her Majesty's Government's current policy on a common retirement age for state pension purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxbourne (Mrs. Roe) on 20 May 1991 at col 627 and the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 27 February 1991 at col 539.

Price Indexation

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the answer of 3 June, when he expects a decision will be made on the introduction of the limited price indexation under the terms of the Social Security Act 1990.

Miss Widdecombe: No date has yet been set.

Income Support

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend social security arrangements to allow for income support to be paid in advance to the individual and to make it easier for social fund loans and grants to be paid in advance to the landlord.

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to amend the payment of income support in arrears to claimants under pension age. Those over pension age are paid income support in advance. We consider that these arrangements are sensible because they are in line with the way wages and other benefits are paid. Anyone who is unable to manage until their first payday may apply for a crisis loan from the social fund.

Loans are available from the social fund to pay for rent in advance. Whether such payments are made direct to the landlord is at the discretion of the local office.

TRANSPORT

Airport Security

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he has taken to apply the findings on airport security of the sheriff principal in the Lockerbie fatal accident inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The sheriff principal's report is being studied most carefully by the Department. Only one of the 20 findings referred directly to the Department.

The Department has required the industry to apply additional security controls to all unaccompanied bags. It is also discussing with representatives of airlines new procedures to ensure that all bags to be flown are properly authorised.

Technology for carrying out reconciliation checks on large volumes of baggage is becoming available and is being introduced by airlines. It is not yet sufficiently widespread or co-ordinated to enable the Department to impose a general requirement for its use by all airlines. We are pursuing this with the industry and international bodies. In practice, at airports in the United Kingdom, British Airways and other major airlines substantially meet the requirements indentified by the sheriff principal.

Midland Line (Electrification)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is prepared to authorise the expansion of British Rail's borrowing approvals to commence the immediate electrification of the Midland main line from Bedford to Sheffield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: It is for British Rail to put forward electrification proposals. I have not received from it any proposals in respect of the midland main line. I understand that InterCity's first investment priority is the west coast main line, where the rolling stock and infrastructure is considerably older and the service less reliable than on the midland main line.

M25 (Tunnels)

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of sections of the M25 that are underground in tunnels; what is the distance of the largest single section of the M25 in a tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: There are tunnels on the M25 at Bell Common and Holmesdale, the latter tunnel being the longer at 650 m. The London orbital is completed to the east of London by the A282 Dartford tunnels under the Thames which are some 1,400 m long.

Aviation (Third Party Liability)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to introduce compulsory insurance against third party liability for general aviation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend is considering the advice he has received from the former chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority on the question of compulsory insurance for aircraft registered in the United Kingdom. The Civil Aviation Authority advice identified a number of issues which would need to be resolved, including how a compulsory scheme could be enforced and how much it would cost, what the implications for the insurance industry would be, various questions on liability, and whether the scope of a scheme should be such as to insure against liability to passengers in aircraft or only to persons on the ground.

Railway Reopenings (Tribunal) Bill

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be in a position to answer the letter from the hon. Member for Christchurch regarding his Department's attitude towards the Railway Reopenings (Tribunal) Bill; and if he will publish his reply by means of an answer to this question.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend has today written to my hon. Friend.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Attorney-General what was the total amount spent by the Land Registry in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Land Registry in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment.

The Attorney-General: Management and computer consultancy contracts were awarded by the Land Registry in 1990-91 as follows:

Management consultancy

Price Waterhouse—Review of the Agency's top management structure.

Computer consultancy

Intergraph UK Ltd.—Technical advice on digital mapping.

Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency—Departmental Consultancy Support Agreement providing ongoing technical advice, support and Information Technology procurement services.

The Land Registry's expenditure on these services in 1990-91 was £48,061·79.

Bailiffs' Letters

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General how many complaints he has received about intimidatory bailiffs' letters; what action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I have not received any complaints about intimidatory bailiffs' letters. The Lord Chancellor has received some complaints about private bailiffs employed by local authorities to enforce liability orders for unpaid community charge.

The complaints concerned the intimidatory behaviour of some bailiffs and the lack of information about complaints procedures. These complaints were referred to the appropriate local authority.

Procedures for the execution of warrants by county court bailiffs are standardised. Any forms or notices which bailiffs need to send are produced centrally and are pre-printed. Care is taken to ensure that the wording of these is clear, precise and not intimidatory.

Forfeiture of Leases

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General if he will ask the Law Commission to look at the consequences of the Court of Appeal decision in the case of Billson v. Residential Appartments Ltd. in relation to claims for relief from forfeiture of leases.

The Attorney-General: The Law Commission is presently engaged in the preparation of a draft Bill to give effect to the recommendations for landlords' termination orders made in its report of 1985 (Law Com. No. 142 —H.C. 279) on the forfeiture of tenancies. I understand that the difficulties dealt with by the decision to which the hon. Gentleman refers were addressed by the recommendations, which the commission is now putting into draft legislative form.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General how much in costs was ordered to be paid against the Crown Prosecution Service in respect of charges against Reg Brealey and others on a charge of insider dealing; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The order made by His Honour Judge Sanders was that the Crown prosecution service should pay the whole of the defence costs post-committal in the case to which the hon. Member refers; and that, failing agreement between the parties as to the amount of such costs, they should be at liberty to apply to him for a determination. It is too soon to say whether agreement as to the amount of the costs will be possible. Moreover, the Director of Public Prosecutions has made application to the divisional court for judicial review of the order for costs.

NATIONAL FINANCE

National Insurance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average earnings for each year since 1979; and what percentage of that earnings was levied to pay national insurance.

Mr. Maude: Average weekly earnings are measured in April each year by the Department of Employment's new earnings survey. The figures since 1979 are given in column (a). The figures in column (b) show the percentage of all estimated income from employment and self employment paid in national insurance contributions. They should be regarded as indicating the trend in this percentage rather than as a meaningful measure of its level because the proportion of earned income which employees or self-employed persons may pay in national insurance contributions will vary according to individual circumstances.

Year	(a) £s	(b) percentage[1]
1979	86·2	8·7
1980	106·3	8·8
1981	119·8	9·3
1982	132·1	9·9
1983	144·5	10·5
1984	155·8	10·6
1985	167·4	10·6
1986	181·2	10·5
1987	194·9	10·5
1988	213·6	10·6
1989	234·3	9·7
1990	258·0	n/a

[1] Figures for 1988 and 1989 are calculated after netting off rebates of contributions and incentive payments made to personal pension schemes. The 1989 figure would otherwise have been 10·5.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amount of revenue was received from national insurance contributions (a) from employees and (b) employers for each of the years since 1979 at constant prices.

Mr. Maude: The information in real terms using GDP deflator at market prices, is as follows (£ million in 1985 prices).

Year	National Insurance contributions By employees	By employers
1979	11,481	7,580
1980	11,450	7,734
1981	11,045	8,655
1982	10,877	9,892
1983	11,654	11,023
1984	11,912	11,416
1985	12,245	11,683
1986	13,082	11,909
1987	13,678	12,360
1988	14,470	12,932
1989	14,402	11,973

Sickness

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage of days lost due to sickness in the civil service during 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Sickness absence information for the civil service is collected on a calendar year basis. The 1990 statistics are not yet available. In 1989 about 4 per cent. of days were lost due to sickness absence in the non-industrial civil service.

Civil Service (Contract Cleaners)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the relevant trade unions to discuss wages and conditions for contract cleaners in the civil service; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Contract cleaners are not civil servants. Their pay and conditions of service are for agreement with their particular employers. However, to ensure compliance with the requirements of Government contracts, contractors must ensure that they maintain the level of service specified in the contracts and other rates of pay and conditions of service sufficient to attract suitable staff to achieve these levels. Departments monitor the performance of contractors throughout the duration of contracts.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will arrange for publication, for each Government Department, of the total amount spent in 1990-91 on (a) management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases, (b) details of each contract awarded in that year, giving the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment and (c) the total amount budgeted to spend in 1991-92.

Mr. Mellor: Information on all Departments is not held centrally. For expenditure by Her Majesty's Treasury in the financial year 1990-91, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 4 June at column 142. These figures include the cost of development studies, which in turn include the cost of associated hardware and software; the latter items are not separately identifiable.

The Treasury's budgeted consultancy spend for financial year 1991-92 is £3,568,000.

Commercial Confidentiality

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from European banks on the subject of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Maples: None.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female prisoners were mentally ill during the latest year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Rumbold: Statistical records available for the six months 1 April 1990 to 30 September 1990 show that over that period 85 female prisoners were diagnosed as being mentally disordered and removed from prison; 43 of these were reported to be mentally ill.

On 30 September 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, 23 female prisoners were reported by prison medical officers to be mentally disordered as defined by the Mental Health Act 1983. Of these, 10 were reported to be mentally ill.

The Government encourage the diversion of mentally disordered offenders from the prison system whenever custody is not necessary in the public interest.

Human Rights

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a decision on Michael Thynne's case and the ruling of the European Court of Human Rights.

Mrs. Rumbold: When the House considers the House of Lords' amendments to the Criminal Justice Bill, we intend to bring forward proposals for new arrangements for deciding the release of discretionary life sentence prisoners, which will comply with the judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the cases of Mr. Thynne and others.

If these amendments are approved by Parliament and Mr. Thynne is still detained when they come into effect, his case will be considered in accordance with them. In the meantime, the case will be dealt with under the existing arrangements for considering the release of life sentence prisoners, and is due to be considered by the local review committee in February 1992.

Refugees

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent meeting he has had with the British Refugee Council concerning displaced Palestinians, Kurds, Shiite Iraqis, Indians, Pakistanis, Bangladeshis, Filipinos and Yemenis following the Gulf war.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None.

Police Records

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in relation to the envisaged police national network, whether all the major command and control or criminal information systems of each police force are to be linked to the network; whether the network will include the police national computer; whether there are plans for the network to facilitate transfers between police forces and their respective criminal intelligence databases; whether there are plans to utilise more efficiently the name based information from the DVLA in relation to criminal information databases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 15 May 1991 at column 185.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will place in the Library the report of the review committee exploring the wider use of police criminal records; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have arranged for a copy of the report of the efficiency scrutiny of the national collection of criminal records to be placed in the Library shortly. The report is now being considered in accordance with the procedures for efficiency scrutinies.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the organisations that have replied to his consultation exercise in relation to the proposal by the European Commission for a data Protection directive.

Mrs. Rumbold: The following organisations have responded to our consultation exercise:

The Advertising Association
American Express
The Association of British Chambers of Commerce
Association of British Insurers
The Association of British Travel Agents
Association of Chief Police Officers
The Association for Information Management (ASLIB)
Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on the reasons for the Government's opposition to the European Commission's proposals for a data protection directive in relation to (a) the distinction between personal data held in the public and private sector, (b) the supervision of the personal data held by security services, (c) the seeking of data subject consent and (d) the additional individual rights proposed in the directive; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: In large-scale, technically advanced societies both public and private sector organisations need to collect and computerise information about individuals in order effectively to discharge administrative and commercial functions in the public interest. The Government believe that data protection law should recognise this, and guard against damage to individual's interests through misuse of data rather than place unnecessary obstacles in the way of normal use.

The Government therefore see no justification for treating either public or private sector use of data as intrinsically less desirable; nor do they believe that a proper balance would be struck between data user and data subject by requiring, for example, automatic notification and consent procedures. More generally, they believe that, under the new approach to harmonisation, single market measures should be confined to minimum essential requirements; they note that the activities of the security services lie outside the treaty of Rome. The Government would be prepared to support data protection harmonisation measures based more closely on the existing Council of Europe convention for the protection of individuals with regard to automatic processing of personal data.

Royal Family

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces are involved in extra costs due to security needed at the homes of members of the royal family.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In England and Wales, there are royal palaces and residences in the Metropolitan police, Thames Valley police, Norfolk constabulary, Gloucestershire constabulary and Northamptonshire police force areas. Details of any operational policing costs are a matter for the chief officers concerned.

Prevention of Terrorism Act

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces are involved in extra costs due to Prevention of Terrorism Act controls at ports.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Port controls under the Prevention of Terrorism Act may apply to any person who has arrived in, or is seeking to leave, Great Britain or Northern Ireland by ship or aircraft. The level of policing, and its costs, are matters for the chief officer concerned.

Crime Witnesses

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the average delay before a witness of a crime views a witness album and its assessed effect on successful recognition.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that those witnesses to a crime who are called to view witness albums usually do so within seven days of the crime being committed. The interval will depend on several factors including the effect of the crime on the witness, the competence of the witness and the progress of the investigation. It is not possible to give a definitive assessment of the effect of any interval on successful recognition.

Knowsley Magistrates Courts

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of revenue and capital expenditure for magistrates courts in Knowsley for each court for each of the last five years and as budgeted for the current financial year.

Mr. John Patten: The information available centrally is given in the table. This relates to net expenditure eligible for specific grant by the Knowsley magistrates courts committee as a whole. An approved level of capital spending for 1991-92 has not yet been set.

	Net current expenditure £	Capital financing/ expenditure[1] £
1986-87	544,056	48,203
1987-88	581,826	44,396
1988-89	656,741	45,933
1989-90	673,745	47,512
1990-91	[2]821,000	85,720
1991-92	[3]871,039	—

[1] From 1986-87 to 1989-90: capital financing costs, ie debt redemption, interest charges and revenue contributions to capital outlay. For 1990-91: approved capital expenditure (the actual expenditure figure is not yet available) plus estimated loan charges on pre-April 1990 debt.
[2] Provisional outturn.
[3] Budget estimate at forecast outturn prices.

Immigration Information (Glasgow Airport)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to reopen the Home Office immigration public information desk at Glasgow airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The arrangements for the public inquiry office at Glasgow airport are under review. We hope to reach a decision shortly.

Young Offenders and Remand Prisoners

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what future arrangements are to be made for the accommodation of those young offenders and remand prisoners formerly held at Her Majesty's prison Pucklechurch and now located at Her Majesty's prison Gloucester and Her Majesty's prison Cardiff; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received about the availability of resources at Her Majesty's prison Gloucester and Her Majesty's prison Cardiff to hold young offenders and remand prisoners.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am aware that there are a number of difficulties involved in accommodating young offenders from the Avon area in Gloucester and Cardiff prisons. These are being addressed in consultation with the area manager concerned and taking into account the current review of the whole prison estate. The future of Pucklechurch is part of that review and we hope to announce the results shortly.

Isle of Man

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what help has been requested of the United Kingdom Government by the Isle of Man legislature or judiciary within the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [pursuant to his reply, 18 March 1991, c. 30]: The Isle of Man legislature or judiciary do not customarily request help from the United Kingdom Government. The Government do, however, regularly receive, and respond to, a wide range of requests from the Isle of Man Government for information, advice and services, in some instances under reciprocal arrangements between the United Kingdom and the island, including in relation to the formulation, scrutiny and operation of provisions of Isle of Man legislation and in relation to the island's system of civil and criminal justice. A central, chronological record of the number and exact nature of such requests is not kept.

ENERGY

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many complaints were received by or concerning the electricity share information office in relation to the privatisation of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales;

(2) what is the total number of complaints received on share allocations in the privatisation of (a) the regional electricity companies and (b) the generating companies of England and Wales by his Department and by the electricity share information office.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The records kept by the electricity share information office—SIO—were designed to enable telephoned or written inquiries of all types to be dealt with readily, rather than to enable one type subsequently to be distinguished from another on a statistical basis. It would entail disproportionate expense to conduct a precise analysis now. However, my Department estimates that the written complaints received following the share allocations were equivalent to about one in 5,000 of the number of applications received in both offers. Only a small percentage of these made any complaint about the SIO itself.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what was the total cost of operating the electricity share information office for the purpose of privatising (a) the distribution companies and (b) the generating companies of England and Wales;

(2) what was the total estimated cost of the electricity share information service in each of the past two financial years; and in what way its staff contracts will expire or be terminated.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The cost to Government of setting up and operating the electricity share information office in respect of the privatisation of the electricity industry in England and Wales was zero in 1989-90 and £12·8 million in 1990-91. It is not meaningful to apportion this between the offers for sale of the regional electricity companies and the generating companies since the principal facilities, including the initial register, were used for both flotations.

My Department contracted the project management of the office to Kleinwort Benson Limited, which was responsible for its day-to-day staffing and operation.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to receive the next report from Touche Ross on the detection of multiple share application fraud in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My officials are in regular contact with Touche Ross on the subject of multiple applications and fraud. I expect to receive a report from Touche Ross covering both electricity sales in England and Wales towards the end of this year.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has had from stockbrokers employed on the privatisation of the electricity supply industry concerning delayed payment of fees or commissions.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his question on 6 June. Since that reply four more stockbrokers have made inquiries.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had with the chairman of the 12 regional electricity companies and the two fossil-fuelled generating companies of England and Wales concerning the completion of payments of fees and commissions to stockbroking firms employed in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The companies have no locus in either the fees payable to the Government's stockbrokers or the commissions payable to stockbroking firms in respect of selling commissions.

Fast Reactors

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration he has given to the need for fast reactors as an integral part of reprocessing plutonium in obsolete nuclear weapons.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration he is giving to European co-operation in fast reactors in relation to design after the middle of 1993.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government will keep its position on the European fast reactor collaboration under review in the light of future developments.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will place his Department's proposals for decommissioning civil nuclear power stations in the Library.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department of Energy has no proposals for decommissioning civil nuclear power stations. Decommissioning is a matter for nuclear power station operators to consider within the guidelines on safety and environmental protection set by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will set out in convenient form the information he has on load factors of nuclear power stations in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the USA, (c) France, (d) Germany, (e) Japan and (f) Brazil.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The information requested is set out in the table. The data are taken from the April 1991 edition of the Journal Nuclear Engineering International.

Country	1990 average load factor	Lifetime load factor to end 1990
	Percentage	Percentage
United Kingdom	51·8	49·2
United States of America	64·6	59·4
France	62·9	62·3
Germany	68·4	71·9
Japan	71·2	67·9
Brazil	39·2	22·3

The load factor is defined as the ratio of electricity generated to potential generation if the plant in question operated continuously at its design capacity.

Comparisons of load factors between countries should be treated with caution. For a variety of reasons, they do not necessarily reflect the operating availability of reactors.

Photovoltaics

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he has to support a programme of development of photovoltaics as presented to his Department by Sir John Cadogan FRS.

Mr. Moynihan: On 8 May I announced that the Government are to fund a £250,000 programme of research into the use of solar power for electricity production. We believe that photovoltaics is a renewable technology which has considerable potential, particularly when incorporated into the fabric of a building, and it is towards this area that the Department's programme will be focused.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Egypt

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received any representations regarding the torture and imprisonment of three converts to Christianity in Egypt; and if he has made any recent representations to the Egyptian Government regarding them.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has received many representations expressing concern about the plight of the three Christian detainees in Egypt. He raised the matter with the then Egyptian Foreign Minister when they met in Cairo on 1 May.

START

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have been consulted by the Soviet and United States Governments regarding the use to which fissile material from warheads withdrawn under the strategic arms reductions talks will be put.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The provisions of the START agreement are a matter for the United States and Soviet Union.

Boat People

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what date, given current progress, he expects to complete the screening of those boat people currently living in detention centres in Hong Kong, including the appeals against screening decisions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The rate of screening depends on the rates of arrival and repatriation. Vietnamese migrants are currently screened approximately 24 months after their arrival in Hong Kong.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the conditions within detention centres and camps for boat people in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Wherever possible, United Nations High Commissioners for Refugees' recommendations for camp conditions in respect of food, nutrition and water standards have been adopted.

Although it has not yet been possible to meet in full United Nations High Commissioners for Refugees' recommendation on space standards and toilet provisions, the opening of a new detention facility at Tai a Chau will enable further improvements to be made. The possibility of further improvements will depend mainly on the flow of new arrivals and the rate at which non-refugees can be returned to Vietnam.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts regarding an international solution to the problem of the Vietnamese boat people.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the recent joint declaration of the European Community-Association of South-East Asian Nations ministerial meeting held in Luxembourg on 30-31 May 1991, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what accommodation is provided for families in detention centres in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Wherever possible, conditions within the 10 detention centres are in accordance with recommendations from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the reasons of those boat people who have refused voluntary repatriation from Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are many reasons why Vietnamese migrants have so far refused voluntary repatriation, but like many other non-refugees throughout the world it appears that the majority believe that they will ultimately be allowed to resettle in other countries. In the comprehensive plan of action, which was agreed to deal with this situation and which has recently been reconfirmed, it clearly states that all non-refugees must return to their country of origin.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many family groups with children are detained in camps in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The information is not readily available.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many boat people have died in detention centres in Hong Kong since they were established; and if he will give their ages and causes of death.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since the establishment of detention centres on 16 June 1988 there have been 78 deaths. The Hong Kong Government do not hold information on the ages and causes of death.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of boat people resident in detention centres in Hong Kong have taken the option of voluntary repatriation.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are currently fewer than 500 volunteers for repatriation in the camps in Hong Kong. This represents less than 1 per cent. of the current camp population.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many boat people are currently detained in camps in Hong Kong; and if he will give the numbers within the age groups (a) up to 12, (b) 12 to 21, (c) 21 to 40, (d) 40 to 60, and (e) 60 plus years old.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: On 5 June 1991 there were a total of 58,122 Vietnamese refugees and Vietnamese migrants in camps in Hong Kong.

Statistics are kept only on the ages of those determined to be non-refugees or who are awaiting screening. Of the 46,384 of these in camps on 2 May 1991, 2,030 were under one year old; 12,979 between one and 15; 29,149 between 16 and 39; 2,066 between 40 and 59; and 160, 60 and over.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to maintain contact with boat people repatriated to Vietnam from Hong Kong; and what information he has on their current condition in Vietnam.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, who is responsible for all post-return monitoring, recently reported that there have been no indications that any of the 8,500 returnees has suffered ill-treatment on return to Vietnam. This finding is corroborated by the British embassy in Hanoi which has its own limited monitoring programme.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of screening boat people giving figures for the numbers (a) screened, (b) granted refugee status, (c) denied refugee status, (d) who have appealed against the result of their screening, (e) of appeals that have been heard, and (f) of cases in which the appeal has decided in favour of the appellant.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: From the introduction of screening in Hong Kong on 16 June 1988 until 31 May 1991 a total of 24,299 boat people had been screened by the Hong Kong immigration department. Of these, 3,313 were granted and 20,986 denied refugee status. With only a very few exceptions, all appeal. Eighteen thousand, one hundred and twenty-two of these appeals have been heard, of which 2,538 were decided in favour of the appellant.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of orphaned children among the boat people detained in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No record is kept of the number of orphaned children in Hong Kong. All unaccompanied minors, whether or not orphans, are put in the care of a responsible adult while in Hong Kong.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provision is being made at the detention centres in Hong Kong for the provision of health care and education for detainees.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Wherever possible United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees' recommendations for camp conditions have been adopted. Food is provided in accordance with dietary scales drawn up by Hong Kong Government dieticians and UNHCR technical advisers. Babies are provided with special clothing and all children receive personal sanitation items, such as soap, towels and tooth brushes. Well baby clinics are run by voluntary agencies to monitor the health of babies under the age of five and all children and babies receive a free immunisation service.

Education programmes run by voluntary agencies co-ordinated by UNHCR provide for pre-school education for children between the ages of 6 and 12 and secondary education between the ages of 12 and 16. There is a library in each camp and educational videos are shown.

Vietnam

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has collected concerning conditions in Vietnam in the new economic zones and about the prevalance of religious persecution and the number of re-education camps.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We understand that the Vietnamese policy of moving people to under-populated areas from the over-populated river plains has caused some hardship, but we believe that this policy has now been superseded by voluntary population movement. We have no information on the number of re-education camps. According to the Vietnamese Government, people are not persecuted for their religious beliefs.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the attitude of the Vietnamese Government and penalties under the legal system for the offence of leaving Vietnam without official permission.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In the statement of 30 April 1991 of the fourth steering committee of the international conference on Indo-Chinese refugees, Vietnam confirms that, in accordance with accepted international understandings, no asylum-seeker who returns would face persecution and reaffirms its previously expressed undertaking to permit the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees full and unhindered access to returnees in the exercise of UNHCR's monitoring function. The steering committee itself noted with satisfaction that there have been no indications that any of the 8,500 returnees has suffered ill-treatment on return.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the number of people currently in prison for their political or religious beliefs in Vietnam.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: According to the Vietnamese Government, people are not imprisoned for their religious beliefs, but only when the practice of those beliefs results in their breaking the law or undermining national security. We have confirmation of four priests in re-education camps. The Vietnamese authorities claim that there are currently fewer than 130 prisoners in such camps who, it is generally acknowledged, have been imprisoned for their political beliefs. The total number of people in arbitrary detention in Vietnam is estimated to be at least 2,000.

Middle East (Humanitarian Aid)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish an updated chart showing, in United States dollars, the contributions made by each country, including the United Kingdom, to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the regional humanitarian plan of action for the middle east.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom has committed US $8,095,000 bilaterally since January to the office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees. During the period 15 January to 28 May we understand from UNHCR that it received pledges totalling US $148,066,561 as set out in the table.

Donor	US dollars

Fishing (South Atlantic)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that the krill fishery around South Georgia and the South Orkney islands be banned and that immediate conservation measures are introduced at the next meeting of the parties to the convention on the conservation of Antarctic marine living resources.

Mr. Garel-Jones: In successive meetings of the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources—CCAMLR—the United Kingdom has argued for precautionary limits on krill catches, although there is as yet no scientific evidence that krill stocks have been adversely affected by fishing. CCAMLR decisions are taken by consensus, and a precautionary limit has not to date been agreed. At the next meeting we shall again press strongly for such a limit.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conservation measures his Department is considering following the British Antarctic survey report on the fish and krill population around South Georgia.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Conservation of fish stocks around South Georgia, outside the 12-mile territorial limit, is the responsibility of the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources. At the next meeting, in October, the United Kingdom will press for strict conservation measures in light of the latest scientific evidence. Measures under consideration include a ban on fin-fishing and a precautionary limit on krill catches.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now ban fin-fishing around South Georgia to protect existing fish populations.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Conservation of fish stocks around South Georgia, outside the 12-mile territorial limit, is the responsibility of the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources. At the next meeting of the Commission the United Kingdom will base its recommendations on the scientific evidence available; a ban on fin-fishing around South Georgia in the coming year is under consideration.

Commercial Charging

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the value of the receipts from commercial charging for market information inquiries and overseas states reports.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Receipts for the services for the last two financial years totalled:

	1989-90 £	1990-91 £
Market Information Inquiry Service	50,113	216,404
Overseas Status Report Service	9,102	21,884

Note: Figures are exclusive of VAT.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received from his French counterpart following the proposed accession of France to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in regard to French participation in nuclear disarmament negotiations as stipulated under the treaty.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In a statement on 3 June on arms control and disarmament, the French Government announced that nuclear disarmament remained an essential objective for France, who supported the efforts of the two super powers to reduce their nuclear arsenals. France confirmed that it would take part in the process as soon as the conditions which it stipulated in 1983 had been met.

We have welcomed France's decision in principle to accede to the NPT. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs looks forward to discussing this and related issues when he next meets Mr. Dumas.

Mr. Ramesh Kumar

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will issue a visa to Mr. Ramesh Kumar to enable him to visit the hon. Member for Hendon, North, to one of whose constituents he is married, so that the hon. Member can represent him personally at his appeal against refusal of a permit to reside in this country; what precedents exist for denying an hon. Member access to foreign citizens; and on how many occasions and for what reasons such denials have occurred.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible on the question about the issue of a visa to Ramesh Kumar. Her Majesty's Government do nothing to deny an hon. Member the right to approach foreign citizens. However, for personal contact to be made in the United Kingdom the foreign citizen must meet the requirements of the immigration rules.

European Banking Transactions

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will order an internal inquiry into the monitoring of European banking transactions by Government Communications Headquarters.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No.

Saddam Hussein

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on bringing Saddam Hussein to justice for crimes against humanity.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister explained to my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell) on 7 May, Iraqi leaders bear personal responsibility under international law for their actions. This principle was reiterated in United Nations Security Council resolution 674. In the case of both the Geneva conventions of 1949 and the genocide convention of 1948, Iraqi leaders can, in law, be brought to national court or international tribunal. We and our EC partners have asked the United Nations Secretary-General to investigate how this might be achieved.

Kurdish People

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what effective protection the Kurds in the safe havens will receive after the allies withdraw from the areas in question.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are doing everything we can to ensure the persecution the Kurds have suffered at the hands of Saddam Hussein does not happen again. Considerable reassurance should be provided by the deployment of United Nations relief workers and field service personnel, who will monitor the security situation and report any abuses to the United Nations Secretary-General. We are discussing with our coalition partners what other arrangements might be put in place to deter Saddam Hussein from further aggression.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from representatives of the Kurdish community in northern Iraq over the withdrawal of allied forces from the areas of the safe havens.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are in regular contact with Kurdish leaders in northern Iraq and are monitoring closely developments arising from the agreement in principle reached between Kurdish leaders and the Iraqi Government in April.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conditions relating to the safety and security of the people involved are to be fulfilled before the allies leave the areas of the safe havens by the date announced, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have made it clear in our contacts with Kurdish leaders that allied forces cannot remain in northern Iraq indefinitely. No decisions have yet been reached on the timing of a final withdrawal; we and our coalition partners are doing everything we can to create the climate of security and reassurance necessary to ensure respect for the fundamental human and political rights of the Kurdish people.

Irish Banks (Security)

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Government of the Republic of Ireland on the subject of the commercial security of Irish banks.

Mr. Hurd: The Government are not aware of any such representations.

Expo 92

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will allow the Government of Gibraltar to have use of part of the British pavilion at the Expo 92 exhibition in Seville; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The British pavilion at Expo 92 will be designed to present a single, integrated theme. There will be no separate representation of United Kingdom counties, regions or dependent territories.

Mr. Paul Anderson and Mr. Nigel Comley

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken with regard to Mr. Paul Anderson and Mr. Nigel Comley's request to the British embassy in Addis Ababa to leave Ethiopia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Although the airport remains officially closed, the British embassy was able to arrange for Mr. Anderson and Mr. Comley to leave Addis Ababa for Nairobi in a private charter aircraft on 6 June 1991.

The Gulf

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when Her Majesty's Government first became aware of the participation of German-owned companies in the manufacture of poison gas and chemicals in Iraq; and when they became aware of the participation of German-owned companies in the extension of Scud missiles; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the issue of the participation of German-owned companies in the manufacture of poison gas and chemicals and the extension of Scud missiles was raised with representatives of the German authorities; and what response was received;

(3) what advice he has had from the German Government about the inquiries which they have made into the participation of German-owned companies in the manufacture of gas and chemical poisons and in the extension of Scud missiles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It is not our practice to reveal such information. Responsibility for enforcing German export control legislation rests with the German Government.

SCOTLAND

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the average hours worked weekly by junior doctors in Scottish hospitals since 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the actual number of hours worked by junior doctors is not available centrally. The average number of hours for which junior doctors were contracted was 85·5 in 1989 and 85·1 in 1990; these figures include time spent on call after normal hours as well as those spent working during the day.

The Government are committed to reducing junior doctors' hours of work to acceptable levels and a major package of guidance about the implementation of the "heads of agreement" which was reached with the profession last year is to be issued to health boards shortly.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and compouter consultancy contracts, excluding hardward and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Mr. Lang: Expenditure on management and computer consultancy contracts in the 1990-91 financial year was £1·375 million.

Contracts awarded were as follows:

Ernst and Young—Scottish Natural Heritage.
PIEDA—Historic Scotland, Appraisal Business Plans.
HEDRA—Historic Scotland, Information Systems Strategy.
Quality Consulting Services—Prison Workshops System, Quality Management System.
Marketing Initiatives Ltd.—Development and Delivery of Scottish Prison Service Strategic Management and Planning Initiative.
Coopers & Lybrand Deloitte—Organisation Review of Scottish Prison Service.
P-E International—Scottish Office Superannuation Division.

William Shaw—Sore Consultancy.
Ernst and Young—Information Systems Business Review.
Peat Marwick McLintock—Highlands and Islands Veterinary Service.

PIEDA—Aerial Surveillance Operations.
CCTA Systems Consultancy Service—Information Systems Strategy Study.
CCTA Systems Consultancy Service—Provision of advice and guidance on Information Systems Strategy Studies.
HEDRA Ltd.—Review of management approach to Information Technology.
PA Consulting Services Ltd.—Procurement Services on behalf of Scottish Criminal Record Office.
Tomlinson Associates—Evaluation of Land Resources Geographic Information Systems.
Taylor Woodrow Management and Engineering Ltd.—National Response Plan Exercise.
SIAS Ltd.—NESA Development (Economic Assessment of Trunk Road Scheme).
JMP Ltd./Dunsmore Data—Scottish Road Traffic Database.
CS Consultants—Personal Computer In-House Consultancy.
CS Consultants—Roads Financial Monitoring system.
MVA Ltd.—Route Evaluation by Vehicle Simulation.
Dunsmore Data—Development of Bridges Database.
The Scottish Vocational Educational Council—Programme for Analysis of Examination Results.
The Scottish Examinations Board—Programme for Analysis of Examination Results.
The Scottish Council for Educational Technology—Programme for Analysis of Categories of work.
The Scottish Council for Educational Technology—Development of Performance Indicator Analysis programme.
Micro-Electronics Educational Development Centre—Room Utilisation Programme development.

None of the contracts shown was awarded by executive agencies. As indicated, however, the second and third contracts shown related to Historic Scotland, which was established as an agency on 1 April 1991.

Vets

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of vets employed by the Scottish Office in each year since 1974.

Mr. Lang: Members of the state veterinary service are employed throughout Great Britain by MAFF. The 59 members of SVS staff in Scotland are responsible for giving veterinary advice to my Department.

Works of Art

Mr. Bill Walker : To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any works of art have been accepted in lieu of inheritance tax since he last made an announcement.

Mr. Lang: I am pleased to announce that the following work has been accepted in lieu of inheritance tax.

Item	Amount of Tax Satisfied
Portrait of Patrick Home, attributed to Sir Joshua Renolds	£20,000

The portrait has been allocated to the National Galleries of Scotland and is to be kept at Paxton house, Paxton, Berwickshire.

Protected Sites

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of (a) Coulport, (b) Glen Mallan, (c) Loch Goil, (d) Campbelltown, (e) Rothesay, (f) Loch Striven, (g) Loch Fyne, (h) Brodick, (i) Lamlash bay, (j) East Loch Tarbert, (k) Broadford, Portree, (l) Braewick bay, (m) Bressay sound, (n) Dales voe, (o) Loch Ewe and (p) Thurso bay are covered in whole or part by (a) sites of special scientific interest, (b) areas of outstanding natural beauty, (c) environmentally sensitive areas or (d) Ramsar sites.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1991]: There is no designation of land as "areas of outstanding natural beauty" in Scotland, but some of the places in question are part of national scenic areas identified by the Countryside Commission for Scotland. None of the locations forms part of an environmentally sensitive area or a site designated under the Ramsar convention on wetlands of international importance. Otherwise the information is as follows:

Area	Designation
	(a) Site of Special Scientific Interest	(b) National Scenic Area
Loch Fyne	•	—
Brodick	—	•
Broadford, Portree	•	—
Braewick Bay	•	•
Dales Voe	•	—
Loch Ewe	—	•
Thurso Bay	•	—

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express at constant prices, taking 1985 as a base, the capital allocation to Greater Glasgow health board in each year from 1985 to 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 June 1991]: The information requested expressed in constant prices, taking 1985 as base, is as follows:

	£ million
1985-86	24·288
1986-87	17·899
1987-88	17·958
1988-89	18·245
1989-90	22·759
1990-91	17·770

In addition, there are private and voluntary sector bodies which undertake capital development and with which health boards are free to negotiate partnership agreements for the provision of health care.

M80

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the line of route of the M80 to Haggs will be determined before 30 June 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 June 1991]: It is intended to present the proposals for the two schemes which constitute the M80 motorway between Stepps and Haggs to the regional and district councils and other affected parties later this year. Thereafter it is hoped that a draft order detailing the line of the route can be published early in 1992. The order will be made once the statutory procedures have been completed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Victoria Hospital

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received in opposition to the granting of trust status to the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: I have received many representations about the health and personal social services reforms. I have had no representations about the Royal group of hospitals' applications for trust status on which consultations have recently started.

Road Transport Licensing Scheme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the budgetary allocation to the road transport licensing scheme in each year since 1 April 1986.

Mr. Needham: Expenditure on road transport licensing in Northern Ireland in the financial years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 was £388,686, £405,362 and £448,123 respectively. Expenditure details for earlier years are not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost. The budgetary allocation for 1991-92 is £470,000.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hauliers are registered with the road transport licensing scheme.

Mr. Needham: The number of hauliers holding current road freight operators' licences in Northern Ireland was 1,515 at 31 May 1991.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many inspections in respect of the road transport licensing scheme have been carried out in each year since 1 April 1986.

Mr. Needham: The number of vehicles inspected by road transport licensing branch staff in each financial year from 1 April 1986 was:

	Number
1986-87	10,210
1987-88	13,875
1988-89	11,805
1989-90	13,615
1990-91	15,489

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many inspectors were employed in the road transport licensing scheme in each year from 1 April 1986; and how many are currently employed.

Mr. Needham: The average number of staff employed on road transport inspection duties in each financial year from 1 April 1986 was as follows:

	Average number
1986-87	8·6
1987-88	7·2
1988-89	7·2
1989-90	7·2
1990-91	7·5

The number currently employed is eight.

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response he has made to the report from the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights on religious and political discrimination and equality of opportunity in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: I am still considering the many detailed and complex recommendations of the report.

Political Talks

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the names of the possible candidates for the position of independent chairman of strand 2 of the Ulster talks who have been suggested by the Social Democratic and Labour party; and how many of these were rejected by (a) the Alliance party, (b) Her Majesty's Government, (c) the Government of the Republic of Ireland, (d) the Democratic Unionist party and (e) the Ulster Unionist party, respectively;

(2) if he will list the names of the possible candidates for the position of independent chairman of strand 2 of the Ulster talks who have been suggested by the Democratic Unionist party and have been rejected by (a) the Social Democratic and Labour party and (b) the Government of the Republic of Ireland;

(3) if he will list the names of the possible candidates for the position of independent chairman of strand 2 of the Ulster talks who have been suggested by the Alliance party of Northern Ireland; and how many of these were rejected by (a) Her Majesty's Government, (b) the Government of the Republic of Ireland, (c) the Social Democratic and Labour party, (d) the Democratic Unionist party and (e) the Ulster Unionist party, respectively;

(4) if he will list the names of the possible candidates for the position of independent chairman of strand 2 of the Ulster talks who have been suggested by the Ulster Unionist party and have been rejected by (a) the Social Democratic and Labour party and (b) the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Antrim, North (Rev. Ian Paisley) on 6 June 1991, Official Report, column 325.

Advance Factories

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what locations advance factories are presently being constructed.

Mr. Needham: Advance factories are currently being constructed at Glenn road, Belfast and Ballygomartin road, Belfast under the "Making Belfast Work" programme.

Fire Stations

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the criteria for changing a part-time fire station into a full-time station.

Mr. Needham: The criteria for changing a part-time fire station into a full-time station are those which form part of a review of fire cover in any particular brigade area. The following factors are taken into account in any such review:

risk category
attendance times response time travel time availability of retained personnel, and the number of fire calls

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 June 1991]: A total of 263 energy audits were carried out over the last five years in the Northern Ireland Government Office estate.

A statement of main conclusions for each audit could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 June 1991]: There is one dedicated energy manager in the NI energy conservation unit for the Northern Ireland Government Office estate. Three person-years were devoted to energy management in this estate by the unit in 1990-91.

There is no dedicated energy manager in the Northern Ireland Office in London.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The information requested for the years prior to 1986-87 is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The amount spent on new energy efficiency measures in the Northern Ireland Government Office estate from 1986-87 onwards is as follows:

	Cash terms £	1990-91 money terms £
1986-87	25,000	32,897
1987-88	72,000	91,539
1988-89	24,000	28,279
1989-90	25,000	27,250
1990-91	16,500	16,500

It is not possible to disaggregate costs for the Northern Ireland Office in London.

THE ARTS

Libraries

30. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister for the Arts what action he is taking to encourage the use of libraries especially by children and young people.

Mr. Renton: The aim of my public library development incentive scheme is to extend and improve public library service in England, and most award-winning projects promote their better use. Two projects have been directly concerned with children and young people.

"Kill the Messenger"

34. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will acquire a copy of "Kill the Messenger" by Sir Bernard Ingham for his office's library.

Mr. Renton: No.

Museum and Gallery Collections

35. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Minister for the Arts how he will encourage national museums and galleries to make their collections accessible to people across the whole United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: I am glad to say that national muesums and galleries already do a great deal to make their collections more accessible to people across the country by means of outstations and travelling exhibitions. I have asked all the national museums and galleries for which I am responsible to set out in their current corporate plans to further action they propose to make their collections more widely accesible.

London City Ballet

36. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he can yet announce measures to ensure the continuance of the London City Ballet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I fully set out my position, and that of the Arts Council, in this House on 3 May. Neither the Government nor the Arts Council can make a firm commitment of revenue support for London City Ballet at this time, but the Arts Council has agreed to use its best endeavours to help find a way of securing the company's future. The board of London City Ballet has now decided that the company should continue to operate at least until 1 April 1992. I welcome the news that the board has felt able to proceed in this way.

Industrial Heritage

37. Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will meet the chairman of the North West Regional Arts Council to discuss support for the preservation of industrial heritage.

Mr. Renton: Support for the preservation of the industrial heritage is a concern of the north west area museums service. I shall be meeting the chairman of the service on 13 June.

Welsh Arts Provision

38. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he next intends to meet the chair of the Welsh arts council to discuss arts provision in Wales.

39. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he next proposes to meet the chairman of the Welsh arts council to discuss its funding priorities.

Mr. Renton: I meet the chairman of the Welsh arts council from time to time for discussions on matters of mutual interest. I visited the Welsh arts council's offices and met the chairman and staff on 2 May and enjoyed a very useful meeting.

Merseyside Arts Funding

Mr. Parry: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will visit the Merseyside region to meet local authority leaders to discuss the state of arts funding in the area.

Mr. Renton: I will be visiting Liverpool on Tuesday, June 25 but I have no current plans to meet local authority leaders on that day.

Museum Documentation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received concerning the work of the Museum Documentation Association on future modes in relation to the Museum and Galleries Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I have received no such representations about the work of the Museum Documentation Association—MDA. However, I understand that the Museums and Galleries Commission has recently reviewed the work of the MDA and has substantially increased its allocation to the association over the last two years.

Museum Entry and Retrieval Systems

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to set common national and international standards for museums' entry and retrieval systems.

Mr. Renton: I have no plans at present to set up such standards; however I understand that the Museums Documentation Association will be launching a data standards scheme in conjunction with the Museums and Galleries Commission in due course.

PRIME MINISTER

International Tropical Timber Organisation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will transfer responsibility for the United Kingdom's membership of the International Tropical Timber Organisation from the Department of Trade and Industry to the Overseas Development Administration.

The Prime Minister: Responsibility was transferred to the Overseas Development Administration in October 1990.

National Union of Mineworkers' Funds

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 34, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on Her Majesty's Government's assistance to Price Waterhouse, sequestrators of the National Union of Mineworkers, what relavant information the Government passed to the sequestrators; and what was the provenance of this information.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my answer of 3 June to the hon. Member for Linlithgow. Information was provided to the sequestrators in confidence.

Cleeve Station

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Prime Minister which Minister in Her Majesty's Government has responsibility for the work of Cleeve station, and what is Cleeve's relationship to Government Communications Headquarters.

The Prime Minister: The station at Cleeve camp, Morwenstow is GCHQ's and, as such, comes under the ministerial responsibility of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

CIVIL SERVICE

Women Civil Servants

43. Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what percentage of women are now employed in grades 1 to 7 of the civil service.

Mr. Renton: On 1 April 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, 9·7 per cent. of staff in grades 1 to 7 were women. This compares with 4·5 per cent. in 1984 when the programme of action to achieve equality of opportunity for women was launched.

Civil Service College

47. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how many civil servants attended the Civil Service college in (a) 1979 and (b) the last available year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: About 9,000 civil servants attended the Civil Service college in 1979 whereas in the financial year 1990-91 the figure was approximately 17,600. I am pleased that over the last 11 years the number of college students has increased in this way.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Armaments Exports

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table indicating the value of exports from the United Kingdom of armaments or arms-related products, in each of the past five years.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information may be found in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990"—volume 2, Cm. 1022-II.

Flexible Manufacturing Technology Ltd.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate the involvement of Flexible Manufacturing Technology Ltd. in the possible supply of equipment to Iraq covered by an arms export embargo.

Mr. Sainsbury: Investigations of possible breaches of United Kingdom export controls are carried out by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. It has been the policy of this and successive Governments not to reveal details of such investigations.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has received a report from the Securities and Investments Board on the excercise of its functions under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: A copy of the board's report, made in accordance with section 117 of the Act, was laid before Parliament today. The report covers the period from 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1991. Copies are now available in the Library.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the latest situation regarding the general agreement on tariffs and trade negotiations with particular reference to the multi-fibre agreement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 5 June 1991]: Pending conclusion of the Uruguay round, participants met on 16 May to discuss an interim extension of the existing multi-fibre arrangement. No decision was reached and a further meeting is expected to take place later this month.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Research Councils

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, columns 315-18, how many staff in total were employed by each research council in 1990-91; how many managers eligible for management training were employed by each research council in 1990-91; and how many man-days or equivalent of (a) management training and (b) training overall was provided by each research council in 1990-91.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The details are as follows:

	Staff employed		Man-days of training
	Total	Managers[1]	Management	All
Agricultural and Food Research Council	4,250	2,569	[1]895	[2]2,092
Economic and Social Research Council	117	65	55	[3]722
Medical Research Council	3,300	[4]N/A	[4]N/A	[4]N/A
Natural Environment Research Council	2,880	2,000	1,600	5,400
Science and Engineering Research Council	2,615	1,788	1,584	5,230

Notes:
[1]Staff at or above Executive/Scientific Officer level or equivalent.
[2]Excludes training in grant-aided institutes which are not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.
[3]Includes 471 man-days of training on the new computer installation.
[4]Information is not collected centrally and could only be obtained from the MRC's 55 institutes at disproportionate cost.

Teachers

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he intends to take to make teacher training more relevant to the actuality of the classroom.

Mr. Fallon: The Secretary of State's criteria for the accreditation of initial teacher training courses have recently been revised to reflect more closely what is expected of beginning teachers, including the requirements of the Education Reform Act 1988. Institutions are now required, inter alia, to provide that:

(i) courses of less than four years should include at least 75 days, and four year courses at least 100 days, of teaching practice and other school experience, in more than one school;
(ii) experienced school teachers must contribute to course planning, student selection, lectures and seminars;
(iii) lecturers must periodically review their own school teaching experience which, by academic year 1992-93 has to be the equivalent of not less than one term in every five years;
(iv) no degree or other qualification attracting qualified teacher status should be awarded unless the student has demonstrated a satisfactory standard of practical classroom work;
(v) all courses should include training in the application of the students' subject specialisms to the teaching and assessment of pupils.

These criteria are to be further reviewed by the end of the year.

The Government have also introduced the articled teacher scheme, in which 80 per cent. of the training takes place in schools. The first cohort began their training in September 1990; a second cohort will start in September 1991 and the Government have recently announced funding for a third cohort. The licensed teacher scheme, which has also been introduced recently, allows suitably qualified candidates to be employed by local education authorities as classroom teachers and receive on the job training. The Government are evaluating both these schemes since we believe that as much of initial training as possible should take place in the school.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers are now in post; and how many were in post 12 months ago.

Mr. Fallon: Provisional figures for January 1991 show that there were 393,720 full-time equivalent teachers in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools sector in England. In January 1990 there were 398,542.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average qualification of entrants into teacher training.

Mr. Fallon: The most recent information available about the qualifications of entrants to initial teacher training is shown in the tables.

Table 1
Mean A Level Scores of entrants to undergraduate courses of Initial Teacher Training in England 1989

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of total education spending is spent on teacher pay and training.

Mr. Eggar: In 1988-89, the latest year for which information on actual spending is available, some 36 per cent. of total education spending was spent on teacher pay and training. This includes expenditure on school teachers' salaries, employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions, and in-service training for school teachers supported by the LEA training grants scheme —LEATGS. LEAs may also provide for in-service training additional to that supported by the LEATGS, but this information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science by how much teacher pay has increased for each of the past five years.

Mr. Eggar: School teachers' pay settlements since March 1986 are as follows:

Date of increase	Percentage
31 March 1986	1·6
1 April 1986	5·7
1 January 1987 / 1 October 1987	16·4
1 April 1988	4·73
1 April 1989	6·3
1 April 1990 / 1 January 1991	9·3

Subject to parliamentary approval, the 1991-92 settlement will be worth 11·3 per cent. in a full year.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers took early retirement in each of the past three years; and if he will give the figure expressed as a percentage of the total teacher force for each of these years.

Mr. Fallon: The number of teachers who took early retirement—that is retired between age 50 and 59—in each of the past three years is shown in the table. The numbers of retirements relate to teachers in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools sector. The numbers are also expressed as a percentage of the full-time teacher force in those establishments at 1 January in each year.

Financial year	Premature retirements	Percentage of teacher force
1988-89	7,875	1·9
1989-90	8,427	2·1
1990-91	9,710	2.4

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers left the profession in each of the past three years for employment outside teaching; and what that was expressed as a pecentage of the total teacher force.

Mr. Fallon: The table shows estimates of the number of full-time teachers who resigned from maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England and Wales in each calendar year from 1987 to 1989 to take up non-educational employment, together with the proportion they represented of the full-time teaching force.

Full-time teachers resigning to take up jobs outside teaching

	Number	Percentage of all full-time teachers
1987	2,560	0·7
1988	3,320	0·9
1989	3,280	0·9

Pupil-teacher Ratio

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the current pupil-teacher ratio in England.

Mr. Fallon: In 1990-91 the overall pupil-teacher ratio in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England is provisionally estimated to have been 17·25 pupils per teacher.

Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what formal reply his Department has made to the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals in respect of their request for additional funds for pay and compensation for the recent increase in value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend has made clear to the CVCP that it is for the committee and institutions as employers to reach a pay settlement within the aggregate resources at their disposal; and that, against the background of an increase in public funding for universities in 1991-92 of 10 per cent. for the second year running, the Government are unable to provide any further sums for extra VAT costs not recoverable through higher output charges.

Welsh Plant Breeding Station

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to give financial aid to the Welsh plant breeding station, Gogerddan, Aberystwyth, during the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The funding of new facilities at the Welsh plant breeding station are as detailed in my reply to the hon. Member on 12 March 1991, Official Report, column 449-50.

In addition the station, which is part of the Agricultural and Food Research Council's institute of grassland and environmental research, will continue to receive support from the AFRC science budget funds, currently estimated at approximately £2·5 million a year.

Kettleshume Primary School

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will meet the chief education officer of Cheshire county council to discuss the financial implications of the decision to close the Kettleshume Church of England primary school.

Mr. Atkins: Cheshire county council has not yet published section 12 proposals to close Kettleshume primary school. When proposals are published, the authority will be required to provide information about financial implications of closing the school. I would therefore not expect a meeting with the chief education officer to be necessary.

Early Leavers

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is for each year since 1974 the number of students in (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) higher education who left their respective schools and universities before completion of their studies; and what are the percentages for males and females in each case.

Mr. Fallon: Information for school pupils is not collected centrally.

Statistics on university students who had successfully completed full-time or sandwich first degree courses are contained in "University Management Statistics and Performance Indicators in the UK", published by the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Universities Funding Council. A copy of the 1990 edition has been placed in the House Library.

A-levels

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the numbers taking A-level examinations in (a) physics, (b) chemistry and (c) mathematics for each year from 1980.

Mr. Eggar: The total numbers of school leavers attempting A-level examinations in the subjects in question, were as follows. 1988-89 is the latest year for which information is available.

Numbers of School Leavers attempting A-level/AS (Thousands)

	Physics	Chemistry	Maths	All leavers
1979-80	35·84	31·74	48·08	750·73

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the level of parental contributions to the fees of pupils in the assisted places scheme in the next academic year.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Remission of tuition fees under the assisted places scheme is dependent on the level of fees at participating schools and the amount parents can afford to contribute. Subject to parliamentary approval, the parental contribution scales will be adjusted upwards for the school year 1991-92 as set out in the table. Where the relevant income for the appropriate financial year does not exceed £8,715 the tuition fees will be wholly remitted.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Famine Relief

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department is giving to relieve famine in Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We have committed over £230 million, including our share of EC actions, in emergency assistance to Africa since the beginning of 1989. Of this, over £110 million has been in response to the present food crisis in the six worst affected countries—Sudan, Ethiopia, Somalia, Mozambique, Angola and Liberia. These amounts include the two new pledges, together worth £53 million, which I made on 15 April and 20 May respectively.

I have allocated the £53 million as follows:

(i) £20 million for food aid and delivery costs apportioned as follows:
- 27,500 tonnes to Sudan
- 27,000 tonnes to Ethiopia
- 8,000 tonnes to Somalia
- 7,500 tonnes to Mozambique
- £1 million for cereals and supplementary food for Angola.

(ii) £12 million via British non-governmental organisations—NGOs—for emergency relief work in the Horn.

(iii) £12 million to United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for famine and refugee assistance allocated as follows:

£5 million for assistance in Africa
£3 million for the Horn
£3 million for Mozambican refugees in Malawi
£1 million for the Ogaden.

(iv) £3 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross for humanitarian assistance in Africa particularly in Somalia and Sudan.

(v) £3 million to NGOs for relief activities in Mozambique and Angola.

(vi) £2 million to UNICEF and United Nations agencies for activities in the Horn.

(vii) £1 million to United Nations agencies for activities in Liberia.

I have placed further details of these commitments in the Library of the House.

The allocations for the Horn are made on the assumption that the security situation allows us to deliver humanitarian assistance effectively. At present, the situation in Ethiopia and Somali is uncertain. We shall monitor events carefully and adjust the allocations where necessary.

Ethiopia

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what aid Her Majesty's Government will be giving to the Ethiopian Government; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what aid Her Majesty's Government have given to aid agencies with respect to the situation in Ethiopia in 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1991 we have so far provided £22·6 million in bilateral humanitarian assistance to Ethiopia. I expect to provide more during the course of this year. Our aid is channelled through mutilateral and British voluntary agencies.

In the financial year 1990-91, we provided £3·3 million in bilateral development assistance to the Ethiopian Government. I am prepared to provide a broadly similar amount in 1991-92, provided conditions allow. In addition, in 1990-91, we channelled £350,000 through British voluntary agencies under the ODA's joint funding scheme for ongoing projects.

Disaster Relief

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Overseas Development Administration to complete its study of the options for setting up a rapid deployment force for responding to disasters.

Mrs. Chalker: The ODA's review of its arrangements for managing and delivering emergency relief for disasters overseas is expected to be completed soon.

Colonial Service Pensions

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will carry out a review of the financial circumstances of United Kingdom citizens in receipt of pensions from public service for former colonial administrations with a view to providing financial enhancement in cases where depreciation of the currency in which the pension is paid has resulted in a significant fall of its value in pounds sterling.

Mrs. Chalker: No. Successive Governments have taken the view that they cannot protect the position of all those who were employed in the public services of our former colonies. Such protection is confined to those for whom the British Government acknowledge a special responsibility by virtue of their having been recruited by, or on behalf of, the Secretary of State for the Colonies for employment on expatriate terms in the central government of a colony.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from United Kingdom citizens in receipt of public service pensions from former colonial administrations regarding the current value of their pensions.

Mrs. Chalker: We regularly receive requests from pensioners who wish to be included in our overseas pension protection arrangements.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate how much it would cost to take over the payment of overseas pensions paid to Rhodesian and Zimbabwean pensioners under the terms of the Overseas Pensions Act 1973; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: It is not possible to estimate the cost because we hold no information about Zimbabwe public service pensioners, who were all locally appointed.

Cambodia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the United Nations Development Programme office in Cambodia is open; what is UNDP's budget for Cambodia; whether any aid has yet been spent or committed; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: There is no formal UNDP resident representative in Cambodia. An informal liaison office is however undertaking preparatory work in anticipation of a political settlement which would enable UNDP to support operations there. An allocation of $41·3 million has been made for Cambodia for the period 1992-96, but all funds remain frozen at present with no aid spent or committed.

EC Food Aid

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what type of food the EC's 400,000 tonnes of aid, decided on in April, will consist of; and what is the value of the food in ecu and pounds sterling, respectively.

Mrs. Chalker: Food provided under the Community's special programme for Africa will consist mainly of cereals and grain such as wheat or wheatflour, maize, rice and sorghum.. The programme will also include quantities of vegetable oil, pulses and sugar. The cost of the 400,000 tonnes programme is estimated at 140 million ecu—about £97·5 million.

Africa Famine Relief

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has received any requests from Governments in Africa, or aid agencies, or the EC, for military assistance in distributing famine relief in Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We receive occasional suggestions for the RAF to help in distributing famine relief. We consider each request as appropriate, bearing in mind the need to make the most cost effective use of resources in responding to specific needs.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings, Scotland

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the (a) total number, (b) percentage of (i) female part-time workers, (ii) male part-time workers, (iii) female full-time workers, (iv) male full-time workers, (v) all full-time workers, (vi) all part-time workers, and (vii) all workers in (1) Scotland, (2) Great Britain and (3) each Scottish region with hourly earnings of less than £3·40.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the numbers of people who were receiving the enterprise allowance in London in each of the former Training Agency's area offices in each quarter since April 1987.

Mr. Forth: The former Training Agency area office breakdown of people receiving the allowance in London is shown for each quarter of each financial year in the table. Because of changes in scheme administration, it is not possible to provide a consistent table for the whole period.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment for each region and for Great Britain as a whole, what was the number of people who were receiving the enterprise allowance in each quarter since April 1987.

Mr. Forth: The regional breakdown of people receiving the allowance is shown for each quarter in the table. Because of changes in scheme administration, separate data for London and the south-east are not available for financial year 1988-89.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the amount of expenditure on the enterprise allowance scheme in London in each of the former Training Agency's area offices for each year since 1985.

Mr. Forth: The former Training Agency area office breakdown of expenditure on the allowance in London is shown for financial years 1989-90 and 1990-91 in the table. Because of changes in scheme administration, information for earlier years is not kept in the form required and could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the budgets allocated for each London training and enterprise council, or for the areas to be included in future training and enterprise councils, for the enterprise allowance scheme in 1991-92; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Budgets for 1991-92 have been allocated by funding block rather than individual scheme. EAS forms part of funding block 3. The allocated block 3 budgets for training and enterprise councils—TECs—in the London region, including those not yet operational, are given in the table. TECs will have greater freedom and flexibility to adapt EAS to meet the needs of the local economy and to improve survival rates.

Steelworkers (Respiratory Disease)

Mr. Crowther: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) when the Health and Safety Executive last carried out any research on non-malignant respiratory disease among steelworkers;

(2) if he will ask the Health and Safety Executive to carry out further research on non-malignant respiratory disease among steelworkers.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive has recently undertaken a review of research on chronic non-malignant respiratory disease in ferrous metal manufacturing and production workers, including the steel industry and has also commissioned a wider ranging review of the health effects of airborne substances in the ferrous foundry industry. The results are expected to be available early next year.

In addition, the HSE continues to monitor closely other relevant research programmes including current proposals for research on health issues among steelworkers in Britain submitted to the European Coal and Steel Community.

Hotels and Guest Houses

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment his Department has carried out on the effect of the VAT changes introduced in the recent Budget on small privately-owned hotels and guest houses.

Mr. Forth: My Department has made no such assessment.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many small hotels and guest houses have deregistered since 1 April 1990.

Mr. Forth: In the period from 1 April 1991 to 31 May 1991, there were 693 applications to deregister from hotels and residential establishments on the ground that anticipated turnover was below the value added tax threshold.

Health and Safety Inspectors

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what initiatives he proposes to engage more health and safety inspectors in Wales.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 6 June 1991]: The Health and Safety Executive has undertaken recruitment to increase the number of inspectors. This will allow a further five inspectors to be allocated to work in Wales. No difficulty in recruitment has been experienced. No special initiatives are necessary.

Tourism

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he will take to encourage the growth of employment in the tourism industry in Yorkshire.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 7 June 1991]: In 1989 there were 127,800 people employed in the tourism industry in the Yorkshire and Humberside region, 24 per cent. more than in 1984. The Government will encourage further employment growth by reducing inflation, continuing our financial support for tourism and promoting enterprise and training through the network of training and enterprise councils now established in the region. The industry must also play its part by negotiating realistic pay settlements.

HEALTH

Northumberland Area Services

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the current waiting list for each specialty in Northumberland health authority and the number of people who have waited (a) for over one year and (b) for over two years in each specialty.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest information available, at September 1990, is given in the table. This information is on a "provider" bases, and does not relate to the district's resident population. In the year to March 1990 the number of in-patients treated has increased by 2 per cent. and since 1979 in the order of 16 per cent.

District Health Authorities (Waiting Times)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which district health authorities have the longest average waiting time for the specialties which cover (a) hip replacement operations, (b) cataract corrections and (c) hernia operations.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest available information, at September 1990, for those waiting for in-patient treatment, is given in the tables. The tables have been compiled on the basis of the percentage of patients waiting more than one year which is the generally accepted measure of waiting time. Direct comparisons between specialties at district health authority level can be misleading because there are considerable variations of case mix within different hospitals.

Medical Records

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long it takes to transfer medical records from one general practice to another in each of the regions within his jurisdiction.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not available centrally.

Health Benefits Scheme

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total value of help given under the health benefits low income scheme per annum for the last three years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. Under the scheme people receiving income support or family credit and their dependants are automatically exempt from NHS charges. Other claimants who are entitled to help towards the cost of meeting NHS charges are issued with a certificate authorising either full or partial exemption from any charges which they may incur. There is no limit on the number of occasions upon which a certificate may be used during the six-month period of its validity.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations he is formally consulting on his review of the health benefits low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The review will look in detail at the way in which the NHS low income scheme is currently administered. The report recently published by the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux—NACAB—is therefore particularly relevant to the review. Officials will be discussing with NACAB the matters that it has raised and its recommendations. There are no plans to consult formally with organisations other than NACAB, but any representations that are received will be considered as the review is taken forward.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the value of each claim under the health benefits low income scheme is taken up with administrative charges.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is not available.

During 1990-91, a total of 1,017,739 claims for help under the National Health Service low income scheme were received by the health benefits unit at Newcastle and 957,886 certificates of full or partial exemption were issued. The average cost of processing each claim was £7·65.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to publicise the existence of the health benefits low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The National Health Service (General Ophthalmic Services) Regulations 1986 require opticians to display prominently a notice showing possible entitlement to vouchers under the low income scheme. Dentists are required by their terms of service set out in the National Health Service (General Dental Services) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1990 to display prominently a notice, indicating National Health Service charges which are payable under general dental services and entitlement to exemption from and remission of National Health Service charges.

In addition to these obligatory requirements, posters promoting the low income scheme are available for display at citizens advice bureaux, general practitioners' surgeries, pharmacies and in hospital out-patient departments. Claim forms and explanatory leaflets are also readily available from these and a number of other outlets, including welfare rights organisations and local offices of the Social Security Benefits Agency. The adequacy of existing forms and leaflets and their provision in languages other than English will be considered as part of the review of the National Health Service low income scheme.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each NHS trust the number of executive directors and chief executives receiving remuneration of over £40,000 in bands of £5,000.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The salaries of the chief executive and other executive directors of NHS trusts are a matter for the trust board. This information is not available centrally.

Occupational Therapy

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ring-fence the occupational therapy funding being devolved to regions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Regional health authorities have been told that the moneys devolved to them for occupational therapy training are to be earmarked for that purpose until 1995-96.

Condoms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the risks to users of condoms made from natural rubber latex subject to radiation processing by RVNRL vulcanisation technology; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department has no evidence of risks to users of condoms which have been vulcanised by an irradiation process. The process is understood to be used in the far east for some rubber latex products, mainly gloves. The major suppliers of condoms to the United Kingdom market employ other methods of vulcanisation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Electoral Registration

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are registered to vote in England and Wales.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

The electoral register which came into use on 16 February 1991 contained 38,478,502 people qualified to vote in local government elections in England and Wales and 38,509,382 people qualified to vote in parliamentary elections.

HIV

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the terms of the settlement of the litigation by those people who contracted HIV through infected blood products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I welcome the announcement today in court of the conclusion of this litigation and the acceptance of the terms of a settlement by the overwhelming majority of those in England and Wales who were pursuing action.

Under the terms of the settlement the payments to be made are:

	£ each
To each individual who is an infected haemophiliac:
Infant (person under 18 years old)	21,500
Single adult	23,500
Married adult without dependent children	32,000
Haemophiliac with dependent children	60,500
Infected intimates of HIV infected haemophiliac:
(a) adults or married infants	23,500
(b) unmarried infants	21,500
Category G plaintiffs (ie those litigants who have not sero-converted and/or been infected with HIV to their knowledge, but are at risk of doing so because they are the intimates of haemophiliacs who have sero-converted and/or been infected with HIV or developed AIDS).	2,000

The payment amounts are those put forward by the steering committee of solicitors representing the HIV-infected haemophiliacs and their counsel, and agreed by the Government.

The Macfarlane (Special Payments) (No. 2) Trust which was set up on 3 May has already begun to make the payments. A similar offer has been made to settle the separate litigation in Scotland and Northern Ireland. The payments will also be available to HIV infected haemophiliacs and infected intimates who had not joined litigation against any Department and who undertake not to do so in future.

While maintaining its denial of any negligence, the Government have provided £42 million to cover the cost of the payments. This is in addition to the £24 million made available in 1990 to provide a sum of £20,000 for each HIV-infected haemophiliac. We are also committed to ensuring that the original Macfarlane Trust set up in March 1988 with a Government grant of £10 million will continue to be able to give additional help where there is special need. These payments are in recognition of the very special and tragic circumstances of the haemophiliacs infected by HIV and provide a substantial measure of financial security for them and their families.

Furthermore, the Government remain committed to taking all reasonable steps to ensure that appropriate services and treatments are available to the haemophiliacs, their partners and all others infected with HIV to try to alleviate and delay the effects of this infection. We continue to contribute to the research effort both here and worldwide, primarily to find a vaccine against HIV infection and a cure for the disease itself. We also continue to give substantial ring-fenced funds, amounting to almost £150 million in the current year, to the NHS and other organisations as the Government's contribution towards the cost of preventing the further spread of HIV and of providing appropriate diagnostic, treatment, care and support services.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 16 May, Official Report, column 250, if he will publish (a) the number of deliveries on which his figures were based and (b) the total number of women who delivered in England during the financial year 1989-90.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The estimates quoted in the Official Report of 16 May were based on detailed returns in respect of some 360,000 deliveries. In the same financial year—1989-90—there were 650,804 live births and 3,067 stillbirths in England, a total of 653,871 deliveries.

Special Diets

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many prescriptions for special diets were issued by general practitioners in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) in what circumstances general practitioners are able to issue national health service prescriptions for special diets; what restrictions there are on the foods available on prescription; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is not the function of the NHS to provide food products on prescription. We recognise that in some cases GPs may consider their active intervention is needed to help patients keep to medically recommended diets. GPs may therefore prescribe from a range of food products recommended by the Advisory Committee on Borderline Substances.

GPs are also free to prescribe other nutritional products, including vitamins and minerals, wherever necessary for their patients' treatment.

Products which the Advisory Committee on Borderline Substances considers have no therapeutic use in the treatment of disease in the community are added to schedule 3A to the National Health Service (General Medical and Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 1974, so that they cannot be prescribed by GPs at NHS expense.

Although the Department's prescribing statistics include the estimated number of prescriptions for nutritional products, many of these products have several uses and it is therefore not possible to identify those which are used in "special diets". In addition, a large number of these products are prescribed so infrequently that the statistics are not a reliable measure of the number of prescriptions issued.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to challenge EC competence with regard to tobacco advertising; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have not yet received the revised draft of the EC directive on tobacco advertising. When I do so I will give it careful consideration.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in the Privy Council Office in the past five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions;

(2) if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in the Privy Council Office and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year;

(3) if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of the Privy Council Office in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms;

(4) if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the Privy Council Office, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The position of the Privy Council Office remains as indicated in answers given by my predecessor on 5 June 1990, Official Report, column 459, 14 June 1990, Official Report column 299, and 25 June 1990, Official Report, column 54. The costs passed on to the Department in 1990-91 were £11,669 for electricity—representing approximately 203,000 units—and £2,352 for gas. No costs were incurred in respect of liquid or solid fuels. The remaining information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Disabled People

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) if he has any plans to review the car parking facilities available for disabled people who (a) work within or (b) visit the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many parking spaces are available in the precincts of the Palace of Westminster the use of disabled Members of Parliament and where these are located; and if he will make a statement.

(3) if he has any plans to review the facilities available for car-parking in the Palace of Westminster for Members of Parliament who are disabled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: There are 12 parking spaces in Star Chamber Court and three parking spaces in the inner courtyard of Norman Shaw North reserved for the use of vehicles driven by or used by photo-identity pass holders who are disabled. At present, eight hon. Members, four Members' secretaries and nine staff of the House have been authorised by the Serjeant at Arms to use these spaces on a first-come first-served basis. In addition, authority for their use is given from time to time to disabled visitors and to photo-identity pass holders suffering from a temporary period of incapacity. The arrangements for disabled parking in the precincts of the Palace of Westminster are kept under continuous review by the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee. They were reviewed and confirmed by the Sub-Committee in January 1988 as a result of a survey carried out into the use of the spaces for the disabled in Star Chamber Court. In March 1990 the Sub-Committee gave approval for an additional parking bay for disabled drivers to be set aside outside Norman Shaw North bringing the total in that area to three and the Sub-Committee agreed in March this year that these three bays should be transferred to the inner courtyard of Norman Shaw North.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to review access for disabled people to the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 3 June 1991, (Official Report, column 16). In addition to improvements recently agreed by the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee, it is proposed that a comprehensive study should be carried out to identify practicable and acceptable proposals for access by disabled and elderly people which marry the need for better facilities within the constraints imposed by the historic nature of the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) when he next plans to meet representatives of the police to discuss the misuse of car parking spaces in the Palace of Westminster which are specifically designated for exclusive use by orange badge holders; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what action he proposes to take against hon. and right hon. Members who misuse car parking spaces in the precincts of the Palace of Westminster which are designated for the exclusive use of orange badge holders; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many complaints he has received regarding the alleged misuse or abuse of parking spaces in the Palace of Westminster designated for the use of disabled Members of Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I have received no complaints of misuse or abuse of the spaces reserved for disabled people —they are not specifically set aside for orange badge holders. However, I have asked the authorities of the House to remind others who park their cars in Star Chamber Court not to use the spaces reserved for disabled people. I would welcome the co-operation of all right hon. and hon. Members in observing the recommendation of the Services Committee that the 12 marked spaces in Star Chamber Court and three marked spaces in the inner courtyard of Norman Shaw North should be for the exclusive use of disabled drivers.

Charles Stewart Parnell (Statue)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Lord President of the Council, further to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 357, what further discussions he has held about moving the statue of Charles Stewart Parnell to a more appropriate location on the Committee floor.

Mr. MacGregor: I understand that the proposal will be on the agenda for the next meeting of the Advisory Committee on Works of Art in the House of Commons on 17 July.

WALES

Inward Investment

13. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest level of inward investment to Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The record levels of inward investment continue. Since 1 January Wales has secured 60 more projects, promising 7,196 new or safeguarded jobs and capital investment of over £342 million. From 21 June I shall be visiting the United States and Canada with Dr. Gwyn Jones, the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency, to secure further investment for Wales.

Seven-year olds (Assessment)

14. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will report progress with the assessment of seven-year-olds in Welsh schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: All primary schools in Wales have now concluded their assessments of seven-year-olds and reports will be made to parents by the end of the summer term.

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consider abolishing the assessment of seven-year-olds in schools in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Assessment forms an integral part of the national curriculum. The Government remain committed to the statutory assessment for seven, 11, 14 and 16-year-old pupils. The arrangements for testing seven-year-olds next year will be reviewed in light of the evaluation of this year's exercise currently being undertaken by the School Examinations and Assessment Council.

Welsh Language Board

15. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the chairman of the Welsh Language Board; and if he will make a statement on the future of the board and its responsibilities.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend and I last met the chairman of the Welsh Language Board on 23 May. Consultations on the proposals put forward by the board are currently taking place within Government. We will announce our response to these as soon as possible.

Agriculture (Incentive Schemes)

16. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the setting up of incentive schemes for young people setting up in agriculture.

Mr. David Hunt: Over the past year I have received a number of representations from farming unions and others about incentives for young people to enter the industry.

Welsh Language

17. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to ensure that there will be an adequate supply of Welsh language teachers to meet the needs for the national curriculum.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The requirements of the national curriculum including those in relation to Welsh, are being taken fully into account in setting the intakes to initial teacher training, in the revision of criteria for initial teacher training courses, devising recruitment policies and in the planning of the grants for education support and training programme.

Hospital Services

18. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met chairmen of health authorities in Wales to discuss the standard and range of hospital services.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met health authority chairmen on 31 January. I have met every health authority chairman since 1 January this year during my frequent visits to NHS establishments throughout Wales.

Family Farms

19. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to safeguard the future of family farms in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I recognise the importance of family farms within the structure of agriculture in Wales and their significance in social terms. I will continue to seek to ensure that those farms, along with others, are able to compete effectively and on equal terms within the single European market.

Area Health Authorities

20. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he intends to meet the chairmen of area health authorities in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: A date for the next meeting between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and DHA chairmen has yet to be finalised.

Hospitals, Monmouth

21. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Monmouth to establish the effect of Government policy on local hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend and I have recently made a number of visits to the Monmouth area and I visited Nevill Hall hospital on 15 May 1991. I shall be making a further visit to health service establishments in Gwent in July.

Education

22. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met Welsh county councils to discuss education provision in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I meet with Welsh local authorities from time to time to discuss a wide range of issues including, of course, provision for the education service.

25. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to take to improve further and higher education in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The measures that we propose to take to improve further and higher education in Wales are contained in the White Papers "Education and Training for the 21st Century" and "Higher Education—A New Framework", published on 20 May. Our objective is to encourage young people to maximise their potential through increased participation in further and higher education and training. The reforms that we have announced will make it easier for this objective to be met.

26. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to implement the proposals relevant to his Department's function in the recent education White Paper; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The proposals in the White Papers will require new legislation. This will be introduced as soon as parliamentary time permits.

Roads Programme

23. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has made any recent additions to the Welsh roads programme; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 14 May.

Rail Services

24. Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next proposes to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss rail services in the principality.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has regular meetings with the chairman of British Rail to discuss a range of issues. They hope to meet again soon.

Forestry

27. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he evaluates environmental considerations in the development of forestry policy in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government's forestry policy fully recognises the environmental benefits that forests can provide if planned and managed in a sensitive way.

Since 1985 the Forestry Commissioners have had a statutory duty to endeavour to achieve a reasonable balance between the needs of forestry and those of the environment in carrying out their functions. We have introduced a number of other measures to ensure that environmental factors are taken into account in forestry developments. For example, under the Environmental Assessment (Afforestation) Regulations 1988, the Forestry Commissioners may require applicants for grant to draw up an environmental statement if they consider that new planting proposals are likely to have a significant effect on the environment. The Commission's woodland grant scheme is also designed to ensure that planting schemes meet high standards which are in sympathy with the landscape and meet relevant environmental considerations, as set out in guidelines published by the commission. Those policies are subject to regular monitoring and evaluation.

NHS Trusts

28. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next intends to meet the chairmen of district health authorities to discuss NHS trusts in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend and I discussed NHS trusts with the chairmen when we last met them on 31 January. A date for the next meeting has not yet been arranged.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications he has received to date from hospitals in Wales for national health service hospital trust status.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To date no application for trust status has been received from any unit in Wales, but an expression of interest has been lodged by Pembrokeshire DHA and a formal application is expected shortly.

Labour Statistics

29. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the increase in unemployment in the Monmouth constituency since June 1990.

Mr. David Hunt: Since June 1990 the number of unemployed claimants in the Monmouth constituency has increased by 622.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount spent by his Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; and if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1990-91, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm, the subject of the assignment and, if appropriate, the executive agency for whom the contract was carried out.

Mr. David Hunt: The total amount spent by my Department in the 1990-91 financial year on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases was £1,300,216. Details of management and computer consultancies awarded in that year were as follows:

Council Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of domestic residences in each of the property value bands of the proposed council tax in Wales, in the manner of the answer given to the hon. Member for St. Helens, North (Mr. Evans), 8 May, Official Report, column 536.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The following table gives the estimates used for the calculation of illustrative council tax bills for Wales.

Property value in relation to average capital value		Upper property in value band £	Number of dwellings in Wales
A:	under 50 per cent.	30,000	181,600
B:	50 to 65 per cent.	39,000	214,700

Holyhead-London Transport Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will define the new responsibilities given to the Minister of State for Wales with regard to the development of rail links between Holyhead and London.

Sir Wyn Roberts: As part of my responsibility for co-ordination of initiatives for urban renewal in Holyhead I have taken a close interest in rail services.

The provision of services will nevertheless remain a matter for British Rail to determine.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings have so far been chaired by the Minister of State for Wales of the various organisations with a direct interest in improving the co-ordination of transport services from Holyhead to London; if he will state what organisations were represented at those meetings; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The provision of transport services is a matter for transport operators. I have had several meetings with interested parties including my hon. Friend the Minister for Public Transport, local authorities and British Rail. On 3 June I chaired a meeting of organisations interested in all aspects of the regeneration of Holyhead at which British Rail was represented.

Dentists' Contracts

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dentists have left the national health service in Wales since the implementation of the new contract system.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Overall between 1 October 1990 and 30 April 1991 there was a net decrease of 10 dentists from FHSA dental lists in Wales, which represents 1·1 per cent. of the total.

Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average class size for infants, primary and secondary schools in Wales in (a) 1989-90 and (b) 1990-91.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information as at September of each year is given in the following table. The primary school information relates to the average size of registered classes in primary schools, including nursery classes. In the case of secondary schools, it is based on classes as taught.

Data on class size of nursery schools are not held centrally.

	Primary Schools	Secondary Schools
1989-90	24·8	18·9
1990-91	24·8	19·2

Nursery Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to increase nursery schooling in those parts of Wales where spending has been reduced; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any plans to meet local education authorities in Wales to discuss an increase in the provision of nursery education.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The provision of education in school for children under the age of five is at the discretion of local education authorities. Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have any plans to meet authorities to discuss nursery education.

School Fabric

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he plans to meet local education authorities in Wales to discuss the fabric of schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No. Expenditure plans submitted each year by local education authorities provide information about their education building plans, including refurbishment of schools, and these are subject to discussion with the Department.

Secure Places

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) by what date he intends to ensure there are enough secure places in Wales to end totally the accommodation of young people on remand in prison accommodation;

(2) if he will announce the steps he intends to take to provide secure places in Wales for those young people who need to be so placed;

(3) what assessment he has made of the number of secure places needed in Wales to cope with the number of young people who need to be so accommodated without making use of prison accommodation;

(4) what contribution he estimates can be made by community-based approaches and preventive work with young people and their families to cut down the number of secure accommodation places needed in Wales; and what plans he has to develop such policies.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Officials have completed a thorough review of secure care policy in Wales. I am presently considering their report, which will be issued for consultation next month.

Children's Homes

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in detail the actions taken by his Department on the findings he published on 4 June relating to investigations undertaken into three children's homes in Wales, since the date of the inspections reported on.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Local management of the homes and the relevant local authorities were informed of the findings of the inspections immediately upon their conclusion. They were also given an opportunity to comment on draft versions of the reports prior to their publication. Subsequently, the social services inspectorate has written to directors of social services clarifying the conditions of use of the units and work is in hand on a revision of those conditions.

The findings of the inspections were taken into account in our review of secure care in Wales. Action on the specific recommendations made by the inspections is a matter for the respective local authorities.

Further inspections of the three units will take place in 1992.

Dentistry (Anaesthetic Services)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that people living in Mid Glamorgan have an acceptable level of provision of general anaesthetic services for dentistry.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The assessment of the needs of the resident population of a district, for general anaesthetic services for dentistry, is the responsibility of the district health authority and the family health service authority. In the hospital and community sector it is for the district health authority to contract with service providers to secure services sufficient to meet the assessed needs.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what response he proposes to make to the findings of the Poswillo report.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Consultation upon the Poswillo report is continuing. The outcome will be announced in due course.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the number of general dental practices in Mid Glamorgan which provide general anaesthetic services for tooth extraction; and what plans he has to improve this provision.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Three general dental practices in Mid Glamorgan provide general anaesthetic services. Information is not held centrally regarding the type of procedures for which these services are used.

Mid Glamorgan family health service authority, in conjuction with the district health authority, has the responsibility for planning and securing appropriate levels of dental services for its resident population.

Job Creation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of each company involved in job creation projects in Wales during 1990 together with the number of jobs created in each case.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 23 May 1991]: Information relating to all job creation projects is not held centrally. In the context of inward investment, Wales secured 142 projects from overseas and the rest of the United Kingdom during 1990, promising nearly 16,000 new and safeguarded jobs and a capital investment of almost £640 million.

A list of the companies concerned, excluding those which have requested confidentiality, are shown in the table. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, individual details of investment and jobs are not disclosed.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fish Farms

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many owners of fish farms in England and Wales have applied to the EC for a subsidy to develop aquaculture since 1987; and how many have been successful in their application.

Mr. Curry: Council regulation 4028/86, provides for Community measures to improve and adapt structures in the fisheries and aquaculture sector and came into effect from 1 January 1987. Since then, there have been 11 applications for EC aquaculture aid in England and Wales, of which eight have been successful. The details are shown in the table.

Year of application	England		Wales
	Applications	Successful applications	Applications	Successful applications
1987	2	2	1	1
1988	—	—	1	—
1989	3	3	1	—
1990	2	2	1	—

Garden Festivals

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the Institute of Horticulture regarding garden festivals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I have not so far received any representations on garden festivals from this source.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next proposes to discuss the development of the garden festivals with the Institute of Horticulture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: At present I have no plans to do so.

Institute of Horticulture

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next proposes to meet the Institute of Horticulture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 15 May 1991, Official Report, column 189.

Video Cameras (New Forest)

Mr. Meale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent to Forestry Commission keepers regarding the use of video cameras in the New Forest.

Mr. Curry: A copy of the letter, dated 15 December 1989, is being placed in the Library.

Scotch Whisky (Exports)

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value of British exports of Scotch whisky in each of the past five years, in cash terms and as a percentage of total exports.

Mr. Curry: The figures for exports for Scotch whisky, which include a small amount of Northern Irish whiskey, are as follows:

	Value of exports of Scotch whisky
	£ million	as a percentage of all visible exports
1986	1,071	1·5
1987	1,136	1·4
1988	1,289	1·6
1989	1,470	1·6
1990	1,712	1·6

Drift Nets

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will use his powers under the Sea Fisheries Conservation Act 1967 to ban the use of drift nets in United Kingdom waters.

Mr. Curry: The European Community is currently preparing a regulation which will prevent the use of large-scale indiscriminate drift netting in not only United Kingdom waters but the waters of all other member states and by EC vessels on the high seas. We are working so that this can be agreed soon.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the Prime Minister's answer of 4 December 1990, Official Report, column 172, if he will make a further statement on compensation for nuclear test veteran, John Hall.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Invalidity Pensions

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current total annual pension paid to (a) a private and (b) a sergeant, with five years' service, invalided out of the services in 1990 with (i) 30 per cent. disability, (ii) 60 per cent. disability and (iii) 100 per cent. disability, respectively.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The table shows the current rates of pension paid by the Ministry of Defence and by the Department of Social Security.

(a) Service attributable pension paid by the Ministry of Defence in respect of invaliding on 1 April 1990.

Percentage disability	Private annual pension £	Sergeant annual pension £
30	1,530·42	2,627·22
60	2,073·83	4,066·70
100	2,992·08	6,119·46

(b) War disability pension paid by the Department of Social Security

Percentage disability	Private weekly pension £	or Sergeant annual equivalent £
30	25·47	1,328·00
60	50·94	2,656·00
100	84·90	4,426·69

In addition, there is a range of supplementary allowances which may be payable under the war pension scheme, depending on the circumstances of the individual case—e.g. unemployability supplement or allowance for lowered standard of occupation, constant attendance allowance, mobility supplement, age allowance, clothing allowance.

Parachute Units

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) under what headings additional costs arise for a Territorial Army parachute unit compared with a comparable non-parachute unit;

(2) what savings would be made by assigning a Territorial Army parachute unit to a non-parachute role as a Territorial Army unit of comparable size.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Interpreters

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many qualified interpreters in (a) Arabic and (b) Turkish are currently serving in (i) the armed forces and (ii) the reserves; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are 45 qualified interpreters in Arabic and seven in Turkish currently serving in the regular forces. We do not hold central records of the number of qualified interpreters in the reserve forces, but they are know to number at least 27 in Arabic and one in Turkish.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many interpreters in (a) Arabic and (b) Turkish are currently serving with the British forces in (i) south-eastern Turkey and (ii) northern Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Eleven Arabic-speaking members of the armed forces are currently deployed to south-eastern Turkey and northern Iraq on operation Haven. Six are trained to linguist or interpreter standard and two also have Turkish language qualifications. The other five are students on the services' long Arabic language course. They are deployed within Turkey and northern Iraq as required. Local interpreters are employed as necessary.

Crown Prosecutions (Army) Act

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the delay in providing copies of the Batus range orders, the memorandum of understanding between the British and Canadian Governments and details of the exercise briefing orders, as they related to the digging of trenches in the impact area of a live firing range, to the representatives of Guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey, in pursuit of their claim of negligence under the Crown Prosecutions (Army) Act 1987; and if he will make the relevant documents available forthwith.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A copy of the Batus range standing orders and of the exchange of notes on the training of United Kingdom armed forces in Canada (there is no memorandum of understanding) have now been sent to the solicitors representing Guardsmen Hicks, Ray and Povey. No other documents have been requested.

"Options for Change"

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future role of the Royal Hampshire Regiment in his consideration and determination of "Options for Change".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 4 June at columns 143-44.

Injured Grenadiers

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what resettlement arrangements were made upon the medical discharge of the three injured Grenadiers, Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Lance corporal Ray is still in the Army and has embarked upon the resettlement process. Guardsman Povey is also still in the Army but has yet to start resettlement.

Guardsman Hicks has left the Army. He spent a total of 235 days, divided into two periods, at the defence services medical rehabilitation unit RAF Headley Court, where he passed his driving test. He has received guidance from the MOD's resettlement advice officer and the employment services disablement resettlement officer. He was assessed at an employment resettlement centre last year and subsequently underwent a resettlement training course at Henswell, near Lincoln. After discharge from the services, any further training is the responsibility of the disablement resettlement officer of the employment services, but of course his regimental association will continue to take an active interest in his after care.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he personally has read the findings of the board of inquiry into the Army exercise accident involving guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey on 7 July 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has been briefed on the content of the board of inquiry's report.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he will make available documents key to the cases of Grenadier guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey in formulating their cases under the Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act 1987, and in particular the Range Orders, the full findings of the subsequent board of inquiry and the precise safety briefings given to men prior to embarking on the training exercise of 7 July 1989;

(2) why documents key to Grenadier guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey in pursuing their cases of negligence under the Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act 1987 have not yet been made available to them.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The solicitors acting for Guardsmen Hicks, Ray and Povey already have a summary of the findings of the board of inquiry report. A copy of the exchange of notes between the United Kingdom and Canadian Governments regarding the training of United Kingdom forces in Canada and of the Batus range standing orders have now been sent to them. No information on the briefing provided for the training exercise is held by the Ministry of Defence but safety precautions, including the procedures for reporting and disposing of unexploded ammunition are covered in the range standing orders.

Mr. John Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases have been brought under the Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act since it came into force in 1987; and in how many of those cases a claim of negligence was upheld.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act 1987 came into force, and as at 20 May 1991, a total of 1,619 claims have been received. Of these, 235 have been accepted and settled. 331 have either not been pursued further by the claimant or have not been accepted and 1,053 are currently under investigation.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what precise steps were taken to ensure the effective execution of safety procedures by the 1 Battalion Grenadier Guards on the Batus training area in Canada on 7 July 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Comprehensive range safety procedures are laid down in the range standing orders, which must be followed by all units.

The steps to be taken to ensure that these procedures are known to all Batus personnel are laid down in the orders. It is the responsibility of commanders at all levels to ensure that the safety procedures are rigorously obeyed.

The board of inquiry convened to investigate this incident did not identify any contravention of any order, procedure or drill.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide the details, including assumed discount rate and time of money flows, behind the actuarial assessment of the £150,000 present value equivalent award which he gave to the House in the Adjournment debate on 3 June, Official Report, column 136.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In arriving at the estimated present value equivalent to the MNOD and DSS benefits awarded, future pension payments (which are linked to the retail price index) payable from discharge until death were discounted at a rate of just over 4 per cent. per annum, this being the assumed rate of investment return available in excess of future price increases, based on the real return available in December 1990 on idex linked British Government securities.

The present equivalent award was estimated at about £143,000 assuming the death occurs at age 60, or £161,000 assuming death at age 75.

Army Manpower

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what change in the roles and commitments of the British Army led to his recently announced manpower cuts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) and the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Garrett) on 4 June at column 143.

Housing, Wales

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the total number of Ministry of Defence housing units to be found on (a) Royal Air Force and (b) Army bases in Wales in each of the years (i) 1969, (ii) 1979 and (iii) 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The total number of Army and RAF married quarters and civilian houses owned by the Ministry of Defence in Wales on 31 March 1989 was as follows:

	1979	1989
RAF	2,365	2,014
Army	674	516

Statistics do not differentiate between houses on or off base. Records are not available for 1969.

Welsh Military Bases

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of all military bases currently within Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are 16 major defence establishments in Wales. These are shown with their function in the table. In addition there are many minor facilities located throughout the Principality.

Establishment	Main function
Brecon	HQ Wales and NCO tactical wing
Castlemartin	Armoured corps training area
Sennybridge	Principal Army training area
Bridgend	Army vehicle workshop
RNAD Trecwn/ Milford Haven	Royal naval armament depot

Establishment	Main function
AWE Llanishen	RAF tactical weapons training
RAF St. Athan	Aircraft maintenance and technical training centre
RAF Sealand	Specialist repair centre for avionics
RAF Valley	Advanced flying training
RAF Caerwent	United States Army ammunition storage facility
RAE Aberporth	Royal Aircraft Establishment
MSD Pembroke dock	Marine and salvage depot
Llangennech	Forms and publications depot
P and EE Pendine	Proof and experimental establishment
RAE Llanbedr	Royal Aircraft Establishment

The Gulf

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on impediment by the Spanish Government of the British contribution to the war effort in the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any such impediment by the Spanish Government. Spain generously provided a range of practical assistance, including air transport, in support of British forces.

Operation Granby

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel involved during the period of Operation Granby were (a) members of the volunteer forces, either serving in the Gulf or in United Kingdom assisting with the effort on releasing regular personnel or (b) personnel serving on SSVCs or S type engagements with the regular forces in the Gulf or in United Kingdom assisting with the effort or releasing regular personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: A total of 877 members of the volunteer reserves were called out for service during Operation Granby. Nearly 500 other personnel from the Territorial Army served on short service voluntary commissions or special type S short-term attachments with the regular Army last year, many in support of Operation Granby, and 6 Royal Marines Reservists undertook similar attachments with the Royal Marines. In addition, considerable assistance was provided by volunteer reservists on an informal basis at local level.

Helicopters

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many helicopters which served in the Gulf were painted in desert colours; how many such helicopters have been re-painted in ordinary camouflage; how many helicopters will be painted in desert colours for the fly-past in June; what is the cost of painting desert colours on the helicopters which will take part in the fly-past; and how many helicopters painted in desert colours will be re-painted in ordinary camouflage after the fly-past.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: All British helicopters deployed to the Gulf were painted in desert camouflage. About half have already had, or will shortly have, this paint removed. The remainder will be repainted in normal camouflage colours as they undergo scheduled overhauls. No helicopters will be repainted specifically for the fly-past, although the desert colours of some of those taking part may need to be touched up for anti-corrosion purposes. The cost of this will be minimal.

TRANSPORT

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage reductions of carbon dioxide emissions are planned for each year between the present time and 2005.

Mr. Chope: We have not set year-by-year targets.

Airline Deregulation

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to initiate a pan-European airline deregulation campaign as a prerequisite to an open skies environment between Europe and the United States of America; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The United Kingdom Government have been and continue to be in the forefront of the pursuit of aviation liberalisation in Europe, both multilaterally in the EC and bilaterally. Wherever possible, we have been taking steps to pursue similar liberalisation elsewhere in the world. Discussions on liberalisation with the United States are at an early stage. Our aim will be to remove obstacles to fair competition, which hinder our airlines at present, and to remove unnecessary regulation.

Driving Licence Records

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department is examining the possibility of disclosing copies of photographs obtained on driver licences to the police; whether powers in section 15(1) of the Road Vehicle (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971 would allow for this; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency —DVLA—is currently collating and analysing responses to the consultation document on the proposal to include photographs on driving licences. The police are allowed access to the driver licensing records for law enforcement purposes under the terms of the Data Protection Act 1984. The DVLA would, as necessary, seek advice on disclosure of photographs from the Data Protection Registrar. Regulation 15 of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971 specifically covers release of information from the vehicle register. I will make a further statement shortly.

Taxi Licences

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) of 2 May, Official Report, column 306, whether he has issued advice to local authorities on how to determine what offences make a person not a fit and proper person to hold a taxi licence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Local authorities have broad discretion over all the main areas of taxi licensing and they decide, based on the information at their disposal, whether to issue a taxi licence. No guidance has been issued.

A33

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the upgrading of the Chilworth to Otterbourne section of the A33 to motorway standard to be completed and opened to the public; and how he intends to control the consequential traffic congestion on the unreconstructed section of the A33 between Bar End, Winchester and Otterbourne.

Mr. Chope: Upgrading of the Compton (Otterbourne) to Bassett (Chilworth) section of the A33 to motorway standard is currently due to be completed and open to the public later this year. We have no plans to carry out any major works on the existing A33 between Winchester and Compton (Otterbourne) which will be superseded by the planned Bar End—Compton section of the M3. Advance works for this scheme are already under way. The main construction is due to start next year.

Rail Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will issue a general directive to the British Railways Board, under section 27 of the Transport Act 1962, to require it to take into account the national interest of Wales in exercising its functions relating to passenger transport, relating to the need for adequate and convenient InterCity services between Cardiff and Holyhead;

(2) if he will now use powers under section 3 of the Railways Act 1974 to give directions to the board of British Rail to continue to provide InterCity railway service through trains six times a day each way between Holyhead and London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: No. The Government's policy is that InterCity should take its decisions on a normal commercial basis. Government grants are available for services provided by Regional Railways.

A1-A1068 (Junction)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has undertaken of the costs and benefits of a junction providing direct access from the A1 to the A1068.

Mr. Chope: No economic appraisal has been undertaken of a direct access from trunk road A1 Alnwick bypass to the A1068.

Roads (Safety Fencing)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many dual carriageways and motorways have Bridon wire fencing installed along the central section.

Mr. Chope: In England, wire rope safety fencing has been provided on dual carriageway central reserves at three locations. A further five such installations are in progress.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales are responsible for highway matters in Scotland and Wales.

Red Routes

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans exist to extend red routes to other urban areas.

Mr. Chope: It will be for local authorities outside London to decide whether to introduce priority red routes in their areas using their existing powers, in co-operation with the police and seeking the authorisations of the priority red route signs and markings from the Secretary of State.

Road Tankers (Safety)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to strengthen road tankers to reduce risk of spillage and fire in case of accident.

Mr. Chope: The Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in Road Tankers and Tank Containers) Regulations 1981 are the subject of current review and consultation by the Health and Safety Executive. Updated regulations covering improved requirements for petrol tankers and tankers carrying other flammable liquids are expected to be published at the end of this year, supported by approved codes of practice.

A1 (Resurfacing)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times the A1 south of Scremerston has been resurfaced in the course of the road works carried out there over the last year; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The road improvement south of Scremerston widened the existing carriageway by 2m to bring the section of the A1 up to current design standards for a single carriageway road. Work commenced in September last year and was substantially completed in December. The contractor returned to the site in May to replace an area of surfacing that did not comply with the specification.

West Midlands (Rail Services)

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, when he next meets the chairman of British Rail, he will discuss the quality of rail services between London Euston and the west midlands.

Mr. Freeman: Quality of inter-city services is a commercial matter for British Rail. I am sure that it will want to improve performance on this route in order to compete successfully with other forms of transport.

A38

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the total number of representations his Department have received in response to the A38 trunk road improvement between Liskeard and Bodmin, indicating (a) the numbers favouring the options to the north and south of Dobwalls, respectively, (b) the numbers favouring the options to the north and south of the A390, respectively and (c) the number who would have preferred a Glynn valley option.

Mr. Chope: More than 500 completed questionnaires were received in response to the recent public consultation on the proposed improvement of the A38, Liskeard to Bodmin. The questionnaires are still being evaluated. We will make a full statement on the results of the public consultation when the preferred route is announced towards the end of the year.

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when and for what reasons the decision was taken not to include an upgrading of the A38 on a new line of route through the Glynn valley as an option as part of the A38 trunk road improvement between Bodmin and Liskeard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The decision not to include a new route through the Glynn valley as one of the options for the improvement of the A38, Liskeard to Bodmin, was taken at an early stage in the development of the scheme.

Forecasts of future traffic indicate that a dual carriageway road will be necessary. The poor vertical and horizontal alignment of the existing road through the valley precludes its use as half of a dual carriageway system. It would be necessary to build a completely new road.

The topography of the valley is such that building a new dual carriageway through it would be extremely difficult. Major engineering works, including substantial earthworks and structures, would have a very damaging impact on the environment of the valley, which is the central feature of the Mid-Fowey special area of great landscape value and a Cornwall nature conservation site.

Railway Construction

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for all OECD countries, the number of miles of new publicly funded, main line railway track constructed, for each of the last 10 years, and the number of miles of such track (a) actually under construction and (b) planned.

Mr. Freeman: This information is available only at disproportionate cost.

Vehicle Licensing

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the application for a heavy goods vehicle licence from Mr. George West, ref. VDL/H/CC, was received by the DVLA at Swansea; when the licence is going to be issued; and if he will make a statement explaining the reasons for the delay in issuing this licence.

Mr. Chope: I regret that, without Mr. West's date of birth, Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency—DVLA—officials are unable to investigate Mr. West's case. The agency has more than 40 million driver records, and these are held under unique numbers made up from the driver's name and date of birth. The agency deals with up to 40,000 driving licence applications each day.

I have written to the hon. Member requesting the information which DVLA will need to identify Mr. West's application; and I will write to him again when my inquiries are complete.

Seamen

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the results of the studies into the future supply and demand for United Kingdom seamen and into the supply and demand for United Kingdom merchant ships in time of war.

Mr. McLoughlin: Summaries of both reports have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Trinity House Transmitter, Amble

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange for a non-statutory public inquiry into the proposal of Trinity House to erect a Loran C transmitter at Amble, Northumberland.

Mr. McLoughlin: The arrangement of a non-statutory public inquiry into this proposal would be a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. Since no Crown development is involved in the proposal, the question of such an inquiry under Department of Environment circular 18/22 does not arise.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has been notified as the developing department of the strong objections of the local planning authority to the proposal by Trinity House to erect a 700ft mast at Amble, Northumberland; and whether he will apply the procedures set out in circular 18/84 in response to these objections so as to enable a public local inquiry to take place.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 10 June 1991]: The Department of Transport is aware of the objections of the local planning authority to the proposal by Trinity House to erect a mast near Amble in Northumberland. The Department is not however the developing Department; indeed no Crown development is involved in the proposal. Accordingly the question of using procedures under Department of the Environment circular 18/84 does not arise.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 11 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I has meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall have further meetings later today.

Tanks

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has made to the letter of 4 June from Sanderson Kayser Ltd. on the implications of the Chieftain main battle tank replacement contract.

The Prime Minister: A reply will be sent to the company shortly.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Nuclear Structure Facility, Daresbury

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many Nobel prize winners wrote to him to ask for the retention of the nuclear structure facility at Daresbury; and what was the nature of his response.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend has received one letter from a Nobel prize winner who expressed the hope that the Science and Engineering Research Council's nuclear structure facility at Daresbury could be kept open. The reply was to the effect such decisions were for the SERC to make, based on its judgments of scientific priority.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish his Department's evaluation of the quality of the work done at the nuclear structure facility at Daresbury.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Evaluation of the scientific quality of research carried out under the aegis of the research councils is a matter for them and the scientific community to assess. The Department does not seek to make its own judgments in these matters.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations were made to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon, in the course of his recent visit to Daresbury laboratory about the desirability of a peer review of the quality of work undertaken at the nuclear structure facility; and what was his response.

Mr. Alan Howarth: During my visit to Daresbury laboratory with my hon. Friend on 22 February I met a number of the staff and their representatives who put to me their concern about SERC's planned closure of the nuclear structure facility. Several expressed the view that such a decision should be subject to further peer review. I responded by emphasising that decisions on the management of SERC's programme must be for the council to judge, and by referring to the further study to assess the importance of the area of nuclear structure science announced by SERC on 7 February.

National Curriculum

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the expenditure to date incurred on the production and administration of the national curriculum, broken down between that incurred on (i) working groups, (ii) publication, (iii) publicity, (iv) School Examinations and Assessment Council meetings, (v) in-service training, (vi) monitoring and (vii) other.

Mr. Eggar: Government expenditure on the national curriculum in the 1989-90 financial year was some £20·6 million; and in 1990-91 it was £24·8 million (provisional). These figures include grant-in-aid to the National Curriculum Council and the School Examinations and Assessment Council. Planned expenditure for 1991-92 is some £34·9 million.

The implementation of the national curriculum has also been supported by the Government via specific grants to local education authorities. Eligible expenditure includes in-service training, the employment of advisory teachers, support for non-teaching support staff, and the provision of extra books, materials and equipment. In 1989-90 these grants totalled some £100 million; in 1990-91, they were some £120 million; and in 1991-92 they will support LEA expenditure of around £170 million.

It is not possible to break down this expenditure in the way requested by the hon. Member. The table shows direct expenditure by the Department:

(i) Working Groups
In the financial years 1987-88 to 1990-91—£710,000.
Planned expenditure in 1991-92—£127,000.

(ii) Publication
National curriculum subject orders—£5,500,000.
NC assessment statutory documents and speeches—£148,000.

(iii) Publicity
Leaflets for parents and teachers—£665,000.

(vi) Monitoring
Monitoring is being carried out by Her Majesty's Inspectorate as part of their normal duties.

Local Authority Service Provision

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science for which areas of local authority service provision for which he is responsible payments are required to be made to individuals who are not employees (a) in the form of a grant or one-off payment and (b) on receipt of paid invoices.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 6 June 1991]: Local education authorities may make payments to a variety of individuals who are not their employees. Examples may include mandatory and discretionary awards to students; assistance to school children and students for clothing, footwear, school journeys or towards tuition fees; allowances to councillors or governors; and payments to suppliers of goods and services. Information on the full range of such payments, or on whether they take the form of grants or of reimbursement of paid invoices, is not collected centrally.

ENERGY

British Coal

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the number and type of job creation opportunities set up by British Coal Enterprise Ltd. in South Yorkshire since 1984.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Since 1984, in the Yorkshire region as a whole British Coal Enterprise Ltd.—BCE—has helped to create 5,711 new job opportunities by funding the start-up or expansion of new businesses, and a further 1,298 new job opportunities through the funding of managed workspace. BCE has also helped 4,695 ex-British Coal employees to find alternative employment, through the job and career change scheme. The total to 31 March 1991 is therefore 11,704. Separate figures for South Yorkshire are not published.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many of the stockbrokers eligible for selling commissions in respect of electricity privatisation in England and Wales he proposes (a) to pay and (b) not to pay, before the end of June, all or most of the fees due.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The relevant payments in respect of the regional electricity companies share offers are under way: I would expect the remainder to be substantially completed during the month. Those in respect of the generating companies share offers should be in train shortly thereafter.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects Touche Ross to complete its audit in relation to the sale of shares in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry of England and Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have recently received Touche Ross's audit report in relation to the selling commissions due to brokers in respect of the regional electricity companies share offers, on the basis of which the relevant payments are now being made to brokers; that in relation to the generating companies share offers is expected shortly. As regard the firm's work on fraud audit, I would refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave him on 10 June at columns 408-9.

Fossil-Fuel Power Stations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what uses are made of the ash created in the burning of coal in fossil-fuel power stations.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Up to 50 per cent.—around 7 million tonnes—of the ash from coal-fired power stations is used for commercial purposes in a number of constructional applications and building products, for example, as structural fill material in road construction projects, in the manufacture of aerated building blocks and lightweight aggregates, and concrete applications.

Fuel Rationing Coupons

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current cost of storing motor fuel rationing coupons.

Mr. Moynihan: Due to an advance in printing techniques, such storage is no longer necessary. We have now moved to a print on demand scheme, which will involve no expenditure after this financial year, thus saving at least £200,000 per annum.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Child Tax Allowance

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the additional revenue in a full year that would result from abolishing the £3,295 annual tax allowance for children; and by how much child benefit could be raised if the additional revenue were wholly used for that purpose.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The additional revenue produced by abolishing the personal tax allowance for all children would be about £60 million in a full year for the United Kingdom. This sum would allow child benefit to go up by about 10p a week for each eligible child.

Interest Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on margins charged by banks over minimum lending rate; and what proposals he has for regulating these margins.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have received a number of representations on this issue. My officials, together with the Bank of England, are looking at the concerns that have been raised. We will consider what—if any—action is necessary when we have established the facts.

Mortgages

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on (a) the total number of mortgages for which monthly repayments are reviewed annually and (b) the proportion of mortgages subject to annual review which are reviewed in each month.

Mr. Maples: Only partial information is available. We do not hold information on the total number of mortgages for which payments are adjusted annually, but it is estimated that over 40 per cent. of building society mortgages fall into this category. No information is available on the proportion of annual review mortgages that are reviewed in each month.

Income Tax Assessments

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many assessments for personal income tax made by the Inland Revenue were appealed against in each year since 1987.

Mr. Maude: The number of appeals against schedule D. capital gains and taxed income assessments since 1987 are as follows. In many cases, the appeal was against an estimated assessment raised in the absence of the taxpayer's return.

	Million
1987-88	2·1
1988-89	2·9
1989-90	3·1
1990-91	3·2

The relevant statistics for schedule E assessments are not available on the computerised PAYE system.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many assessments for personal income-tax made by the Inland Revenue in each year since 1988 were appealed against (a) on the initial assessment, (b) on the second assessment, (c) on the third assessment and (d) on further assessments.

Mr. Maude: Figures for appeals are not recorded in this form.

Inland Revenue (Efficiency)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what performance indicators are used by the Inland Revenue to monitor the service's efficiency and effectiveness (a) in terms of assessment of tax revenue due and (b) in terms of collection.

Mr. Maude: A wide range of indicators is used to plan, manage and report the Inland Revenue's work. Key figures are published each year in the Board of Inland Revenue's plans and annual report, copies of which are in the House of Commons Library. For example, the report for the year ending 31 March 1990—Cm. 1321—showed that 98·8 per cent. of the main assessments for schedule D income tax were issued on time in 1989-90, and that the proportion of assessment taxes which had been collected was the highest for five years.

Pensioners (Tax)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures showing for 1991-92 the numbers of pensioners who (a) pay no income tax, (b) pay income tax at the basic rate only and (c) pay income tax at the highest rate.

Mr. Maude: The latest estimates are that about 7·3 million individuals aged over 65 will pay no income tax, 2·6 million will pay income tax at the basic rate only and 150,000 will pay at the higher rate.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Expenditure

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of local government expenditure in Worthing is likely to be financed from community charge, uniform business rate and central government, respectively in 1991-92; and what were the figures in 1990-91.

Mr. Portillo: Worthing borough council are expecting to raise £22·55 million in community charges in respect of 1990-91. Together with income of £23·6 million from the non-domestic rates pool, and £7·4 million revenue support grant, after safety net adjustment, this money will help finance £322·1 million net revenue expenditure by West Sussex county council, and £9 million net revenue expenditure by Worthing borough council.

For 1991-92 Worthing borough council are expecting to raise £25·8 million in community charges in respect of that year. Together with £26·3 million from the non-domestic rates pool, and £8·4 million revenue support grant, this will help finance £354·8 million budgeted net revenue expenditure by West Sussex county council in 1991-92, and £10 million budgeted net revenue expenditure by Worthing borough council in 1991-92.

It is not possible to say what proportion of local government expenditure in Worthing is financed by any one of these sources.

Household Incomes

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay), Official Report, 27 June 1990, column 259, to 1991-92 showing, in addition, the total gainers and losers and a more detailed breakdown of net household income, equivalised and unequivalised, at the top end of the income range.

Mr. Key: Information placed in the Library on 15 February and 27 June 1990 showed the distributional impact of the community charge on a basis directly comparable with domestic rates. Subsequent changes in local government spending and the level of central support mean that an equivalent basis of comparison is not available for 1991-92. Because of the small sample size, a more detailed breakdown of net household income is not possible.

Buildings Regulations

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects his Department's proposals for the revision of part M of the Building Regulations 1985 to be introduced.

Mr. Yeo: I expect to lay before Parliament in the autumn of this year revised Building Regulations, incorporating changes to the requirements of part M. The revised approved document which gives practical guidance on how the requirements of the regulations can be met will be published at the same time. They will come into force subject to parliamentary approval in the summer of 1992.

Wild Birds

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the caging of wild birds for use as decoys is permitted under the European Birds directives 1979.

Mr. Baldry: The directive prohibits the hunting, capturing or killing of wild birds where the methods used would result in the large-scale or non-selective capture or killing of birds, or would cause the local disappearance of a species. The directive prohibits live birds which are blind or mutilated from being used as decoys.

Convention Centres

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the amount of grants and other assistance given to (a) the Birmingham international conference and exhibition centre and (b) the Bournemouth international centre from public funds in the United Kingdom and from the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Birmingham international convention centre has received £49·75 million grant from the European regional development fund.

The national exhibition centre received a central Government grant of £1·5 million at the outset and a further £12·3 million ERDF grant in 1988 to fund the newest halls.

The Bournemouth international centre has received no specific grant from central Government or the ERDF.

My Department does not collect information on local authority support for such projects.

Listed Buildings

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria are used to designate a listed building in each category.

Sir George Young: There are three categories of listed building in England and they are classified in three grades to show their relative importance as follows:

Grade I —Buildings of exceptional interest.
Grade II*—Particularly important buildings of more than special interest.
Grade II —Buildings of special interest, which warrant every effort being made to preserve them.

Principles of selection and grading are more fully explained in appendix 1 to my Department's circular 8/87 "Historic Buildings and Conservation Areas—Policy and Procedures".

Local Government Structure

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce full-time councillors in his proposals for the structure of local government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Government will be publishing shortly a separate conslutation document on the internal management arrangements of local authorities; I cannot pre-empt its contents.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of (a) the lost revenue, (b) the cost of capital allowances, and (c) (a) and (b) within enterprise zones for the latest workable year.

Mr. Portillo: The latest available figures are:
rate revenue forgone in enterprise zones in the United Kingdom—£92 million in 1989-90.
capital allowances in enterprise zones in Great Britain—no figures are available for Northern Ireland—£150 million in 1988-89.

Environmental Protection Act

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment since what date the guidance notes to the implementation of the Environmental Protection Act have been out of print; and when he expects new ones to be printed.

Mr. Baldry: A total of 6,000 copies of the "Practical Guide to Integrated Pollution Control" were issued on 28 February 1991. These were sent free of charge to operators of processers controlled under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, and to all other interested bodies on request. However, demand for the guide so far exceeded our expectations that this initial supply was exhausted by mid-April. A reprint of a further 6,000 was ordered immediately and copies may now be obtained from the Department on request. The guide was out of print for less than three weeks.

Tradeable Permits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the results of research by London Economics Ltd. into the utility of tradeable permits; and if he will place a copy of the research in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: I expect to receive a final report from London Economics Ltd. before the end of the year, and will then place a copy in the Library.

Compulsory Tendering

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken on representations he has received concerning differential treatment between outside and in-house contractors under the local government compulsory competitive tendering schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend considers all representations about the operation of compulsory competitive tendering. Where they relate the conduct of individual competitive tendering exercises by local authorities, he considers whether there are grounds for the use of his sanction powers under sections 19A and 19B of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and sections 13 and 14 of the Local Government Act 1988, and uses them where appropriate.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the guidelines followed by the Audit Commission in settling the question of local authorities being allowed to undertake work for each other under the compulsory competitive tendering procedure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Any such guidelines are a matter for the Audit Commission.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many contracts have been put out to tender by local authorities under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1988; and how many contracts were awarded to outside contractors and how many were won in-house under the compulsory competitive tendering schemes.

Mr. Key: My Department does not collect this information, but indications are that the proportion of contracts awarded to external tenderers varies between services, and is highest for building cleaning work, at some 30 per cent.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake a review of the retendering procedure for the carrying out of additional work to any main contracts under the compulsory competitive tendering scheme for local government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: We have no plans to make changes to the regulations made on 19 March 1991 which provided, among other things, that where "other cleaning" work had been assigned to direct service organisations and the cost of additional work to meet the litter duties proposed by the Environmental Protection Act 1990 exceeded 20 per cent. of the cost of the work already being done, the work had to be put out to tender again.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amendments have been made to the threshold included in the Local Government Act 1988, for the smaller levels of work carried out in local government under compulsory competitive tendering schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: No amendments have been made to the de minimis threshold of £100,000, set out in the order made on 29 July 1988—SI No. 1988/1372.

Councillors

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to include in the consultative document on the internal management of local government the role of the elected member; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Government intend to publish this document shortly; I cannot pre-empt its contents.

Nuclear Plants (Carbon Dioxide)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to commission a study of the effects of carbon dioxide releases to the atmosphere from sea water boiled off in the cooling of nuclear plants; and what information he presently possesses on the levels of carbon dioxide released to the atmosphere as a result of the nuclear fuel cycle from uranium mining to waste disposal.

Mr. Baldry: No. The amount of carbon dioxide released from sea water used for cooling power stations is negligible in global terms.

I understand that the nuclear industry and environmental analysts are in agreement that the nuclear power fuel cycle is responsible for about 4 per cent. of the carbon dioxide released from conventional coal-fired plant for an equivalent amount of delivered energy.

"Environment: Ideas for the 21st Century"

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of the report published in December 1990, "Environment: Ideas for the 21st Century", prepared by the Dutch committee for long-term environmental policy.

Mr. Baldry: Yes.

Planning Controls

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the outcome of the consultation about planning controls over agriculture and forestry buildings conducted by his Department and the Welsh Office.

Sir George Young: On 5 October 1990 my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales issued a consultation paper inviting views on two significant changes to the present permitted development rights enjoyed by agriculture and forestry. We are grateful to the large number of bodies and individuals responding to this exercise. A list of their submissions is being placed in the Library of the House, where copies will be available on request. We have also published a research report on the subject—"Permitted Development Rights for Agriculture and Forestry"—which is available through HMSO.

The consultation paper proposed: (i) the extension to all areas of England and Wales of arrangements similar to those which already apply in the national parks, giving local planning authorities discretion to require details of new agricultural and forestry buildings to be submitted for approval; (ii) an increase, in all areas of England and Wales, in the minimum area of agricultural land attracting permitted development rights under class A of part 6 of schedule 2 to the General Development Order.

The Government have decided to implement both these changes by amendment to the General Development Order and to extend controls further in certain respects.

The current scheme in the national parks requires anyone who wishes to erect a farm or forestry building that falls within the definition of permitted development not requiring a specific planning permission to first send basic information about the proposed development to the local planning authority. The authority then has 28 days to decide whether the proposed development is likely to have significant effects on its surroundings. If so, it may require the submission of details for formal approval. Consultation on submitted details would be a matter for the authority's discretion.

If the authority does not ask for details, the development can proceed after the expiry of the 28-day period. If details are sought, the authority's consent will be needed before the development can proceed, but it may concern itself only with the siting, design, and external appearance of the building. It may not challenge the need for the development. If the authority does not approve the proposed details, the applicant has the right of appeal to the Secretary of State.

In the light of the consultation responses, and the research carried out, we have decided to build on the experience of the national park arrangements by making them apply to all parts of England and Wales. In addition to the consultation proposals, we intend in the light of the views expressed: (i) to make the arrangements cover not only new buildings, but also significant extensions and alterations, and farm and forestry roads. Extensions and alterations and farm and forestry roads are already covered in the national parks; and (ii) both in national parks and elsewhere, to expand the considerations to be taken into account by local planning authorities to cover not only visual aspects, but also the desirability of preserving ancient monuments and their settings, known archaeological sites, the settings of listed buildings, and sites of recognised nature conservation value including SSSIs.

Some consultees argued that agricultural buildings should be subject to full development control. They claimed that the initial notification and any subsequent consideration of details would together take longer than the normal planning process. On the basis of experience in the national parks, the Government consider that in most cases the local authority will not need to request full details of the proposed development; the farmer will therefore usually be free to proceed after 28 days—much quicker than most planning consents.

As recommended in the research findings, the new arrangements will be accompanied by guidance to local planning authorities stressing the importance of reconciling environmental considerations with the operational requirements of farm and forestry business. We hope to incorporate that guidance in a revised version of planning policy guidance note 7, also reflecting the outcome of consultation on a draft version of that document.

We have considered whether local authorities should be required to charge fees in conjunction with these arrangements. The Government's policy is that local authorities' development control activities should be wholly funded by application fees. Accordingly, we have decided that a fee should be payable, in national parks and elsewhere at the initial notification stage; no further fee would be payable where the local authority decided to request details. The fee will be £20 initially. We will monitor the costs of the operation of the new system over the first three years, and thereafter aim to relate the fee to actual costs, as with other planning fees.

The second main proposal in the consultation paper for new planning controls over agriculture was the extension of full development control to all farm holdings of less than five hectares. We have considered carefully the case put by many consultees and in the research findings for a 10 hectare eligibility limit, but that would double the number of farm units coming within control—so that about one quarter of all holdings would come within control. We do not accept that the case has been made to bring in that degree of control.

We have, however, decided: (i) not to proceed with the idea of an exemption for genuine commercial holdings when extending planning control to holdings of less than five hectares; we have concluded that the proposed genuineness test would be unworkable; (ii) to extend control to separate areas of agricultural land of less than one hectare. Land below one hectare which forms part of a unit of five hectares or more but is separated from it, for example by a public road or by land in different ownership, will thus be subject to full development control.

Below these thresholds, all agricultural permitted development rights under class A of part 6 of schedule 2 to the General Development Order will be withdrawn. These new measures will provide more effective control over development associated with the fragmentation of holdings. They will discourage the erection under permitted development rights of buildings ultimately intended either for non-agricultural uses, or to support an application to erect an agricultural dwelling where in farming terms there may be no prospect of creating a viable holding.

In addition, we propose to improve controls over excavations and engineering operations and over livestock units. Excavations and engineering operations which individually or collectively exceed 0·5 hectares on one site will be brought within the discretionary control system for buildings, in the national parks and elsewhere.

We also intend to rectify an anomaly in the treatment of livestock units. Since 1988 specific planning permission has been required to erect livestock buildings within 400 m of residential or similar property. It has however been possible to use new agricultural buildings within the 400 m cordon for keeping livestock once five years have elapsed from erection. We will amend the General Development Order so that in future new buildings erected within the cordon will not be able to be used for livestock without specific planning permission, except in emergencies. And we will issue further guidance to local planning authorities on development near existing livestock farms.

Taken together, these changes will produce substantial environmental benefits in controlling the effects of agricultural and forestry development, while ensuring that the rural economy can continue to prosper and make its own contribution to the quality of the environment. They represent a significant extension of the rights of local authorities to take an interest in the activities of our agricultural and forestry industries. We therefore intend to monitor the operation of the new system, and to review the position in three years' time with a view to making any further modifications shown to be necessary, either by increasing or reducing control.

Nothing in this statement applies to planning controls over fish farms. We announced last December that we would be withdrawing permitted development rights for fish farm excavations and engineering operations in the national parks. In addition, during Parliament's consideration of the Planning and Compensation Bill, the Government introduced provisions to control floating freshwater fish tanks and cages. I hope to announce shortly a consultation paper on the detailed implementation of these measures, and on the planning treatment of buildings and other developments on fish farms.

Minerals Survey

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish the results of the 1988 minerals survey.

Mr. Yeo: I am pleased to announce that the results of the survey are published today, 11 June 1991. A copy is available in the House of Commons Library. These findings show that the majority of the minerals industry acts responsibly and effectively where our planning system requires them to restore their land when extraction or tipping ceases. But I would like to see the whole of the industry operating to the highest standards and actively ensuring that all their sites will be adequately restored and will not create future dereliction for public funds to reclaim.

I am very concerned that a third of the workings still in operation, and almost 60 per cent. of the areas for mineral waste tipping, either have no planning conditions requiring final reclamation or that the conditions which do exist are not thought satisfactory.

That is why the Government are taking a number of steps. The Planning and Compensation Bill now contains provisions to bring old interim development order mineral sites into the planning system and their operations up to modern standards.

We have instituted a review of the operation of the Minerals Act 1981, which will include how best to improve the activities on the many mineral permissions granted in the 1950s and 1960s. We are to fund a pilot study by Groundwork to encourage the improvement of the environmental performance of the minerals industry; and we are funding a number of important research projects concerned with improving reclamation practices within the industry.

All this should result in the minerals industry becoming "better neighbours" while still supplying the minerals which are needed by the country.

Plant and Machinery

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake a review of the rating of plant and machinery.

Mr. Portillo: We have decided to establish a small expert committee to review the rating of plant and machinery. Much of the existing law has remained substantially unchanged for almost 30 years and has become outdated as a result of technological change. The committee will have the following terms of reference:

To consider the present law and practice in regard to the rating of plant and machinery in the United Kingdom; to make recommendations as to the principles that should be prescribed to comprise the extent of rateable property, having regard to the financial and other considerations involved, and with a view to removing inconsistencies and harmonising the law and practice in all parts of the United Kingdom; and to make proposals for giving effect to the recommendations.

It will be asked to report by 31 December 1992, so that any recommendations can be implemented for the 1995 revaluation of non-domestic property.

The chairman of the committee will be Mr. Derek Wood, QC. The other members will be decided after consultation with interested bodies.

Waltham Forest HAT

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the tenants of the Cathall road, Boundary road, Oliver close and Chingford hall estates in Waltham Forest will have the opportunity to vote for the establishment of a housing action trust.

Sir George Young: At a recent meeting, the joint steering group of tenant representatives proposed that a ballot of tenants on the proposal for a trust to redevelop the estates should begin on 13 July. The London borough of Waltham Forest has already confirmed that, if a trust is established after tenants vote in favour, they will fully support its implementation.

In view of the very high level of agreement that has been reached among the parties on how the HAT proposal can best serve the interests of the tenants of the estates, I am happy to confirm that the ballot will begin on the date proposed by tenant representatives.

I hope the tenants of the estates will seize the unique opportunity this proposal offers to transform housing and living conditions on the estates, and bring investment and jobs, in the interests of themselves, their families and the wider community in Waltham Forest.

Waste Incineration

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any EC regulations or directives currently in force or pending which restrict or control the erection of high-volume waste incinerators in the vicinity of food storage and processing premises.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 10 June 1991]: There are no EC directives or regulations which specifically impose restrictions or controls of this kind.

The EC has adopted three directives on incineration: directive 84/360 on combating of air pollution from industrial plants and directive 89/369—new plant—and directive 89/429—existing plant—on municipal waste incineration. These set emission limits and combustion conditions which apply to new plant now, and will apply to existing plant over 6 tonnes/hour capacity from 1996, and from 2000, with interim conditions from 1995, to smaller plant.

In addition, directive 85/337 requires the environmental effects of major projects to be taken into consideration before development consent is given. These effects might include effects on food storage and processing premises in a project's vicinity.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Northern Iraq

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to protect Iraqi and Kurdish civilians who have assisted allied forces during the occupation in Northern Iraq, once allied forces have been withdrawn.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our aim has always been that those refugees and other civilians who fled their homes in March should be able to return in conditions of safety and security. We are working to establish the conditions which would allow for their continuing safety after the withdrawal of allied forces from Iraq.

Israel

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the numbers of Palestinian dead and wounded, respectively, and of Israeli dead and wounded, respectively, since the start of the Intifada; and what representations he has made to Israel.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: According to our information, since the start of the Intifada 906 Palestinians have been killed by the Israeli security forces and many thousands injured. There has recently been a disturbing increase in the number of Palestinians killed by other Palestinians: the total now stands at approximately 400. We regularly take up with the Israelis incidents where we believe their security forces have acted in breach of the fourth Geneva convention. According to our sources, at least 61 Israelis have been killed by Palestinians, but we have no reliable figures for numbers of Israelis injured. We continue to condemn violence on both sides.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken at United Nations Security Council level in respect of Israeli attacks on Lebanon on 4 June.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have made clear to the Israelis in London and Jerusalem our concern about the recent raids. We believe that the key to peace on Israel's northern border is the effective deployment of the Lebanese army, a strong Government in Beirut and the withdrawal of Israeli forces from southern Lebanon in accordance with United Nations Security Council resolution 425.

Tibet

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy on Tibet.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 18 October 1990, column 905, to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas).

Addis Ababa (British Subjects)

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British subjects are at present trapped in Addis Ababa; how many have been invited to shelter in the British embassy during the current crisis; and what steps have been taken to ensure the safety of those not resident in the embassy.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British community were advised to leave Ethiopia by the embassy on 23 May 1991. About 150 chose to remain. All were invited to shelter on the embassy compound. Over 60 accepted. All have now returned to their homes. The embassy remains in close touch with the community. Addis Ababa international airport reopened on 7 June 1991 and all British nationals are free to leave.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of current persecution of Iraqis by the Government of Saddam Hussein.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We continue to monitor the situation in Iraq closely and receive information from a number of sources. We have made clear to the Iraqis that we would take the severest view of any evidence of persecution, which would contravene the terms of Security Council resolution 688.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the expulsion by the Sri Lankan Government of Mr. David Gladstone, British high commissioner in Colombo.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We believe that Sri Lankan action to be wholly unjustified. During four years in Colombo Mr. Galdstone has assiduously carried out Her Majesty's Government's policies, including effectively representing our concerns over Sri Lanka's unsatisfactory human rights record. It appears that his expulsion was motivated by a desire to stifle these criticisms.

Our immediate response has been to cancel high-level visits, including one I had planned for this month. We are also reviewing other aspects of our relationship.

We intend to move quickly to nominate a successor to Mr. Gladstone as high commissioner in Colombo.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he proposes, either bilaterally or as part of a Commonwealth initiative to protect the security of small states, to the invasion of Sierra Leone by troops from Liberia loyal to Charles Taylor.

Mrs. Chalker: Following discussions with the Government of Sierra Leone we are supplying a quantity of non-lethal defence equipment to the Sierra Leone army.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Import Restrictions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration has been given to revising or removing the restrictions on imports from Vietnam following the introduction of the market system in that country.

Mr. Sainsbury: Restrictions on imports from Vietnam are subject to regular review in the light of foreign and trade policy considerations.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will impose restrictions upon imports of textiles from Thailand in the light of revelations about the use of child and forced labour in that country.

Mr. Sainsbury: The EC, acting under the aegis of the multi-fibre arrangement, already restricts imports of a wide range of textiles products from Thailand. Child labour and forced labour are extremely complex issues often born out of poverty and social deprivation. The most effective way to eradicate these problems is, I believe, to improve the underlying economic and social conditions. Open trade, rather than further trade restrictions, is more likely to contribute to this process.

Israel

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on trade links between the United Kingdom and Israel; and what action he is taking to encourge them.

Mr. Sainsbury: Trade links between the United Kingdom and Israel are good. Trade between the UK and Israel exceeded £1 billion for the first time in 1990—UK exports £558 million, UK imports £502 million. Israel is a priority market for export promotion under the British Overseas Trade Board's forward plan. My Department supports the activities of the British overseas trade group for Israel. I intend to visit Israel later this year to encourage trade and investment links.

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on his Department's note of guidance to British exporters regarding the Arab trade boycott of Israel; and when it was last revised.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department's guidance note on the Arab boycott seeks to inform British firms on Government policy towards the boycott, to help remove misunderstandings about the operation of the boycott as it affects them and to provide them with information to assist their decisions about trading with the Arab world and Israel.

The note, copies of which are in the Library, was last revised in January 1991.

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on all recent and proposed trade missions to Israel supported financially or administratively by his Department.

Mr. Sainsbury: During the financial year 1990-91, my Department provided financial support for three trade missions to Israel organised by the British overseas trade group for Israel. In the current financial year a further four such missions are due to receive support.

HEALTH

NHS Trusts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his current policy towards the collection of information by his Department on the number of jobs lost and beds closed as a result of units becoming NHS trusts; and if he will make a statement on his future policy on this matter.

Mr. Waldegrave: I do not anticipate bed closures and job losses
"as a result of units becoming NHS trusts".
Both trusts and directly managed units need to fit their staff numbers to the efficient fulfilment of the health care contracts placed on them by health authorities. As in the past, some will doubtless expand in numbers and other contract. We do not routinely collect this kind of data from either NHS trusts or directly managed units. It is the responsibility of NHS trusts to determine the number of staff needed to provide the level of patient care contracted for.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the timetable for the second wave of NHS trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Each trust application is the subject of public consultation lasting three months. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to be able to announce his decisions on the second wave applications in the autumn. The second wave of trusts will become fully operational in April 1992.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what types of information NHS trusts are expected to include in their business plans to be submitted to the national health service management executive.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Business plans are expected to set out in financial terms how a trust will deliver the services that the purchasers have commissioned from it. The plans contain financial projections covering income and expenditure, assets, source and application of funds, contract and activity analysis, cash flow and capital projects. They also include information on services provided, quality, training and teaching, research and personnel.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what date NHS trusts were required to submit their business plans to the NHS management executive; and how many trusts submitted their plans by the date.

Mr. Waldegrave: NHS trusts were originally asked to submit their business plans to the NHS management executive—NHSME—by 8 March 1991. Although none of the trusts met this deadline they discussed their reasons individually with the NHSME and of the 57 NHS trusts, 53 have now submitted complete business plans and another three partially completed plans.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current value of the net assets of each NHS trust used to calculate the capital element of their contract prices.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 5 February at columns 96-97.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what range of salaries or other remuneration is paid to chief executives, managing directors and directors of those NHS trusts which operate ambulance services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The salaries of chief executives and other directors are a matter for the trust board.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what commercial operations are now offered or are being proposed by those NHS trusts providing ambulance services other than the conveyance of patients or responding to emergencies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: These NHS trusts offer a range of services. They are free to supplement their NHS income through additional services as long as they are not to the detriment of their patients and do not interfere with their ability to meet their NHS obligations.

Occupational Therapy

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will give details of the national shortfall in occupational therapists region by region;

(2) if he will give details of the number of trained occupational therapists who will complete training in each of the next five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Table 1 shows the percentage of occupational therapists posts in each region which had been vacant for three months or more at 31 March 1990. Steps are being taken to balance supply and demand. These include increasing the number of training places and encouraging and supporting retention and return initiatives undertaken by health authorities and the College of Occupational Therapists. These measures have contributed to the 28·7 per cent. increase in the number of occupational therapists between 1985 and 1989.

Table 2 shows the intakes to training in England and Wales for the last three years, and gives an indication of the potential output of qualified occupational therapists over the next three years.

Fertility

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information he has on how many men and women have received medical help for infertility in the last year for which figures are available;

(2) if he will indicate which district health authorities provide (a) ovarian scanning, (b) radio-immune assay service, (c) artificial insemination, (d) IVF and (e) GIFT.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The provision of infertility services is a matter for individual health authorities to decide in the light of local needs and priorities.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many district health authorities no longer provide sterilisation operations on social grounds; and if he will name these authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information about the provision of sterilisation operations is not routinely collected. Regional and district general managers were recently reminded of existing guidance which makes it clear that male and female sterilisation operations should be available under the NHS on both family planning and medical grounds.

Pain Relief

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now take steps to ensure that adequate data are collected within the NHS concerning pain relief; and what approaches he has had from the Pain Society on this matter.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on pain relief is not collected centrally because it is not a recognised medical specialty.

Pregnancy Testing

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which district health authorities do not provide routine pregnancy testing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Housing and Health

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of the relationship between standards of housing and health.

Mr. Waldegrave: A range of environmental factors, including poor housing conditions, can have an adverse effect on health. "Health of the Nation", published on 4 June, a copy of which is available in the Library, sets out proposals for improving standards of health and includes details of action the Government have already taken to improve housing conditions.

Miscarriage Association

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to support the Miscarriage Association; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Miscarriage Association provides valuable support to many women who have had the misfortune to suffer a miscarriage. In recognition of its work we have recently awarded the association an increased core grant of £10,000 per annum and a project grant of £5,000 per annum. Both grants are for three years. The project grant is intended to help the Miscarriage Association improve the service it provides to ethnic minority communities.

Breast Screening

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the relevance to the United Kingdom breast screening programme of the results of the Canadian trial of breast screening.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The adverse results of the reported Canadian trial have no direct relevance to the NHS breast screening programme. These research results relate to women under 50 while the United Kingdom programme covers women aged 50 and over. There is considerable international research evidence that in older, post-menopausal, women mammographic screening, followed by appropriate treatment where necessary, can reduce mortality from breast cancer by about a quarter in the age group screened. Women who are invited to attend for screening should do so.

Death Rates

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish tables showing the death rate trends for coronary heart disease, stroke and cancer in each social class on the same basis of sex and age-group as that provided in annexes A, B and C of the document entitled, "The Health of the Nation";

(2) if he will publish tables showing the death rate trends for coronary heart disease, stroke and cancer of each national health service region in England, showing males and females separately and distinguishing age groups in the same manner as annexes A, B and C of the document entitled, "The Health of the Nation"; and if he will give the average trends on the same basis for England as a whole over the same period.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Child Employment Legislation

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his estimate of the number of schoolchildren working part-time who are in breach of child employment legislation regulations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is his estimate of the number of schoolchildren working part-time who are in breach of child employment legislation/regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The available information relating to prosecutions and convictions for the illegal employment of children in different areas of employment is shown in the tables.

(a) Non-industrial undertakings

Figures notified to the Home Office for prosecutions and convictions in England and Wales under sections 18, 19 and 20 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933:

Year	Prosecutions	Convictions
1979	23	18

GP Fundholders (Contracts)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions exist on the freedom of general practitioner fundholders and national health service consultants to consider contracts along the lines of those contracted by Trafalgar Medical Services in Sheffield; and what monitoring his Department proposes to undertake of such arrangements.

Mr. Dorrell: General practice fundholders are free to place contracts for the limited range of hospital services covered by the fundholding scheme with providers who they consider will give the best care to their patients.

Where general practice fundholders wish to contract with a non-NHS provider with which any member of the practice is connected, the National Health Service (Fund-holding Practices) (General) Regulations 1991 require the practice to obtain the written consent of the regional health authority. Regional health authorities are expected to consider whether such proposals will provide a proper quality of care for patients and value for money compared with the alternatives available.

HIV (Anonymised Screening)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of people tested for HIV in the programme of anonymised screening at drug dependency units, for each of the health authorities participating in the programme; and what was the date on which the programme began in each authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Voluntary unlinked anonymous HIV antibody surveillance of saliva specimens from injecting drug users at a range of centres including drug dependency units began in December 1989 in London and in January 1990 outside London. The results will be published shortly.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give his latest estimate of the number of pregnant women who have been tested for HIV in the programme of unlinked anonymised screening of (a) rubella blood samples, (b) Guthrie cards and (c) in total, for each of the health authorities participating in the programme; and if he will give the dates of commencement of the programmes in each authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Unlinked anonymous surveillance of leftover blood samples from women attending antenatal clinics began in early 1990 in centres in inner London and in other districts in the Thames regions. In districts outside the Thames regions the programme began in mid to late 1990. At 22 May 1991, a total of 32,979 samples from women in inner London, 20,133 samples from women in other districts in the Thames regions and 21,144 samples from women in districts outside the Thames regions had been tested. Information about the number of Guthrie cards tested is not available centrally. The Guthrie card survey is not part of the Government's programme of suveys but is funded by the Medical Research Council and co-ordinated by the Institute of Child Health.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give his latest estimate of the number of hospital in-patients who have been tested for HIV in the programme of unlinked anonymised screening, for each of the health authorities participating in the programme; and if he will give the dates of commencement of the programme in each authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A feasibility study of unlinked anonymised HIV surveillance of hospital patients began in two centres in February 1991. Sera are stored and will be tested in batches. No blood has yet been tested.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the total number of people screened for HIV in the programme of unlinked anonymised screening (a) by each of the health authorities participating in the programme and (b) in total.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of people screened for HIV in the programme of anonymised HIV surveys is given in the following table.

	Number
Ante natal clinics to 22 May 1991
South-West Thames RHA	9,732
South-East Thames RHA	15,121
North-East Thames RHA	20,113
North-West Thames RHA	8,146
Yorkshire RHA	15,979
North Western RHA	5,165
Genito urinary medicine clinics to 24 May 1991
2 London clinics	5,085
4 clinics outside London	6,610
Saliva swabs from injecting drug users
The results of this survey are not yet available but will be published soon.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of people tested for HIV in the programme of anonymised screening at genito-urinary medicine clinics, for each of the health authorities participating in the programme; and what was the date on which the programme began in each authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The studies in genito-urinary medicine clinics began in spring of 1990 in two clinics in London and later that year in four clinics outside London. At 24 May 1991, a total of 5,085 samples for people attending clinics in London, and 6,610 samples from people attending clinics outside London had been tested.

Kidney Dialysis

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the numbers of people receiving kidney dialysis treatment in the age brackets (a) 0 to 20 years, (b) 21 to 40 years, (c) 41 to 60 years and (d) 61 to 80 years, or comparable age divisions.

Mr. Dorrell: The table gives estimates of the numbers of people receiving dialysis treatment according to 20-year age bands as at 31 December 1990.

Age	Number
Under 20	349
21 to 40	2,163
41 to 60	3,233
61 to 80	1,907
Over 80	101

The figures are based on returns from renal units in 1990 adjusted to take account of the response rate and apportioned according to the age distribution of services in 1989.

Blood Transfusion Service

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the relationship between the blood transfusion service and the national health service hospital trusts; whether it is intended to give the service its own trust status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The establishment of NHS trusts has had no effect on the relationship between hospitals and the regional transfusion centres—RTCs—which continue to supply blood to all hospitals on a basis of clinical need. There are no current applications from RTCs for trust status.

Kidney Transplant Operations

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of a kidney transplant operation; who bears the cost; and what part of it is made up of booking the operating theatre.

Mr. Dorrell: The average annual cost of a kidney transplantation in the year of operation is around £10,000. For NHS patients the cost is borne by the health authority responsible for the care of the patient. The cost of booking the operating theatre is not separately identifiable.

Prescription Charges

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much it would cost to make the long-term sick in receipt of invalidity benefit automatically exempt from prescription charges;

(2) how many invalidity benefit recipients are not entitled to free prescriptions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

East Birmingham Hospital

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people had been waiting for more than a year for an operation in East Birmingham hospital on (a) 31 December 1989 and (b) 31 March 1991;

(2) what percentage of the total on in-patient waiting lists at East Birmingham hospital on 31 March 1990 had been waiting for (a) more than one year and (b) more than two years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Waiting time information by individual hospital is not available centrally. The hon. Member might like to contact Mr. Nigel Thompson, the chairman of East Birmingham health authority, for details.

Smoking

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's assessment of the medical effects of smoking 20 cigarettes a day.

Mr. Dorrell: Cigarette consumption at this level results in a serious risk of developing a whole range of life-threatening diseases. The smoker's chances of contracting lung cancer, chronic obstructive airways disease and coronary heart disease are much enhanced. In addition there is an increased risk of contracting the following diseases:

- Cerebrovascular disease
- Cancer of the lip, oral cavity and pharynx
- Cancer of the oesophagus
- Cancer of the larynx
- Cancer of the pancreas
- Peripheral vascular disease.

There is also evidence that other conditions are associated with smoking, including:

- Low birthweight babies (where the mother smokes during pregnancy)
- Aortic aneurysm
- Cancer of the bladder
- Cancer of the cervix
- Cancer of the stomach
- Cancer of the kidney
- Peptic ulcer.

National Association of Young People in Care

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his policy with regard to the recognition of the National Association of Young People in Care as a representative body;

(2) what steps he is taking to offer financial support to the National Association of Young People in Care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The association is one of a range of voluntary organisations which is routinely consulted on policy and practice developments. The association has submitted an application for funding in the current financial year. A meeting to discuss this was held with representatives of National Association of Young People in Care on 9 May when further information was sought about their proposed new structure. A final decision about funding will be made shortly.

Chernobyl Nuclear Accident

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representation Her Majesty's Government had at the conference hosted by the International Atomic Energy Agency between 21 to 24 May in Vienna, on the IAEA international advisory committee report on the consequences of the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear accident; whether any United Kingdom Government scientists were involved in the study; and what study has been made of the report in regard to the applicability of its conclusions and recommendations to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Dorrell: Participants at the conference comprised a number of people from the United Kingdom including a doctor from the Department of Health and a scientist from the National Radiological Protection Board. Both attended in their capacity as members of the International Advisory Committee—IAC—whose membership was drawn from independent scientists and organisations with an interest in radiological protection and epidemiology. Also in attendance was an observer from the nuclear installations inspectorate.

The Government are currently considering the report from the IAC and will take account of any factors which may be relevant to the position in the United Kingdom.

NHS Complaints Procedure

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether patients attending private consultants' clinics at general pracitioner fundholders' premises will be entitled to use national health service complaints procedures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 23 May 1991]: Where the services of a consultant are purchased for the patient of a fundholding practice out of the practice fund and the consultant is acting in a private capacity, a complaint against the referring doctor may be pursued under the Naitonal Health Service (Service Committees and Tribunal) Regulations 1974. If in these circumstances the patient wishes to pursue a complaint against the consultant, he would need to do so, if there was no possibility of conciliation directly with the consultant, either through the General Medical Council or the legal process depending on the nature of the complaint. Private care can of course be purchased for NHS patients by any commissioner of care, whether a district health authority or a GP fundholder.

HIV Tests

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the cumulative totals of positive HIV antibody test results reported by each health authority on (a) 31 March 1989, (b) 30 September 1989, (c) 31 March 1990, (d) 30 September 1990 and (e) 31 March 1991.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information available to the Department on the cumulative totals of positive HIV antibody test results reported by each health authority is given in the tables.

WALES

Extra-contractual Referrals

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of Welsh health authorities' current budgets are allocated for extra-contractual referrals.

(2) what is the estimated expenditure by the Welsh health authorities on extra-contractual referrals in April and May; and how it relates to the budget set aside by those authorities for such referrals.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Health authorities have made provision in their budgets for the cost of anticipated extra-contractual referrals—ECRs. The amounts in each case depend on the expected pattern of referrals and the extent to which these have been covered by contracts. Not all authorities have reached final agreements on contracts and which services will be provided "off contract". It is therefore not possible to provide the information in the form requested at present. Authorities have been asked to give details of ECRs for the first two months of this year and to indicate whether or not their provision is adequate to meet the actual demand assessed on this basis. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman when this information is available.

A465

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects all outstanding statutory procedures on the planned A465 Glynneath-Aberdulais improvement to be completed.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Provided the outstanding issues in the inspector's report of the public inquiry can be satisfactorily resolved, statutory procedures could be completed later this year.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the nature of the problem which has caused extended statutory procedures on the planned A465 Glynneath-Aberdulais improvement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The inspector who held the public inquiry into the scheme recommended significant alterations which have required further investigation and consultation with a number of interests.

Ophthalmology

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policy considerations led to his decision to set up a second ophthalmology treatment centre in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The additional treatment centre intended for Bridgend is proposed as a result of the large ophthalmology waiting lists. The centre will provide an accessible and cost effective means of reducing the lists in south and west Wales.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had (a) with the Royal College of Ophthalmologists and (b) with local consultant ophthalmologists in Wales concerning medical follow-up responsibilities for patients on the ophthalmology waiting lists receiving eye surgery at the existing Bangor and proposed Bridgend treatment centres.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Our officials discussed follow-up and other procedures with the Royal College of Ophthalmologists prior to establishing the Bangor centre. Patients attend two follow-up consultations arranged with the centre in line with the guidelines of the royal college.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what account he took of the recommendations of the Royal College of Ophthalmology on staffing requirements per 100,000 people, prior to his decision on a second ophthalmology treatment centre in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The decision to establish a second ophthalmic treatment centre was taken following consideration of the particular waiting times in this speciality and local circumstances and opportunities. Detailed staffing requirements will be settled in discussion with the host authority.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what length of contract will be offered to consultants to be employed in the ophthalmology treatment centre to be opened in Bridgend; and how many consultants will be employed.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Staffing levels for the new ophthalmology treatment centre, Bridgend are currently under discussion with the host district health authority. Individual contracts for staff at the centre will be the responsibility of Mid Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he now has to reduce waiting lists in ophthalmology and general surgery in the catchment area of South Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Bids for funds under the waiting times initiative for 1991-92 have been invited from all health authorities in Wales. South Glamorgan DHA is able to refer general surgery patients to the treatment centre at Bridgend and ophthalmology patients to the Bangor treatment centre and will also be able to refer patients to the new cataract centre when it becomes operational.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations with ophthalmologists he undertook prior to making his decision on the setting up of a second ophthalmology treatment centre for Wales at Bridgend general hospital.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The decision to establish a second ophthalmology treatment centre at Bridgend was taken after consideration of the waiting list position in ophthalmology in south Wales and local circumstances and opportunities.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the reorganisation of the Forestry Commission in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government have endorsed the proposal by the forestry commissioners that they should carry out an internal reorganisation of the commission in order to achieve a clearer distinction between those staff concerned with its regulatory and advisory duties as a Government Department and those engaged in the management of its forests. The commissioners plan to implement this reorganisation by 1 April 1992.

The forestry commissioners have decided that the headquarters' offices of the Forestry Authority and the Forestry Enterprise in Wales will remain in Aberystwyth. They are also proposing that the commission's forests in Wales should continue to be managed by the existing eight forest district offices, but that there should be three new local offices to administer the authority's functions. The details of the reorganisation are currently being discussed with staff representatives.

Local Plans

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he intends to take to ensure that local plans are prepared for (a) Alyn and Deeside district council, (b) Carmarthen district council, (c) Ceredigion district council, (d) Glyndwr district council, (e) Montgomeryshire district council, (f) Neath borough council, (g) Preach district council and (h) South Pembrokeshire district council.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The preparation and adoption of local plans by planning authorities is not a statutory requirement. It is for each authority to decide which parts of their area should be covered by local plans. Planning policy guidance (PPG) note 12 of November 1988 and PPG15 (Wales) of October 1990 urged district planning authorities to extend and complete their local plan coverage. The Planning and Compensation Bill, which is currently before Parliament, includes a provision which will place a mandatory duty on each district council and each national park authority to prepare and adopt a single local plan covering the whole of its area.

British Rail (Meetings)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the dates on which Ministers at the Welsh Office have met the chairman and other senior executives of British Rail during the past 18 months, noting the main issues raised at each such meeting.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend or I met the chairman or other directors of British Rail on 10 May, 13 June and 28 November 1990 and on 8 February, 12 February and 13 May 1991. We discussed a wide range of issues concerning rail services for Wales.

Dentists (Patient Care)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from dentists in Wales since the implementation of the new contract on patient care; and what were the main concerns expressed.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Department has received two representations from individual dentists about the new contract. The representations concerned the treatment of child patients in relation to the community dental service and alleged decline in gross income.

Old Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools built wholly or mainly before 1903 there are in each of the local education authorities of Wales; and what plans he has to rebuild them.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Details of the ages of school buildings are not held centrally. Reponsibility for the provision, repair and maintenance of school buildings rests with local education authorities.

Education and Training

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the proportion of persons aged 16 years leaving full-time education or training in (a) 1989-90 and (b) 1990-91.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No information is collected centrally from the further education sector about 16-year-old leavers. The school leavers survey collects information about leavers from the school sector; however 1989-90 information is not yet available and the survey for 1990-91 has yet to commence.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet leaders in Wales of the Alzheimer's Disease Society.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Department is in regular and close contact with the Wales development officer of the Alzheimer's Disease Society.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial aid he gives to the Alzheimer's Disease Society.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: A total of £70,000 in 1991-92, including funding under the elderly initiative and the mental illness strategy and to support the work of the society's development officer in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research moneys he gives to the Alzheimer's Disease Society in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: No money is specifically earmarked to the Alzheimer's Disease Society for research. However, the Government are contributing towards a collaborative study led by the Institute of Human Ageing, Liverpool into the incidence of dementia. As part of this, some £30,000 each year is being provided for that part of the research being undertaken at University college of North Wales, Bangor.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what help he proposes to give to carers concerning Alzheimer's disease in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Welsh Office-led all-Wales mental illness strategy and our comprehensive programme of action to develop social care more generally are intended to promote the development of services which provide care for those suffering from Alzheimer's disease, including appropriate support for families and friends who contribute to care. These initiatives are supported by record levels of resources, including £4·6 million in 1991-92 for the mental illness strategy—more than double last year's allocation; and over £4 million under the elderly initiative, the new scheme to promote more flexible forms of community care for elderly people and those with sensory or physical disabilities, and in funding for voluntary organisations, including the Alzheimer's Disease Society.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of sufferers from Alzheimer's disease in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Based on an estimate derived from the NHS Health Advisory Service's publication "The Rising Tide—Developing Services for Mental Illness in Old Age" published in November 1982, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, there are approximately 28,000—9,500 males and 18,500 females—suffering from Alzheimer's disease in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many carers of Alzheimer's disease sufferers there are in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The precise number of carers is not known, but we recognise that many people contribute in different ways to the support of this group of vulnerable people.

Alder Hey Royal Children's Hospital

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet parents of children of Deeside, Clwyd, who are awaiting heart surgery or who are deemed likely to need surgery at Alder Hey royal children's hospital.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I have no plans to intervene in contractual arrangements between health authorities in Wales and their chosen provider units.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children from (a) Clwyd, (b) Gwynedd and (c) Powys have had heart surgery performed at the Alder Hey royal children's hospital.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Data provided by Mersey regional health authority show that no children from Clwyd, Gwynedd or Powys had surgical operations on the heart at Alder Hey royal children's hospital in 1989-90, the only year for which data are available. This information is based only on those cases where the hospital episode has finished, and complete clinical details are available.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money, as a down payment, health authorities in Wales are required to pay to the appropriate health authority, to which Alder Hey hospital answers, before operations are performed or before youngsters are placed on the waiting list.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None. District health authorities strike contractual agreements, including with Alder Hey hospital, under which they agree to make regular payments for the care provided or make individual extra-contractual arrangements, mainly for emergency cases, which incur payment after treatment has been provided.

Dogs

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of all breeds of dogs in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not held centrally.

Consultants

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new consultants were appointed in 1989 to work at the treatment centres at (a) Ysbyty Gwynedd, Bangor, (b) general surgery at Bridgend and (c) elective orthopaedics at Rhydlafar.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The orthopaedic treatment centre, Rhydlafar, was the only centre to become operational during 1989. One additional consultant was appointed.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what lengths of contracts were given to the consultant surgeons employed in the treatment centres in (a) ophthalmology at Ysbyty Gwynedd, Bangor, (b) general surgery at Bridgend and (c) elective orthopaedics at Rhydlafar.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Department has contracts with the host district health authorities for the provision of treatment at the treatment centres. Contracts for individual members of staff are the management responsibility of those host health authorities.

Employment Training

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the number of employment training places for each of the counties of Wales in 1990-91 and 1991-92, indicating the difference over the years by number and by percentage.

Mr. David Hunt: Information on the number of ET places provided for each of the Welsh counties in 1990-91 and 1991-92 is not available. The Government now fund each training and enterprise council for employment training according to the number of training weeks delivered, and the outputs achieved. It is for TECs to determine, in the light of local circumstances, how many places to purchase.

Residential Homes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many residential homes for the elderly mentally infirm or very dependent he has visited in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett [holding answer 4 June 1991]: None, but I have recently visited a number of hospitals which have facilities for elderly mentally infirm patients, including Bronllys hospital, Brecon and Valley hospital, Anglesey.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Eye Surgery

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current waiting time before a patient receives an operation for cataracts at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: Waiting times vary from two to three weeks for urgent cases to over two years for a few non-urgent cases.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are currently on the waiting list for cataract operations at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: The estimated number of patients is 2,900.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new members of staff have been appointed to the Fair Employment Commission since 1 January 1991; and how many of them were (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholics and (c) other religions.

Mr. Needham: The commission has declared its intention to make monitoring information available on a yearly basis. To make such information available more frequently and covering shorter periods could infringe the confidentiality requirements of the Fair Employment Acts by disclosing the religious beliefs of identifiable individuals.

Cost Limits

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the 1991-92 running cost limit for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments.

Mr. Brooke: The running cost limit for 1991-92 for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is £652·6 million. Details of the provision for individual Northern Ireland Departments are set out in the Northern Ireland estimates which were laid before the House today.

Strangford Lough

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for the participation in the management of Strangford lough of persons owning land along the lough shore.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 10 June 1991]: On 6 June 1991, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland issued a consultation paper on the future management structure for Strangford lough and on a marine nature reserve. It is being circulated widely. Officials will arrange meetings to explain the proposals further. The proposed management structure would comprise an executive committee of representatives of bodies with statutory powers in the area and of an advisory committee representing local interests. These will include lough shore land owners and other local residents, lough-users and conservationists. The closing date for comments on the consultation paper is 18 October 1991. The Department will then produce a policy document.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drugs Offences

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women are serving sentences in British prisons under section 3 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971; and how many of these are deportees.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 30 June 1990, a provisional figure of about 320 females were serving sentences for all types of drugs offences in prison service establishments. The only readily available information on the types of drug offences does not separately identify males and females. It is published annually in Prison Statistics England and Wales (table 1(a) of the latest volume, for 1989, Cm. 1221), copies of which are in the Library. Information on whether they were liable for deportation on completion of sentence is not available centrally.

Electoral Arrangements

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Paisley, South (Mr. McMaster) of 14 May, Official Report, columns 71-72, if he will set out the minimum notice which the proposed advertising campaign for information regarding absent voting will give to electors; and if he will make a statement on discussions he has held with electoral registration officers on this matter.

Mrs. Rumbold: In the unlikely event that Parliament was dissolved on the same day as that on which a general election was announced, the proposed advertisements would appear in newspapers on a Wednesday, and applications for an absent vote would have to be returned by the following Monday. On past experience, however, electors will probably have about 12 days' notice in which to apply for an absent vote.

The proposed campaign will be similar to one which ran before the 1987 general election and will take account of comments received from electoral registration officers following that campaign.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out in summary the information he has on procedures for absent voting at general elections in member states of the European Community outlining criteria used for registration of absent voting for various grounds such as (a) ill health, (b) employment, (c) absence from home and (d) overseas residence.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Age of Consent

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the ages of consent for heterosexual men and women and homosexual men and women in Britain and in each of the European countries, East and West.

Mr. John Patten: We do not have the full information requested, but I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 4 June to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis), a copy of which has been placed in the Library. This gives details of the ages of consent in European Community states.

Domestic Violence

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many men received a custodial sentence for domestic violence in the latest year for which figures are available; and what was the average length of sentence;

(2) how many incidents of domestic violence were reported in the last year for which figures are available; and how many resulted in (a) a charge, (b) a prosecution and (c) a conviction.

Mr. John Patten: Information collected centrally on court proceedings is not in sufficient detail to distinguish offences of domestic violence from other violent offences. Some information on domestic violence as a component of offences of violence against the person is given in the Home Office Research Bulletin 27, a copy of which is in the Library.

Asylum Seekers

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to consult non-governmental organisations about the reform of arrangements for asylum seekers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are in regular contact with organisations active in the asylum field and their views will be taken into account in the Government's continuing review of their arrangements. If decisions are taken with direct implications for outside organisations they will, of course, be discussed with them.

Obscene Telephone Calls

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many obscene telephone calls were reported in the last year for which figures are available; how many gave rise to (a) a charge, (b) a prosecution and (c) a conviction; what plans he has to review the present maximum penalty for this offence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The figures requested are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information collected centrally does not distinguish making an obscene telephone call from other offences under the Telecommunications Act 1984. The maximum penalty for this offence will be increased from a fine of £400 to a fine of £1,000 by fine upratings in the Criminal Justice Bill.

Homosexual Offences

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost to the prison service of gaoling the men who are sentenced each year for the consenting homosexual offences of soliciting, buggery, procuring and indecency, including the cost of keeping these men in custody for the full terms of their sentences.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1989—the latest information available—178 men were received into prison service establishments following conviction for buggery and indecency between males. At 30 June 1989 the population held for such offences was 375.

The population breakdown between prison types and the relevant cost per week (1989-90) was as follows:

Type of establishment	Number	Cost per week £
Local/remand	156	309
Training prison: open	11	218
Closed	198	257
Young Offender Institution	10	346
	375	280

Information is not readily available for the length of sentence given or served for such offences. It is therefore not possible to estimate the cost of keeping these men in prison for the full terms of their sentence.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the annual police and court costs involved in prosecuting gay and bisexual men for consenting homosexual soliciting, buggery, procuring and indecency, including men prosecuted for homosexual indecency under byelaws, public order legislation and common law.

Mr. John Patten: Prosecution costs are not available in the form requested.

Women Prisoners

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide the latest figures on numbers of suicides, attempted suicides and self-mutilation inflicted by prisoners at each of the women's prisons.

Mrs. Rumbold: Since 1980, seven women have died at their own hand while in prison service custody. The establishments involved were Holloway, in 1981 and 1985, Risley, in 1986, 1987 and twice in 1989, and Durham in 1990. Accurate information on the incidence of attempted suicide and deliberate self-injury by prisoners is not available. It is planned to introduce new arrangements for reporting all such incidents, in line with a recommendation made by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons in his report on suicide and self-harm in prison.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the latest year for which there are figures (a) how many women were sent to prison for violent offences, (b) what percentage this is of the total female prison population, (c) what percentage this is of the total prison population and (d) what percentage this is of the population of the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Rumbold: Excluding those committed in default of payment of a fine, 380 females were received into prison service establishments in England and Wales in 1989 under sentence for offences of violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery. On 30 June 1989 the population of females serving sentences for these offences was 323 and formed 18 per cent. of the female prison population and 0·7 per cent. of the male and female prison population. They also represented six per million of the estimated resident male and female population of England and Wales.

Pornography

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effects the proposed implementation of the single European market in 1992 will have on the importation of sexually explicit material classified as pornography; and whether the Government will seek special powers to maintain the status quo whereby sexually explicit material which is freely available in other EC member states will continue to be excluded from the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: The introduction of the single market will entail changes in the nature of our customs controls with a greater emphasis on selective checks and intelligence. However, it will not require us to relax our prohibitions on the supply of obscene material or our internal controls on display and supply.

Deportation

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women, by nationality, are currently awaiting deportation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The figures in the following table relate to those currently awaiting deportation as the subject of a deportation order made under section 3(6) of the Immigration Act 1971, where a recommendation for deportation made by a court was part of a custodial sentence; under section 3(5)(b) of that Act where deportation on conducive grounds will follow a custodial sentence; or under section 3(5)(a) of that Act where a woman has remained beyond her permitted stay or has breached conditions attached to her stay. The information on deportation orders made under section 3(6) and 3(5)(b) relates to the period since 1 January 1988, while the third category relates to the period since 1 June 1990.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women have been returned to Nigeria; and how many are awaiting deportation to Nigeria since the introduction of decree 33.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since 10 October 1990, when the Nigerian Government promulgated decree 33, 82 women have been returned to Nigeria under deportation powers, including 59 who chose to make supervised departures; and 27 Nigerian women are currently the subject of deportation orders. None of those who have left was affected by decree 33. Two of those awaiting deportation committed drug offences in this country on or after 10 October 1990 and may therefore be liable to prosecution on their return to Nigeria.

Prisoners

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of detaining (a) a category A prisoner and (b) a category B prisoner.

Mrs. Rumbold: During 1989-90—the latest figures available—the average cost per week of detaining an inmate in a typical dispersal prison, the type of prison in which category A inmates are normally held, was £575. The cost per week in category B training prisons was £318.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is a requirement for prisoners to be notified of decisions by the parole board in writing.

Mrs. Rumbold: There is no such requirement.

Mr. Terry Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is responsible for communicating the decisions of the parole board to prisoners at Sudbury prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: All parole decisions are notified by the parole unit to the governors of the establishments; they are then responsible for informing prisoners.

Immigration

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigrants there have been from the Indian sub-continent since the passage of the Immigration Act 1981 each year since 1982.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of persons from the Indian sub-continent accepted for settlement in the United Kingdom in the years 1982-90 is published in table 15 of the Home Office Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1989" (Cm. 1124), and in table 1 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 3/91 "Control of Immigration: Statistics—Third and Fourth Quarters and Year 1990". A copy of both publications is in the Library.

Gambling

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been considered by his Department on fruit machine gambling by young people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The results of the Home Office research study "Amusement Machines: Dependency and Delinquency", published in July 1988, showed that very few young people are at risk of becoming dependent on amusement machines and that there is no clear evidence of any association between the playing of machines and delinquency. We have received no reliable new evidence to contradict these results and remain of the view that further legislative controls are not justified at present.

Jury Vetting

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate for the years 1988, 1989 and 1990 the number of occasions in which the police national computer has been accessed for the purposes of jury vetting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The purposes for accessing the police national computer are not recorded centrally. However, statistical returns from chief officers of police show that under arrangement described in Home Office circular 43/1988, criminal record checks were made of the following number of people summoned for jury service:

	Number
1988	1,152
1989	5,602
1990	4,146

Prison Sentences

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list how many men and women received life sentences in England and Wales for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is given in the table. Data for 1990 are not yet available.

Number of males and females who received 'Life' sentences 1979 to 1989 England and Wales

Year	Males	Females
1979	149	8
1980	181	2
1981	153	7
1982	206	9
1983	136	4
1984	138	6
1985	164	6
1986	183	9
1987	169	5
1988	206	12
1989	176	11

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of sentence served by men and women in England and Wales for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The readily available information is published annually in Prison Statistics England and Wales (tables 3.15, 3.16, 4.15, 4.16, 5.15 and 5.16 of the latest volume, for 1989, Cm. 1221), a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men and women were released on licence from a life sentence in England and Wales for each year from 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The readily available information relates to prisoners released from prison service establishments and is published annually in Prison Statistics England and Wales (table 8.5 of the latest volume, for 1989, Cm. 1221), a copy of which is in the Library.

Mental Health Act

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men and women in England and Wales were given an absolute discharge under the Mental Health Act for each year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The number of males and females in England and Wales who were given an absolute discharge, by tribunal under part V of the Mental Health Act 1983 or by the Secretary of State under sections 41 to 49 of the 1983 Act and 65 to 74 of the 1959 Acts, between 1980 and 1989—the last year for which information is available—is given in the table.

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989

Dog Attacks

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported attacks have taken place on people by dogs in each of the last five years for which figures are available; how many of these resulted in hospital treatment; and how many resulted in death.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the incidence of injury to humans caused by attacks by dogs during each of the last five years; and what information he can provide on the breeds of dogs involved.

Mrs. Angela Rumbold [holding answer 20 May 1991]: As there is no requirement to report a dog attack, or injuries caused by dog attacks, statistics on them are not collected centrally. In the last year to May 1991, the number of incidents recorded in London by the Metropolitan police were as follows:

	Number
German Shepherds (Alsatians)	200
Pit bull terriers	126
Rottweilers	109
Staffordshire bull terriers	43
Undefined cross-breeds	38
Dobermann pinschers	33
English bull terriers	27
Labradors	23
Collies	13
Jack Russell terriers	6
Greyhounds	6
Yorkshire terriers	3
Great Dane	1
Husky	1
Irish wolf hound	1
Rhodesian Ridgeback	1
Total	631

SCOTLAND

Ambulances (Accident/Emergency Journeys)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average time taken for an accident/emergency patient to be taken by ambulance from East Lothian to Edinburgh royal infirmary; what is the average daily number of such journeys; and whether any patients have died doing such journeys since the closure of the Roodlands casualty unit.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On average, 45 minutes and nine journeys each day. Roodlands casualty unit did not treat patients suffering major trauma or life-threatening conditions and such patients were always conveyed to Edinburgh. There has been no change therefore in the journey time for such patients. The Scottish ambulance service has no evidence that any patient has died because of the journey time to hospital.

Local Government

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations he has received about the proposals for change in local government;

(2) if he will make a further statement on his proposals for a new structure for local government.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer to the reply given by my right hon. Friend on 15 May. A consultation paper setting out the case for change and the principles to be applied in moving towards a single-tier system of local government throughout Scotland will be issued shortly.

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what future role he proposes for Strathclyde regional council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: As the hon. Member knows, the existing system of local government in Scotland is under review. My right hon. Friend will be issuing a consultation paper on the structure of local government in Scotland shortly. Strathclyde regional council, together with other councils and interested organisations, will be invited to comment.

Green Belt

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the percentage of land designated as green-belt areas in (a) Scotland, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Renfrew district.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The percentages of land designated as green belt in the areas mentioned are:

	per cent.
Scotland	1·7
Strathclyde	7·5
Renfrew	78·3

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the criteria used to designate green belt land in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The criteria for the designation of green belt land are set out in SDD circular 24/1985. It is for local plans to establish the exact boundaries of green belts within the strategic framework set by the circular and structure plan policies.

Drinking Water

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of nitrates recorded in Scottish drinking water in each of the last 20 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is not available in the form requested. Nitrate levels in drinking water differ from one supply to another and may vary seasonally. Surveys carried out in 1975 and 1985 showed that only a very small percentage of the total number of Scottish supply sources contained more than 25 mg of nitrate per litre. Eight of the 12 Scottish water authorities reported that no sources exceeded that figure. All water put into supply was within the EC limit of 50 mg per litre. In 1990 a few small rural supplies were recorded as occasionally exceeding this limit. In these cases nitrate levels are being reduced by blending with other water until the sources can be replaced. Information on nitrate levels in individual supply zones is included in the public records of water quality which water authorities have been required to maintain since 1 July 1990.

Operations

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many operations were cancelled or postponed by Scottish health boards in each month from January 1990 to March 1991.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not held centrally.

Disability

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are registered (a) blind, (b) deaf or (c) disabled in (i) Scotland, (ii) Strathclyde and (iii) Renfrew district.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Local authorities in Scotland are required to inform themselves of the number of chronically sick and disabled people in their areas but are not required to, and in practice do not, keep registers for this purpose. They do, however, receive information on the number of blind persons voluntarily registered either with local societies for blind people or with the local authorities themselves. The number of blind persons so recorded at 31 March 1990 was 6,709 in Strathclyde, and 14,120 in Scotland. I have no information in respect of Renfrew district.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the mean salary of disabled adults in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 June 1991]: There is no information available on the mean salary of disabled adults in Scotland. The survey "Disabled people in the labour market" conducted on behalf of the Employment Service by Social and Community Planning Research Ltd. and published in report "Employment and Handicap" in June 1990 showed that in Great Britain as a whole in 1989 the median earnings of people with disabilities was in the range £150 to £199 per week. The survey cannot provide a reliable estimate for Scotland.

Paisley, North

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are over the age of 18 years in the constituency of Paisley, North.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Whisky

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of people employed in the manufacture and distribution of Scotch whisky in each of the last three years.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Employment figures are available for plants manufacturing Scotch whisky as their principal product. No separate figures are available for transport services relating to just the whisky industry.

The table shows manufacturing employment in the whisky and other related industries in Scotland in plants employing 11 or more employees in 1987, 1988 and 1989, the latest year for which figures are available.

Manufacturing employment in the whisky and other related industries

Labour Statistics

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss employment levels in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. Friend has arranged to meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress General Council on 26 July to discuss economic and other issues.

Education (Early Leavers)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is for each year since 1974 the number of students in (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) higher education in Scotland who left their respective courses before completion; and if he will give in each case the respective percentages for males and females.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 June 1991]: This information is not held centrally.

Child Immunisation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will set up a joint working party with the British Medical Association in Scotland to review the impact of the new child immunisation targets in GP contracts on small rural practices; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will now consider allowing an element of discretion in the setting of immunisation targets for children in small practices which find it impossible to meet the current target levels in the new GP contract;

(3) how many representations he has received from small GP practices which are unable to reach immunisation targets for children because of the small number of children suitable for vaccination in their patient lists.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 June 1991]: These matters are governed by the statement of fees and allowances, the terms of which are negotiated with the profession on a Great Britain basis. The health departments are at present reviewing a number of detailed aspects of the GP contract, in consultation with the profession, with the aim of improving still further the quality of general medical services. Against this background, I see no need for a joint working party on this specific issue.

My Department can trace only one such representation, made before the implementation of the new contract.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by location, the proposed 6,000 drill holes he has authorised the nuclear industry to make in Caithness, in respect of ascertaining a suitable site for a nuclear waste dump; when he expects them to report their findings; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1991]: The exact location of any shot holes, up to the maximum of 6,000 granted planning permission by my right hon. Friend, is an operational matter for the chairman of UK Nirex Ltd. He wrote to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing) on 13 May on this subject and I have placed a copy of his letter in the Library of the House. UK Nirex expects to identify its preferred site for a repository later this year.

Planning

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the planning powers of new town development corporations to be transferred to district councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 June 1991]: The Scottish new town development corporations, apart from Glenrothes, exercise certain planning powers under special development orders. It is the Government's intention, as stated in the White Paper "The Scottish New Towns—The Way Ahead" that these orders will be revoked at the time of dissolution of each development corporation. Each new town will then become integrated into the normal planning system.

Education

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report for each regional council area (a) the total money allocated for the implementation of the five to 14 years curriculum and testing in (i) training of staff and (ii) introductory and closure day courses for staff and what were the full costs of full implementation, (b) the total money allocated to appoint development officers for five to 14 years development and for development planning and information technology officers and what were the estimated costs for full implementation, (c) how many and what percentage of head teachers will be granted additional relief to cope with developments of the five to 14 years curriculum and testing and (d) what increase in per capita allowances for 1991-92 have been allocated per pupil.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 6 June 1991]: The cost of the five to 14 development programme has been met almost entirely by central Government, either directly or through support for work carried out by the primary assessment unit in the Scottish Examination Board, and by the Scottish Consultative Council on the Curriculum and the colleges of education; expenditure on the programme in 1990-91 was over £2 million, and will be at the same level in the current year.

In addition specific grant is paid at a level of 75 per cent. against expenditure by authorities on in-service teacher training for the five to 14 programme.

Per capita allowances and other forms of support for individual schools are a matter for education authorities themselves; information on these is not held centrally.

General Government support to local authorities in the form of aggregate Exchequer finance was increased for 1991-92 by 10·5 per cent. over the level in the previous year.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Paisley, North

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many single parents receive income support in the constituency of Paisley, North.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many single parents in receipt of child benefit there are in the constituency of Paisley North.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not available.

Benefits (Guidelines)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidelines he has issued to the benefits agency on the balance between maintaining the level of service to the public and cost-cutting exercises.

Miss Widdecombe: The balance between service delivery and cost is achieved through the process of agreeing aims, objectives and targets. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has agreed the aims, objectives and targets for 1991-92 with the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. These are set out in the agency's business plan which is published and available in the Library. The targets cover service delivery, efficiency, budgetary performance and customer satisfaction.

Family Credit

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average delay that a claimant for family credit experiences between applying for the benefit and receiving an award; how many claimants there are for family credit; and what measures are proposed to improve service to the low paid and people in need.

Mr. Jack: The administration of family credit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Community Care Grant

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidelines exist for the degree of priority to be given to young people leaving homeless hostels, for social fund community care grant purposes; and what study he has made of the practice of his Department's Keighley, Halifax and Skipton offices in this regard.

Mr. Scott: The guidance issued by the Secretary of State referring to social fund payments is set out in the "Social Fund Manual", a copy of which is in the Library. The Department's district office managers also have responsibility to issue guidance that reflects local needs. A social fund officer is not bound by the guidance issued by the Secretary of State or the district manager. He may exercise his own judgment in the priority of a particular application if the circumstances dictate.

The Department's former offices at Keighley, Halifax and Skipton now form the Benefit Agency's Halifax district. No formal local study of social fund operations has taken place since the new Halifax district was formed in April 1991, but production and monitoring of local guidance is a continuous process for which the district office manager is responsible.

DEFENCE

Hunting

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details and dates in each year since 1989 when the Household Cavalry participated in foxhunting or deer hunting and with which hunts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details and dates in each year since 1989 when members of the Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment took part in fox hunting are set out in the table. No additional costs to public funds were incurred as a result of this activity.

The Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment has not participated in any deer hunt since 1989.

Date	Quorn Hunt	Belvoir Hunt	Cottesmore Hunt
October 1989	4	2	1
November 1989	8	9	2
December 1989	9	8	—

March 1990	1	1	—
September 1990	—	2	—
October 1990	9	9	2
November 1990	6	6	3
December 1990	4	5	2
January 1991	6	5	—
February 1991	6	5	—
March 1991	—	1	—

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision is made for members of the armed forces, in non-mounted units, to hunt in duty hours.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Personnel in non-mounted units are not normally permitted to hunt in duty hours. However, in exceptional circumstances and at the commanding officer's discretion it may be permitted provided there is no detriment to military tasks.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what provision is made for members of the armed forces to hunt in duty hours.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Members of mounted regiments and other military personnel who have an official requirement to ride are authorised to ride during duty hours as a means of acquiring or perfecting equestrian skills. They may participate in a range of equestrian activities including hunting.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether army personnel are permitted to use Ministry of Defence equipment in off-duty hours.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Army personnel are permitted to use MOD equipment in off-duty hours normally on payment of hire charges.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of transporting horses and riders to hunting meets in each year since 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The costs of transporting horses and riders to hunting meets cannot be readily identified. Where horses are used by Army personnel for hunting outside normal duty, the transport costs fall to the individual.

Tanks

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when his Department will announce a decision on the replacement for the Chieftain as the main battle tank for the British Army.

(2) what has caused the delay by his Department in reaching a decision on selecting a replacement for the Chieftain as the main battle tank for the British Army.

Mr. Alan Clark: As I told the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 4 June 1991, Official Report, Volume 192, columns 142-43, a wide range of factors has to be taken into account in reaching a decision as important as that on the equipment for our future main battle tank fleet. It is our intention to make a further announcement before the end of this month.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what account he will take of the likely employment consequences in the British defence industry in making his decision on the replacement main battle tank for the British Army;

(2) what account he will take of the potential value to the British defence industry of export orders for the Vickers Challenger 2 in making his decision on the replacement main battle tank for the British Army.

Mr. Alan Clark: All relevant factors will be taken into account.

Radio Mast, Coney Weston

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what purpose he is to erect at Coney Weston, Suffolk, a 100 ft tall radio mast and related buildings; what consultations he has had with local authorities and environmental bodies about the siting of the tower; when he intends to construct it; and how much it will cost.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The 30 m high tower we propose to construct at Coney Weston, Suffolk, is part of the Royal Air Force's advanced communications system known as the Boxer network. There has been full consultation with the local planning authority and a notice of proposed development submitted for consideration. We propose to commence construction of the tower later this year. It is not our practice to disclose details of individual costs which are commercial-in-confidence.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the United Kingdom is involved in the high-altitude endoatmospheric defence interceptor programme;

(2) whether the United Kingdom is involved in the development of the theatre high altitude defence system;

(3) whether the United Kingdom is involved in the extended range interceptor system for short-range defence;

(4) whether the United Kingdom is involved in the ground-based surveillance and tracking system;

(5) whether the United Kingdom is involved in the ground-based free electron laser programme in collaboration with the United States of America.

Mr. Alan Clark: All the systems referred to are elements of the United States strategic defence initiative programme. British firms and other institutions are given opportunities in all areas of the SDI programme.

Nuclear Materials

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has concerning the capability of the Soviet Union to dismantle withdrawn warheads and to manage and recycle the nuclear materials arising.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Soviet Union does not reveal what it does with the nuclear materials arising from withdrawn nuclear warheads. However, it would almost certainly have the capability to dismantle warheads and recycle the nuclear materials arising for either civil or military purposes.

BNFL (Security Vetting)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department plays any role in the security vetting of applicants for work with British Nuclear Fuels plc in respect of his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No.

Kuwait Oil Fires

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his oral answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 137, what advice he has received on the lung function of service personnel in the area of the oil fires in Kuwait and from which experts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The monitoring of the lung function of our personnel is undertaken by our medical team in Kuwait, together with a military public health physician.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now seek information about the lung conditions of dissected sheep in Kuwait.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The presence of atmospheric pollutants in Kuwait is well known and effective measures are therefore in place to monitor the health of our personnel.

Service Personnel and Ministry Staff

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list the number of (a) service men and (b) departmental civilians in each of the regions of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The latest available figures are given in the table on page 32 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990, volume 2.

Infantry Training

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many man training days infantry battalions are allocated on average for (a) 1990-91 and (b) 1991-92.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: I am unable to provide the information requested without incurring disproportionate costs, but my hon. Friend may find it helpful to know that average man training day allocations for TA independent units were 40 for 1990-91 and 36 for 1991-92.

EMPLOYMENT

Vocational Qualifications

15. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress is being made towards the introduction of comprehensive national vocational qualifications.

Mr. Jackson: Progress in developing a national framework of standards-based vocational qualifications relevant to the needs of the modern workplace has been good. This far-reaching reform is being led by the National Council for Vocational Qualifications, which has been set the target of completing the framework of reformed qualifications to cover 80 per cent. of the work force by the end of 1992. At present almost 300 NVQs are available to around one third of the work force in over 40 major industries.

Comparable progress has been made in producing equivalent Scottish vocational qualifications.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what has been the annual budget of the standards branch of the training, enterprises and education department since the establishment of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what are the annual grand totals of budgets for the industry lead bodies currently engaged in drafting competences, from the date of their establishment, the standards branch of the training, enterprise and education department since the establishment of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications, and the National Council for Vocational Qualifications, since its establishment, as an annual percentage of the work-related further education budget administered by the training, enterprise and education department in each relevant year; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the industry lead bodies currently engaged in drafting competences and their associated criteria as the basis for national vocational qualifications; what was the date of the establishment of each industry lead body; and what have been their individual budgets from the date of their establishment;

(4) if he will publish the annual budget of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications since its establishment; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will place in the Library a copy of the report entitled "Knowledge and Competence", commissioned by the standards branch of the training, enterprise and education department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The National Council for Vocational Qualifications (NCVQ) was established in 1986 to reform the national framework of vocational qualifications in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Its key target is to produce national vocational qualifications (NVQs) to cover 80 per cent. of the work force by the end of 1992. The grant-in-aid budgets which have been made available to NCVQ by the Employment Department since 1986-87 to undertake this work are as follows:

1986-87	520,000
1987-88	3,708,698
1988-89	3,750,000
1989-90	3,000,000
1990-91	2,621,000
1991-92	3,700,000

The Employment Department's standards programme has provided pump-priming funding since 1987-88 to assist in the development of standards that form the basis of NVQs, and comparable Scottish vocational qualifications (SVQs) in Scotland. These standards are developed through 160 employer-led lead bodies. The annual budgets of the standards programme since 1987-88 are as follows:

1987-88	2,086,000
1988-89	3,000,000
1989-90	6,700,000
1990-91	8,911,000
1991-92	9,077,000

The standards programme is administered separately from and is not part of the Employment Department's work-related further education budget, which is £6,633,000 for 1991-92. Figures are not kept centrally for the budgets of lead bodies, which are employer-led and funded. The Employment Department generally funds up to 50 per cent. of the costs of developing standards in particular industries. Total budgets of lead bodies are therefore well in excess of the standards programme budgets. A list of the industry lead bodies which are currently engaged in drafting competences and their associated criteria as the basis for national vocational qualifications is given in section 2 of the Employment Department's publication "The Standards Digest", a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library. Lead bodies progressively came into existence. Section 3 of "The Standards Digest" details when lead bodies started work on developing standards.

The Employment Department's report "Knowledge and Competence: Current Issues in Training and Education" forms part of the technical guidance made available to those who are concerned with developing standards for competence-based vocational qualifications. I am arranging for a copy of this report to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Labour Statistics

18. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on unemployment in southern England.

Mr. Jackson: The seasonally adjusted unemployment rates in April 1991 for the south-east, south-west and East Anglia regions were 6·3 per cent., 6·8 per cent. and 5·5 per cent. of the work force respectively. This compares with 7·6 per cent. for the United Kingdom.

22. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current average unemployment level in the Northern region.

Mr. Jackson: In April 1991, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the Northern region was 10.0 per cent.

Channel Tunnel

19. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the employment implications for the north-east of the completion of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Forth: The channel tunnel should benefit the economy and employment prospects of the United Kingdom generally. I am sure that companies and individuals in the north-east will take full advantage of the opportunities presented by the tunnel.

Manual Handling

20. Mr Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the Health and Safety Commission when the subject of manual handling was discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: No discussions have been held with the Health and Safety Commission on this subject in recent years. However, I am aware that the Commission is developing proposals for regulations to implement a European directive on the minimum health and safety requirements for the manual handling of loads where there is a risk, particularly of back injury to workers. The directive must be implemented by 31 December 1992 and I understand that the Commission is planning to issue a consultative document containing its proposals for regulations and associated guidance later this year.

Training and Enterprise Councils

21. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has about the involvement in training and enterprise councils of those engaged in running small businesses.

Mr. Forth: When TECs become operational my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State ensures that each TEC board has at least one director with experience of running a small business.

Over 100 TEC directors are from companies which have 30 or fewer employees. TECs have drawn up imaginative plans for helping small businesses to prosper and grow.

23. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress in setting up TECs.

Mr. Howard: Excellent progress is being made in setting up training and enterprise councils. All 82 TECs in England and Wales are now in place, with 75 fully operational. The whole network will be operational later this year, nearly two years ahead of schedule.

Young Employees (Training)

24. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he is undertaking to encourage businesses to provide training opportunities for employees aged 16 to 19 years.

Mr. Howard: The Government have introduced a wide range of measures to businesses to train their 16 to 19-year-old employees. In particular, YT encourages employers to offer high-quality training. The comprehensive proposals in the recent White Paper "Education and Training for the 21st Century" are designed further to increase training opportunities for young people, particularly through the nationwide extension of training credits, the expansion of the compacts approach and improvements to the qualifications system. We are also setting a new standard—"Investors in People"—for the development of all workers, including young employees.

Disabled People

25. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to develop new initiatives to assist people with disabilities into jobs.

Mr. Jackson: Last year's consultative document contained proposals for such initiatives. We have received many comments about ways in which we could improve the effectiveness of the help that we give to people with disabilities who want jobs. We have announced some of our decisions already and others will follow.

Compacts

26. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the compacts initiative.

Mr. Howard: The compacts initiative has been a success in urban programme areas and I have recently announced that the compact approach should now be extended across the whole country.

It will be for the local partners, including training and enterprise councils, employers and schools to decide how best to take forward compacts in their own areas.

Manufacturing Industry (Job Losses)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what have been the job losses in manufacturing industry during the last three months, six months, 12 months and 18 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The number of employees in employment in manufacturing industries in Great Britain at March 1991 has fallen by:

	Number
last 3 months	97,000
last 6 months	169,000
last 12 months	209,000
last 18 months	237,000

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of loans, the total sums outstanding and the average size of loan outstanding in each year since 1981 under the loan guarantee scheme.

Mr. Forth: The number of loans currently outstanding is 11,310, but this cannot be broken down by year. Information on sums outstanding and average size of loan outstanding are commercial details between lenders and borrowers and not available to the Department.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the premiums for the guarantees issued under the loan guarantee scheme in each year since 1981, the income derived from the payment of such premiums and such income net of defaults in each year since 1981.

Mr. Forth: The premium rates for guarantees issued under the loan guarantee scheme are:

	Per cent.
1981 to May 1984	3·0
June 1984 to March 1986	5·0
April 1986 to date	2·5

For loans within inner city task force areas, introduced in June 1988, the premium rate is 2·0 per cent. (2·5 per cent. to March 1990).

Information on income prior to the Department of Employment becoming responsible for the scheme is not available. For subsequent years income derived from premia payments was:

	£ million
1985-86	5·4
1986-87	3·8
1987-88	2·9
1988-89	2·6
1989-90	2·8
1990-91	3·3

The net cost of the scheme has been:

	£ million
1985-86	27·1
1986-87	11·2
1987-88	3·6
1988-89	3·8
1989-90	5·6
1990-91	16·5

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if will list by district the total number of inspectors employed by the Health and Safety Excutive in each year since 1986-87.

Mr. Forth: Health and Safety Executive's field inspectors are based in network of area offices, with the exception of mines inspectors who are organised by districts. The available information for the 1 April each year is given in

Table A—Inspectors based in Areas;
Table B—Inspectors based in Districts;
Table C—Inspectors HQ-based.

Notes:
1. Figures include factory, agriculture and specialist inspectors based at field consultant groups for all years.
2. 1986 figures also include field-based industrial air pollution inspectors.
3. 1990 and 1991 figures include field-based quarries inspectors who transferred to the factory and agricultural division in October 1989.
4. 1991 figures include field-based railway inspectors following the transfer of the Railway Inspectorate from the Department of Transport in December 1990.

Notes:
1. HQ-based inspectors include those on non-inspection duties eg. management, policy or technical standards work etc.
2. Nuclear Installations Inspectors are HQ-based. Their site inspections and visits are organised and carried out from HQ.
3. Offshore Safety inspectors are based at HQ buildings and at Aberdeen and Great Yarmouth.

National Record of Achievement

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the introduction of the national record of achievement.

Mr. Jackson: The national record of achievement (NRA) was launched on 27 February. It presents a simple record in summary form of an individual's achievement throughout education, training and working life. The NRA is an important step in motivating individuals to continue with their learning throughout life. To date, more than 1·3 million copies of the NRA have been ordered by schools, colleges and employers.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

University Pay

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) of 15 April, Official Report, column 50, on expenditure on university pay, if he will break down the figure for other staff between (a) manual and ancillary workers, (b) clerical and certain related administrative staff and (c) technical staff, and express each as a percentage of the total universities general recurrent expenditure in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The available information is as follows:

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Secretarial and Clerical (£m)	185·3	189·0	190·2	194·2
Per cent.	7·3	7·3	7·2	7·2
Technical (£m)	218·4	216·6	210·3	205·5
Per cent.	8·6	8·4	8·0	7·6
Other staff (£m)	126·6	126·3	122·1	121·9
Per cent.	5·0	4·9	4·6	4·5

Notes:
Expenditure is at 1990-91 prices, derived using GDP deflator assumptions based on the university academic year.
Percentages are of United Kingdom universities' total recurrent expenditure from general funds.

Student Accommodation

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, if he will indicate the number of students resident in college accommodation in each university; and what percentage of the total they represented in 1990 in (a) Wales and (b) England.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information on the number of students resident in college accommodation in each university is contained in "University Statistics—Volume 3—Finance". The latest available information is for 1988-89. A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

School Buildings

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out, at 1990 prices, the level of capital spending on school buildings for the latest available year for (a) Berkshire, (b) Essex, (c) Hereford and Worcester, (d) Nottinghamshire and (e) Somerset.

Mr. Fallon: The information requested, which has become available only since my earlier reply of 4 June, is as follows:

Local education authority	1990-91 prices £ million
Berkshire	[1] 21·8
Essex	[1] 28·3
Hereford and Worcester	[2] 8·4
Nottinghamshire	[1] 9·2
Somerset	[2] 5·8

[1] 1989-90 prices.
[2] 1988-89 prices.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how much is spent (a) by the University of Wales as a whole and (b) by each constituent college on Welsh medium teaching; what percentage of overall expenditure this accounts for; and if he will also publish figures for each year since 1980.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not collected centrally.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the names, location and local education authority of (a) each grant-maintained school and (b) each school which is balloting on, or awaiting a decision about, grant-maintained status, grouping the schools by education authority and by standard region.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is as follows:

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what procedure he expects to use in order to determine the teachers' pay increases for 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Subject to parliamentary approval of the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions (No. 2) Bill, my right hon. and learned Friend hopes to be in a position to ask the School Teachers' Review Body to recommend a settlement for 1992-93.

University Funding

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will reconsider his recent decision not to meet employers and employees of British universities to discuss funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: No. For the second year running, there has been an increase of some 10 per cent. in the public funding for universities. My right hon. and learned Friend has made clear that it is now for the employers to reach a pay settlement within the aggregate resources at their disposal.

Cash Limits (Science)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any changes to announce to cash limits on his Department's Science Vote for 1991-92.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit for class XI, vote 5, science will be amended. The cash limit change is as follows:

Class and vote	Current cash limit £	Change £	Revised cash limit £
XI.5	920,455,000	7,000,000	927,455,000

The additional funds will provide for the following additional allocations to the research councils in 1991-92.

	£ million
Agricultural and Food Research Council	1·05
Economic and Social Research Council	0·10
Medical Research Council	1·50
Natural Environment Research Council	1·15
Science and Engineering Research Council	3·20

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the governor of Sudbury prison became aware of the mistake involving a release date for a prisoner who is going to be released on 8 August instead of 8 April; and what action was taken by the governor as a result of becoming aware of this mistake.

Mrs. Rumbold: The governor of Sudbury became aware of the mistake involving the release date of this prisoner on 5 April 1991 and the prisoner in question was granted home leave on compassionate grounds from 8-11 April 1991. The governor has improved the procedures for informing prisoners at Sudbury of the date approved for their release on parole.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to apologise to a prisoner at Sudbury prison for the notification of a release date of 8 April instead of 8 August.

Mrs. Rumbold: On discovery of the mistake regarding his release date, the governor apologised to the prisoner concerned for the distress which had been caused.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mistakes involving release dates for prisoners at Sudbury prison are known to have been made during the last 12 months.

Mrs. Rumbold: One.

Charities

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will propose amendment to European Community draft directive COM (90) 314 FINAL-SYN 87 to protect the interests of charities.

Mrs. Rumbold: In discussion with their European Community partners, the Government are seeking to ensure that the directive makes proper allowance for the needs of charities and other data users.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had from charities concerning the potential impact on their fund-raising activities of EC draft directive COM (90) 314 FINAL-SYN 87.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have received six representations from or on behalf of organisations with charitable status about the impact of the draft directive on their fund-raising activities.

Adoption

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what instructions he issues to police forces in England and Wales on the procedures for prompt checking of prospective adopters of children from overseas in order to comply with entry clearance procedures; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will revise his instructions to police forces on the procedure for checking prospective adopters of children from overseas for entry clearance in order to shorten the procedure.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Guidance to police forces about checking those applying to work with or to care for children is contained in Home Office circular 102/88. We have no present plans to revise it.

Police, Leicestershire

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of police officers in Leicestershire for each year since 1979, including 1991-92; and when he plans to make a decision on the number of police officers for 1992-93.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The table sets out the establishment and strength details for the Leicestershire constabulary for each year since 1979.

As at 31 December	Establishment	Strength
1979	1,706	1,701
1980	1,727	1,720
1981	1,727	1,728
1982	1,733	1,725
1983	1,733	1,736
1984	1,733	1,703
1985	1,733	1,750
1986	1,733	1,716
1987	1,733	1,762
1988	1,733	1,747
1989	1,760	1,748
1990	1,813	1,784
[1]1991	1,827	—

[1] with effect from 1 October 1991

The Leicestershire police authority has applied for an additional 27 police posts for 1991-93. Its application will be carefully considered, with advice from HM inspector of constabulary, together with applications from other police authorities. My right hon. Friend aims to announce his decision in late autumn.

Overseas Students

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place between the Department of Education and Science and his Department to ensure that overseas students at present studying at the South West London college, Tooting,

London are treated with understanding in cases of applications for visa extension to complete their studies due to transfer of their studies to other London colleges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No discussions have taken place. All students who are able to satisfy the requirements of the immigration rules will be given an extension to complete their studies.

Rape

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many rapes were reported in the last year for which figures are available; and how many resulted in (a) a charge, (b) a prosecution and (c) a conviction.

Mr. John Patten: The provisional number of offences of rape recorded by the police in 1990 is published in table 2 of "Home Office Statistical Bulletin 4/91". The number of persons found guilty of rape in 1989 is published in table S4. 1(A) of "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary tables, 1989 Vol. 4". Corresponding information for 1990 is not yet available. A detailed analysis of offences of rape was published in "Home Office Statistical Bulletin 4/89, Statistics of offences of rape 1977-87". Information on reporting and recording of sexual offences is published in table A.2 of "The 1988 British Crime Survey" (Home Office research study 111) and on rape in table 2 of "Concerns about rape" (Home Office research study 106). Copies of all these publications are available in the Library.

Policing Costs

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost in the last three financial years of policing major national sporting events and demonstrations in the metropolitan police area not covered by the national and imperial services grant or its successor.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The additional 1 per cent. specific grant paid in recognition of the national duties performaned by the Metropolitan police is not hypothecated to specific functions, and therefore the information requested is not available.

Crime, Northumberland

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Northumbria as to how many house burglaries were reported to the Northumbrian police in 1990, or the latest year for which figures are available in (a) Northumbria and (b) Newcastle as a whole and, of these, how many led to (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Northumbria as to how many car thefts were reported to the Northumbrian police in 1990, or the latest year for which figures are available in (a) Northumbria as a whole and (b) Newcastle and, of these, how many led to (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction;

(3) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Northumbria as to how many cars were reported to the Northumbrian police as damaged through break-ins in 1990, or the latest year for which figures are available, in (a) Northumbria as a whole and (b) Newcastle; and how many reports led to (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction.

Mr. John Patten: The available information for 1990 on notifiable offences recorded in the Northumbria police force area is in the Library. Information on cars damaged during break-ins is not available centrally. The available information on prosecutions and convictions in Northumbria is contained in the chief constable's annual report which is also available in the Library.

Extradition (Irish Republic)

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the persons who have been extradited for political offences since 1980 (a) from Great Britain to the Republic of Ireland and (b) from the Republic of Ireland to Great Britain, giving the year in which the extradition occurred and indicating the outcome in each case.

Mr. John Patten: None. The Backing of Warrants (Republic of Ireland) Act 1965 and the reciprocal Irish legislation preclude extradition for political offences.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will ban the export of all animals for experimentation;

(2) if he will list the countries to which the exportation of animals for experimentation is not allowed.

Mrs. Rumbold: No such bans exist, nor do the Government have any plans to introduce such restrictions.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dogs were exported from the United Kingdom for experimentation in each year since 1985.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Home Office does not collect such statistics.

Ashwell Prison

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will identify the reasons for the delay between the carrying out of the inspection of Ashwell prison in September 1990, and the delivery of the report to him until December 1990, and then published with his statement on June 6; and what action he intends to take to speed up this process in future.

Mrs. Rumbold: Arrangements for preparing reports on his inspections of prison establishments are a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons. Arrangements for advising Ministers on the recommendations in each report are the responsibility of the prison service. The chief inspector presented his report on Her Majesty's prison Ashwell to my right hon. Friend on 21 December 1990. The inspectorate was notified of our response to the report on 3 May 1991 so that it could arrange for printing and distribution. In between those dates officials of the prison service were considering the main recommendations of the report and its wider implications.

We have already issued instructions to ensure that when a report from the chief inspector is submitted it is dealt with expeditiously by the prison service. My right hon. Friend also regularly reviews with the chief inspector the work of his office.

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on his intentions regarding recommendation 5·4 of Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons regarding Ashwell prison; and whether he will list the recommendations addressed to the governor which have already been implemented or will shortly be so.

Mrs. Rumbold: The complement of the physical education department at Ashwell prison has been reviewed and an additional post will be considered with other bids when trained staff become available.

The inspector's recommendations 5·7, 5·8, 5·11 and 5·19 to the governor have been implemented. Recommendation 5·16 was not accepted since current meal times at Ashwell are considered to be reasonable and later times would not make the best use of staff. Recommendation 5·13 has been accepted by the governor: reallocation of medical, psychiatric and psychological resources is being considered at headquarters. The governor expects to complete his review of the remaining seven recommendations shortly.

Immigration Service (Interpreters)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policy and vetting is adopted in respect of the employment of interpreters by the immigration service; how many there are; what languages are covered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The recruitment of interpreters for permanent pensionable employment with the Home Office is conducted by the Civil Service Commission which runs an open competition when a vacancy arises. Currently the immigration service has eight such employees, who in the main, speak languages of the Indian sub-continent. In addition, casual, fee-paid interpreting services are used by the immigration service as required. Applicants for fee-paid work are interviewed and assessed for suitability by a chief immigration officer or more senior officer. Other checks may be made if necessary. An interpreter employed for the first time is required to give a written undertaking that he will translate faithfully and to the best of his ability. Interpreters are instructed to give a direct translation of questions put and answers given.

Passport Thefts

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the theft of passports from Wells, Somerset in recent years; if any persons have been prosecuted in relation to this matter; whether the serial numbers of the stolen passports were notified to all United Kingdom ports and to appropriate international agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In Great Britain Post Office Counters Ltd. issue British visitors passports (BVPs) on behalf of the United Kingdom Passport Agency. In March 1988 a quantity of BVPs was stolen from a modified sub post office in Wells. This theft formed part of a conspiracy to burgle for which seven persons appeared before Cardiff crown court on 16 April 1990; they admitted the offence and were sentenced between two and six years' imprisonment. The serial numbers of the stolen BVPs were notified by the then Passport Department to the immigration service and the police and to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for routine circulation abroad.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action has been taken to recover passports stolen from Wells, Somerset; whether any person has been detained within the United Kingdom or abroad travelling on a passport stolen from Wells; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Investigation of the British visitors passports stolen in Wells in 1988 was a matter for the Post Office investigation branch and the Somerset and Avon police. I understand that a number of persons detained in western European countries for various offences were found to be in possession of British visitors passports from the series reported stolen. In one of these cases investigations are continuing into possible immigration offences.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Bank and Building Society Lending

Mr. Lawson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing, for each month from January 1977 to the present, (a) the annual rate of growth of bank and building society lending in real terms, using the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments as the deflator, (b) the annual rate of growth of bank and building society lending over the previous six months, seasonally adjusted and (c) the annual rate of growth of bank and building society lending, in real terms, over the previous six months, seasonally adjusted, using the retail prices index excluding mortage interest payments as the deflator.

Small Businesses

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the course of his consideration of the banks' lending policies to small businesses, he intends to meet the chairmen of the leading Scottish banks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I am holding meetings to discuss this issue with the chairmen of the four largest United Kingdom banks, and with the chairman of the British Bankers Association. The more detailed inquiries which my officials are conducting together with the Bank of England involve a wider range of banks, including the leading Scottish banks.

Ferry Fares

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy at any meeting of the Council of Ministers of Finance to resist any moves to require VAT to be imposed on ferry fares.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government have made it clear that the United Kingdom is opposed to any move which would restrict our ability to use existing zero rates.

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the average weekly civil service pension paid in 1990;

(2) what is his most up-to-date estimate of the number of civil service pensioners;

(3) what is his most up to date estimatee of the number of civil service pensioners in receipt of annual civil service pensions of (a) up to £1,000 per annum, (b) £1,001 to £2,000 per annum, (c) £2,001 to £3,000 per annum, (d) £3,001 to £4,000 per annum, (e) £4,001 to £5,000 per annum, (f) £5,001 to £6,000 per annum, (g) £6,001 to £7,000 per annum, (h) £7,001 to £10,000 per annum, (i) £10,001 to £15,000 per annum and (j) £15,001 and above.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The average weekly civil service pension paid in 1990 was £25·70. The number of civil service pensioners as at 31 May 1991 was 509,634 of whom 46,408 were in receipt of weekly paid pensions. It is estimated that the number of civil service pensions, within the indicated bands as at 31 March 1991, were as follows:

	Number
(a) up to £1,000 per annum	151,217
(b) £1,001 to £2,000 per annum	125,550
(c) £2,001 to £3,000 per annum	66,881
(d) £3,001 to £4,000 per annum	43,366
(e) £4,001 to £5,000 per annum	27,802
(f) £5,001 to £6,000 per annum	23,216
(g) £6,001 to £7,000 per annum	18,047
(h) £7,001 to £10,000 per annum	32,252
(i) £10,001 to £15,000 per annum	15,720
(j) £15,001 per annum and above	5,537

Veterinary Services

Sir John Farr: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total of receipts of value added tax levied on accounts for veterinary services and medicines, in each of the last three available years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information is not available.

Alcohol Duties

Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the detailed provisional outturns in 1990-91 by both volume and excise revenue for (a) still wines not exceeding 15 per cent. alcohol, (b) still wines exceeding 15 per cent. alcohol, (c) sparkling wines, (d) beer, (e) cider and perry, (f) made-wines and (g) spirits; and if he will give his similarly detailed latest forecasts for 1991-92.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The following provisional information is available. Forecasts of volumes are not available for 1991-92.

	1990-91 outturns		1991-92 forecast[1]

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Roger Windsor

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Prime Minister whether Mr. Roger Windsor, formerly chief executive of the National Union of Mineworkers, has ever been employed by Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: No.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for 12 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall have further meetings later today.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Redundant Churches Fund

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right honourable Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, what are the financial implications for the redundant churches fund in respect of the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure of the change after the circulation of the draft measure of the word "obtain" to "seek" in respect of the views of the Diocesan Advisory Committee in clause 15(i) of the Measure.

Mr. Michael Alison (Second Church Estates Commissioner, representing the Church Commissioners): There are no implications for the redundant churches fund.

CIVIL SERVICE

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his office during the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Renton: This information is not held centrally.

HEALTH

Health Authorities (Management Costs)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the management costs of health authorities in the 1980-81 accounts and in each subsequent year to 31 March, detailing by authority in each region.

Mr. Dorrell: No comprehensive information specifically on the management costs of health authorities is held centrally. However, a table showing the expenditure on headquarters administration as reported in the annual accounts of each regional and district health authority in England for the years since the establishment of district health authorities on 1 April 1982, has been placed in the Library. Figures for each special health authority for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals, which cannot be attributed to particular regions, are also included for completeness.

Regions are managed in an integrated way and it would be misleading to interpret regional health authority (RHA) data in isolation from the districts they manage. In particular, the division of functions between the RHA and districts and between districts varies from region to region. Consequently the region totals provide a more valid picture.

Maternity Units

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average length of stay in a maternity hospital in each district health authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The estimated average length of stay of a maternity delivery patient in England in the year 1989-90 was five days. Information on post-natal average length of stay at district health authority level is available in the health service indicator package, a copy of which is available in the Library.

TUC Health Services Committee

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when in the last 12 months he has met the Trade Union Congress health services committee; and which trades unions were represented at those meetings.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I met the health services committee of the TUC on 5 March and my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State met the committee on 19 July 1990. The following trades unions were represented:

Confederation of Health Service Employees
GMB
Health Visitors Association
Hospital Consultants and Specialists Association
MSF
National and Local Government Officers Association
National Union of Public Employees
Prison Officers Association
Society of Radiographers
Transport and General Workers Union.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the report of the independent expert group set up in March 1990 to investigate whether the emission of toxic gases from fungal growth on cot mattresses could be a cause of cot deaths; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report is published today by HMSO and copies have been placed in the Library. The independent expert working group concluded that the hypothesis that toxic gases evolved from chemicals in cot mattresses are a cause of sudden infant death syndrome is not supported by experimental evidence.

The group recommended that, despite the absence of evidence to implicate toxic materials used as fillers or fire retardants in cot furnishings, as a matter of prudence, the need for such additives should be reconsidered. If antimony trioxide is used as the fire retardant, only material with the lowest possible levels of arsenic contaminant should be used.

The Department of Trade and Industry will keep under review the use of potentially toxic materials in cot furnishings.

As an incidental finding to the work to investigate the hypothesis the expert working group noted that cot mattresses used by healthy babies and those used by babies who had died from sudden infant death syndrome were contaminated by a number of micro-organisms including some which were potentially pathogenic. There were differences in both the types and the level of contamination. They were unable to draw conclusions from these incidental findings. They recommended that specific investigation of the significance of the findings of microbial contamination take place.

The chief medical officer has asked a group of experts to advise him on research to determine the significance of the microbiological contamination.

I am most grateful to the independent expert group and its chairman, Professor Paul Turner, for producing such a comprehensive and carefully considered report. They were supported in this by some very detailed analytical research from both the International Mycological Institute at Kew and the Laboratory of the Government Chemist.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much expenditure on the national health service has increased in south Bedfordshire in real and cash terms since May 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The South Bedfordshire health authority was established on 1 April 1982. The annual accounts of the authority record total revenue expenditure of £30·80 million (cash) for 1982-83 and £57·03 million (cash) for 1989-90 (the latest year available). Those figures represent increases of 85·2 per cent. in cash terms and 28·3 per cent. in real terms (measured at 1989-90 prices).

Prior to 1 April 1982 the authority's predecessor health district formed part of the larger Bedfordshire area health authority. For Bedfordshire as a whole the annual accounts of the relevant health authorities record total revenue expenditure of £32·30 million (cash) for 1978-79 and £104·64 million (cash) for 1989-90. Those figures represent increases of 224 per cent. in cash terms and 38·5 per cent. in real terms (measured at 1989-90 prices).

National Association of Young People in Care

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many meetings Ministers have held or had arranged with representatives of the National Association of Young People in Care in the past two years; and what was the subject of such meetings;

(2) if he will make a statement on the support his Department has been making available to the National Association of Young People in Care over the last five years;

(3) when he expects to make a decision on the current application for core funding grant aid in respect of the National Association of Young Children in Care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will be meeting representatives of the National Association of Young Children in Care (NAYPIC) later this week, when current issues in residential care and the future funding of the association will be amongst the topics to be discussed. No other ministerial meetings have been held with NAYPIC during the past two years although the association has been in regular contact with officials.

A grant of £82,000 was awarded to NAYPIC for the period 1 January 1987-31 March 1988, and one of £64,000 per annum for the two years 1988-89 and 1989-90. Because of difficulties within the association, payment of grant was suspended at the end of December 1988. While the grant was reinstated in August 1989 no further payments were made because of renewed problems within the association.

A final decision about NAYPIC's current application for funding will be made shortly.

Polycyclic Aromatic Hydrocarbons

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is funded by his Department into polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons and their carcinogenic consequences.

Mr. Dorrell: Funding of research on biomedical aspects of the effects of environmental pollution on health lies within the remit of the Medical Research Council and the Department keeps the results of research in this area under review.

The small area health statistics unit at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, which is jointly funded by this and other Government Departments, has been asked to investigate cancer and mortality rates around industrial installations such as cooking works and incinerators both of which are known to emit polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs).

The Department is also funding work at the Laboratory of the Government Chemist which includes an investigation of the PAHs present in cigarette smoke.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reduce the hours worked by junior hospital doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are issuing today further guidance to health authorities, health boards and NHS trusts on reducing the hours of duty of hospital doctors and dentists in training. A copy has been placed in the Library. At the heart of the guidance is an agreement between the health departments and the medical profession setting, for the first time, explicit controls on the contractual hours of duty of doctors in training, including controls on the maximum periods of continuous duty and minimum periods of off duty time, for each of the working arrangements (full shifts, partial shifts and on-call rotas). The agreement also sets a clear timetable for change.

The agreement is accompanied by guidance to assist authorities, boards and trusts, with the help of task forces, and, in Scotland, local implementation groups, to achieve reductions in hours while maintaining clinical standards and educational opportunities. This includes guidance on changing patterns of work for hospital doctors in training, including illustrations of shift patterns which meet the hours criteria; guidance on making the best use of nursing and midwifery staff and technical, clerical, administrative and other staff to help to reduce the hours of work of doctors in training while delivering improved patient care; good practice guidance on living and working conditions for doctors in training; guidance from the Central Consultants and Specialists Committee on the role of consultants in providing emergency cover throughout the 24-hour period and on the need to move to a more team-based method of working; and guidance from the conference of medical royal colleges and individual colleges and faculties on the educational and training implications of reducing hours.

In addition the Government have made funds available for additional medical staff to help authorities, boards and trusts to reduce hours.

The ministerial group on junior doctors' hours, its supporting technical group and parallel groups in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland will continue to monitor progress in reducing hours and I look forward to seeing real advances made on this front.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Jammu and Kashmir

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now refer the situation in Jammu and Kashmir to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We expressed concern about the situation in Kashmir at the United Nations Human Rights Commission meeting in Geneva on 27 February, in a joint European Community statement.

Minority Group Rights

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international treaties and conventions exist providing for the protection of the rights of minority groups, as opposed to the rights of individuals.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are no multilateral United Nations or Council of Europe treaties and conventions which protect minority groups as such. Individuals belonging to minorities are given particular mention in article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Vietnamese Refugees

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of voluntary repatriation of Vietnamese refugees from Hong Kong; what resources have been provided by Her Majesty's Government for the care and screening of asylum-seekers; and what discussions he has had with the Governments of Thailand and Malaysia concerning treatment of Vietnamese boat people.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As of 6 June 1991, 7,088 Vietnamese migrants had volunteered to return to Vietnam from Hong Kong. Just under 500 volunteers were awaiting repatriation, less than 1 per cent. of the total camp population. Since 1989, Her Majesty's Government have spent £34·891 million either directly or via UNHCR on the care and screening of Vietnamese asylum seekers.

On discussion with the Malaysian and Thai Governments, I refer the hon. Member to the recent joint declaration of the EC/ASEAN ministerial meeting held in Luxembourg on 30-31 May 1991, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Vietnamese refugees from Hong Kong have been resettled in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Hong Kong, outside the detention centres, (c) other EC countries, (d) other Commonwealth countries and (e) the United States of America.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In the period 1979-1990 a total of 13,703 refugees were resettled in the United Kingdom; 126 in Hong Kong; 6,988 in other EC countries; 32,240 in other Commonwealth countries and 63,650 in the United States of America.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the United Kingdom financial assistance under the PHARE—Poland Hungary Aid for Reconstruction of the Economy—programme is being made directly to eastern European countries so that they can select and buy in their own preferred specialists and advisers to help them on social issues, including development of trade union organisations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Commitment of all the PHARE programme funds for central and eastern European countries is determined by the European Commission and the Management Committee of Member States; no funds are made available to central and east European Governments to use at their discretion. The development of trade union organisations is not one of the PHARE programme's priorities.

Kurdish People

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Government of Turkey concerning the treatment of Kurdish people in Turkey.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: British Ministers and officials regularly raise human rights issues with the Turkish Government. As to Kurdish people in Turkey, we look to the Turkish Government, as to other Governments where substantial groups of Kurdish origin live, to respect the international treaties to which they are a party.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Kurdish Front of Iraq about the negotiations it is holding with the Government of Iraq.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We remain in close contact with the Kurdish leadership and have the opportunity to discuss with them a range of subjects, including progress in their discussions with the central authorities in Baghdad, on a regular basis.

Baltic States

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in each of the last five years Her Majesty's consul in Moscow has visited (a) Estonia, (b) Latvia and (c) Lithuania.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Her Majesty's consul in Moscow has made no official visits to these republics in recent years. He has, however, made private visits.

Working visits have been made to all three of the Baltic states by other embassy officers, all of whom have been prepared to handle consular matters.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives are currently being taken or considered which would make available the expertise and skills of industry in the United Kingdom to the Governments of the Baltic republics in order to assist them in diversifying their own economies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: British expertise and skills are being made available to the Baltic states through the know-how fund for the Soviet Union, which began disbursing in April. One of the projects already approved under the know-how fund is in the Baltic states and other projects there are under consideration.

Mecca Tunnel Disaster

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, column 437, he will make a statement about progress made by the Saudi Arabian Government in tracing British citizens missing since the tunnel disaster at Mecca on 2 July 1990.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British embassy in Riyadh continues to press the Saudi Arabian authorities vigorously for news of progress towards the identification of the three missing British nationals from among the unidentified victims of the tunnel disaster of 2 July 1990.

I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as the embassy has received a response.

Cayman Islands

Mr Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, when the review of the constitution of the Cayman Islands will be published.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Commissioners' report has been published as a Command Paper. Copies are available in the Library of the House. The report will be released for public debate in the Cayman Islands by the governor.

South Africa

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received from the ANC on sporting links with South Africa; and what response he has made.

Mr. Hurd: The ANC has recently sought the British Government's support for the readmission of South Africa to the International Cricket Council. In reply we have welcomed the formation this month of one non-racial United Cricket Board of South Africa. I have explained to the ANC that the Government do not control sport in this country, but that I was sure that the ICC would wish to take account of this development. Under the United Cricket Board, cricket in South Africa will comply with the terms of the Gleneagles agreement and should resume its place in international sport. I hope that very soon South Africa will be re-admitted to international cricket. As other sports become non racial, the same will apply to them.

Food Aid (Soviet Union)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what types of food the 250 million ecu of EC food aid to the Soviet Union will consist of; how many tonnes it represents; what is its value in pounds sterling; from which EC budget it will be paid; and to which budget of Her Majesty's Government it will be attributed.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 10 June 1991]: The 250 million ecu EC food aid for the Soviet Union is expected to comprise two tranches:

i) 50,000 tonnes whole milk powder
10,000 tonnes baby food
15,000 tonnes canned beef
5,000 tonnes canned pork

ii) tomato paste (worth 5 mecu)
beef (worth 10 mecu)
pasta (worth 8 mecu)
whole milk powder (worth 12 mecu)

The second tranche is likely to be worth 35 million ecu but the tonnage this represents remains to be established. At a conversion rate of 1 ecu = £0·7, the total food aid package will total some £175 million and will be funded from the 1990 European agriculture guarantee and guidance fund guarantee section surplus under the 1991 budget. The United Kingdom contribution is not attributed to any Government Department.

Sierra Leone

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests Her Majesty's Government have received from Sierra Leone for assistance in dealing with invading forces and refugees in the east of the country; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Following discussions with the Government of Sierra Leone we are supplying a quantity of non-lethal defence equipment to the Sierra Leone army.

There has been no recent request from the Sierra Leone Government for help in dealing with refugees or displaced persons. We have, however, already made a significant contribution to refugee relief operations in the region, arising from the conflict in Liberia. A further £1 million has recently been allocated to United Nations agencies for this purpose.

Somalia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Government of Somalia concerning the plight of refugees; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Since the fall of the Barre regime in January 1991, there has been no nationally accepted government in Somalia. We are in constant contact with British aid agencies and the United Nations. We have provided food aid and £1·25 million relief to help Somalia refugees in Ethiopia and Kenya.

ENERGY

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will meet the chairman of the International Stock Exchange to discuss delayed payments of fees and commissions to stockholders employed in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have no present plans to do so.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what costs were incurred by his Department in connection with the sale of the electricity distribution companies; and how much value added tax was incurred on those costs;

(2) what costs the electricity distribution companies incurred as principal in connection with their privatisation; on what costs incurred in this connection the electricity distribution companies recovered VAT; and how much VAT was recovered.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Electricity privatisation costs incurred by my Department in 1987-88 were £0·8 million, in 1988-89 £5·5 million, in 1989-90 £12·4 million, and in 1990-91 are estimated at £256·5 million. As many of the costs were jointly incurred on the privatisation of the distribution and generating companies, allocation of the costs to the two categories would not be meaningful. VAT paid so far is estimated at £14·6 million.

The costs incurred by the electricity distribution companies in connection with their privatisation are a commercial matter for the companies concerned.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce details of the second tranche of the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We propose to make the second Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Order for renewable sources of electricity generating capacity in the autumn of this year. Proposals for the 1991 renewables order are set out in "Renewable Energy Bulletin No. 4", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Kuwait Oil Fires

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what follow-up there has been to his visit to the Kuwait oil fires.

Mr. Wakeham: I have nothing to add to the answers given to the hon. Member on 3 June 1991 at columns 10-11.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish for each local authority in Northamptonshire the number of people presently receiving housing benefit and income support together with housing benefits; and what are the costs involved.

Miss Widdecombe: Initial estimates of housing benefit expenditure for 1991-92 from the Northamptonshire local authorities are in the table. The estimates do not distinguish between income support and non-income support cases.

A count of the number of people receiving housing benefit on 31 May 1991 is to be taken by local authorities shortly. The results will be available by the late summer.

Strategic Planning Guide

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what date the strategic planning guide will be delivered to staff who are drawing up strategic plans for their area; and if he will send a copy to the hon. Member for Oldham, West.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) for each year since 1986 what is the average time taken for processing an application for (a) attendance allowance and (b) the higher rate of attendance allowance;

(2) whether the independent living fund is unable to process an application for assistance without the applicant first receiving confirmation of eligibility for the higher rate of attendance allowance; in how many cases the delay in processing the higher rate of attendance allowance claims has led to the blocking of hospital beds in spinal units; what steps he will take to ensure that attendance allowance claims are speeded up; and if he will consider introducing an additional question on the attendance allowance claim form to identify those people who have applied to the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Social Fund

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what monitoring is undertaken by his Department of the expenditure of the social fund in local offices.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Injury Compensation Claims

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will establish an inquiry into the handling of the claim for injury compensation and related claims from Mr. Cameron, 87 Davis drive, Glenrothes, Fife; for how long the claims have been outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

TRANSPORT

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has undertaken as to the effect on the price of a gallon or litre of unleaded petrol of the abolition of vehicle excise duty and its transfer to petroleum spirit; and if he will set out the likely retail price based on average pump prices for the last quarter.

Mr. Chope: On the basis of that proposition the estimated increase in unleaded petrol would be 33·2 p a gallon (7·3 p a litre). The pump price (average last quarter) might be about 222 p a gallon (48·7 p a litre). The figures for the last quarter do not include the recent budget duty changes.

InterCity Services

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of punctuality was achieved by InterCity in 1981, 1986 and 1991.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail's five business sectors were not introduced until 1982 so InterCity punctuality figures for 1981 are not available. The level of punctuality achieved by InterCity in both 1986-87 and 1990-91 is as follows:

Trains running on time or within 10 minutes: 85 per cent.

Rail Fares (VAT)

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the annual effect on British Rail revenue and traffic volume of the imposition on rail fares of VAT at the rate of 4 per cent. and at the rate of 9 per cent.

Mr. Freeman: We estimate that the loss of gross revenue to British Rail would be in the approximate ranges of £50 to £90 million per annum for an imposition of 4 per cent. and £100 million to £200 million for 9 per cent. Reductions in passenger traffic of up to about 3 per cent. and 7 per cent. respectively would be likely. It is not possible to be precise, since the impact depends upon passenger response and the extent to which in the case of the grant-aided railway, higher VAT might be matched by increased grant.

Bus Services, Greater London

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library copies of each of the responses he has received to his proposals for de-regulation and privatisation of bus services in Greater London.

Mr. Freeman: We have received over 200 responses to the consultation paper "A Bus Strategy for London", many of which are lengthy and detailed documents. I do not see a case for bearing the cost of placing in the Library copies of all these documents. I shall, however, arrange for a list of respondents to be placed in the Library. An announcement on the Government's conclusions, following the consultation exercise will be made in due course.

Trailers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, (1) pursuant to his reply of 5 June, Official Report, column 227, if he will detail the investigations that are currently taking place into variable sensing units to be fitted to trailers built before 1982;

(2) how many deaths have been reported in the last 12 months in accidents where one of the vehicles was a trailer with a variable sensing unit built prior to 1982.

Mr. Chope: We are investigating the accident and fatality statistics for trailers manufactured before 1982.

We have no detailed statistics for the last 12 months but police reports for 1988 indicate that there were 570 fatal accidents involving heavy goods vehicles in England and Wales.

To date 490 of these reports have been examined in detail revealing that there were three fatalities involving pre-1982 trailers which were not fitted with variable sensing units.

Discussions are taking place with the major vehicle and equipment manufacturers as well as vehicle operators.

Railway Stations

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to privatise railway stations.

Mr. Freeman: None, except as part of the privatisation of British Rail.

Navigator Systems

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about his decision to replace the Decca navigator system with Loran C.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Transport announced in April of last year his decision in principle, and subject to certain conditions, to replace the Decca navigator system with Loran C as the standard marine radionavigation system to be provided in United Kingdom waters into the next century, a number of representations have been received.

The fishing industry, the Master Mariners Association and others have argued against the adoption of Loran C chiefly because of the extra expense and inconvenience to which the proposed change would put the users of radionavigational systems at a time when increased reliance is likely to be placed on satellite systems. The electronics engineering industry have expressed concern because of their view that a high percentage of Loran C equipment would be imported from Japan and from the United States of America and that the market for Decca receivers in Europe would be lost.

The general lighthouse authorities have expressed their support for Loran C because they consider it to be a more effective system and have the potential to provide near global coverage. The Royal Yachting Association has expressed its support for Loran C as a single system which would be available throughout Europe and in many other parts of the world. The General Council of British Shipping and the Lights Advisory Committee regard Loran C as having a higher technical performance but support whichever system would be the cheaper for payers of light dues.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library full information relating to the Loran C proposal.

Mr. McLoughlin: The proposals for a north-West European Loran C system were set out in the Department of Transport's consultative document of June 1989, entitled "The future of marine radionavigation in United Kingdom waters", a copy of which was placed in the Library at that time. Subsequent changes to the proposed station configurations and technical parameters have been relatively minor. The costs which would fall to be met by the United Kingdom are now estimated to be £8·5 million for investment and £0·6 million a year running costs, both at 1990-91 prices.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library all information relating to the submission from Racal Decca to continue to operate Decca, including the cost and the proposals to refurbish and upgrade existing equipment.

Mr. McLoughlin: The proposals which Racal Marine put forward in 1988 for the automation and continued operation of the Decca navigator chains in the United Kingdom have been superceded by further proposals put to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 30 April this year. Negotiations are continuing and it would not be appropriate at this stage to place details in the Library.

Motorway Speed Limits

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) the number of users of British roads who used roads in France in the past year and (b) the number of users of French roads who used roads in the United Kingdom in the past year; and if he will consider an adjustment in motorway speed limits to bring the United Kingdom into line with France.

Mr. Chope: During 1990 approximately 5 million British registered vehicles travelled to France and 1·5 million French registered vehicles travelled to Britain. I am looking at all speed limits, including that on motorways. The motorway speed limit for cars in France is amongst the highest in the European Community; the rate of motorway fatalities is 9·1 per 100 million vehicle kilometres in France whereas in the United Kingdom it is 6·3 per 100 million vehicle kilometres.

A38

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce his Department's options for the A38 trunk road improvement between Saltash and Trerulefoot; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Department's consultants are making good progress with their investigations into possible options for the improvement of the A38 between Saltash and Trerulefoot.

I still hope that we shall be able to consult the public on the more favourable options towards the end of next year. The difficult topography and the environmentally sensitive countryside militates against more rapid progress.

Red Routes

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings he has held with representatives of the people of Haringey and Islington concerning the operation of red routes; what meetings he plans to have; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Ministers and officials have met hon. Members, borough councillors, delegations of local business people, and groups representing local interests about the pilot red route scheme. Officials have also attended a number of public meetings in both boroughs. Requests for further meetings will be considered on their merits.

Marine Rescue

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many occasions in the last six months the International Maritime Organisation requirements have been breached by a failure to maintain the minimum staffing level of two fully trained regular officers and one auxiliary at any marine rescue co-ordination centre or sub-centre in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The International Maritime Organisation requires contracting Governments to provide adequate search and rescue services for persons in distress around their coasts. At no time during the last six months has the United Kingdom failed to meet these requirements.

Underused Land

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the location of each site and its acreage of the unused and underused land held by his Department.

Mr. McLoughlin: Each of the Department's highway regions is responsible for compiling an annual register of unused and underused land in its area at 31 March.

Under the Government's code of practice, the register is available at the 9 regional offices for inspection by the public from 30 June onwards. The information is being collated centrally and I shall place the returns in the Library when they are available at the end of the month.

Road Accidents, Paisley

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pedestrians in each standard age cohort were fatally injured in road accidents for each year since 1980 in the constituency of Paisley, North.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been asked to reply.

Information is not readily available for Paisley, North constituency and instead the requested information is given for Renfrew district in the following table.

Pedestrians fatally injured in road accidents in Renfrew district by age group for years 1980 to 1990

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what applications the Overseas Development Administration has received for internal purchase of grain in Tigray and Eritrea; on what grounds these applications have been accepted or rejected; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Where internal purchase of grain offers a cost effective and timely means of providing food to those in need I am willing to consider funding proposals from British voluntary agencies. I would also need to be sure that the distribution can be adequately monitored and accountability for the public funds involved would be fully assured. We have received proposals from Oxfam and CAFOD—Catholic Fund for Overseas Development.

These agencies have agreed to review their proposals to take account of the effects of recent developments in Ethiopia on the relief operation, including the internal purchase scheme. I await their revised applications.

Kedung Ombo Dam, Java

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the United Kingdom executive director at the World bank is taking to ensure adequate compensation is paid to those people displaced by the Kedung Ombo dam in central Java; what estimates he has of the number of people still living in the dam area; and whether Her Majesty's Government were represented at the opening of the dam on 18 May.

Mrs. Chalker: Compensation is essentially a matter between those concerned and the Government of Indonesia. Reliable estimates of numbers are difficult to come by, but I understand that some 5,000 families have accepted compensation and moved, and that 500-600 families remain in the green belt around the Kendung Ombo dam area. Her Majesty's Government were not represented at the opening of the dam.

Narmada Dam, India

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what information he has concerning the size of opposition to the displacement of people and flooding of land as part of the World bank Narmada dam project in India;

(2) if he will make it his policy to instruct the United Kingdom's World bank executive director to support the proposal of local non-governmental organisations to institute an independent commission to investigate the Narmada dam project in India and to halt construction pending its findings;

(3) if he is satisfied that the environmental and social conditions drawn up by the World bank and the Government of India for the Narmada dam project will be met by the 30 June deadline; and whether he will make it his policy to refuse to extend United Kingdom support for the project if the deadline is not met.

Mrs. Chalker: I am not in a position to gauge the size of the opposition to the Sardar Sarovar dam project. At our suggestion and that of other donors the World Bank and the Indian authorities have agreed to appoint an independent team to assess the resettlement and environment aspects. So far as I am aware, the Indian authorities do not intend to halt construction during this review, if it goes ahead.

The deadline of 30 June applies to a related water delivery and drainage project, the future of which is under review by the World bank.

Motorway Speed Limits

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with chief constables and others about the current level of speed limits on motorways.

Mr. Chope: I will answer this question shortly.

WALES

Pain Relief

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many pain relief consultants there are within national health service hospitals in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Currently there are two consultants in Wales in the specialty of palliative medicine. Pain relief work is also carried out by many anaesthetists, but information on the amount of time devoted to pain relief by those consultants is not available centrally. However, the majority of district general hospitals in Wales have a specialist interested in the relief of chronic pain.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will facilitate the establishment of a pain relief clinic in Gwynedd; and what discussions he has had with the Gwynedd health authority on this matter.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: A pain relief clinic is already available at Ysbyty Gwynedd.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what statistics relating to pain relief are collected by the Welsh Office from national health service hospitals in Wales; what proposals he has to improve the available analysis of such statistics; and if he will ensure that the activity of pain clinics is incorporated in hospital activity analysis in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Welsh Office collects quarterly information relating to hospital bed use and out-patient activity by specialty. This information is published annually in "Hospital Bed Use Statistics", copies of which are in the Library of the House. Between January 1979 and March 1989 information relating to pain relief was collected and published as above. For the financial year 1989-90 pain relief work undertaken by palliative medicine consultants and anaesthetists was not separately identifiable from their other work. Since 1 April 1990, however, data on pain relief work done under both specialties have been collected as a separate category and will be included in published data for 1990-91 later this year.

The hospital activity analysis system relates only to patients admitted to hospital and as such does not include the activity of out-patient pain clinics.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what equipment is available in NHS hospitals in Wales for the relief of pain, including self-administered pain relief equipment; and what plans he has for extending such availability.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not available centrally. It is for local health authority managements to determine the availability of equipment in the light of local needs and circumstances, having regard to available resources.

Community Charge

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the total amount of community charge unpaid in Wales since its inception.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Local authorities in Wales would receive some £414 million if all 1990-91 community charge bills were paid in full. Latest estimates suggest that they will receive around £389 milion of this, representing 94 per cent. of the full amount due. It is for local authorities to seek full payment of outstanding amounts in order to protect the interests of charge payers generally.

Treatment Centres

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how long he is proposing to extend or renew the present contract for the elective orthopaedics treatment centre at the Prince of Wales Orthopaedic hospital, Rhydlafar, Cardiff.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The existing treatment centres have annual contracts.

Decisions on future funding will be taken in the light of experience during 1991-92, but it is not intended that central funding should continue indefinitely.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evaluation he has carried out of the impact on waiting lists for elective surgery of the three present treatment centres at Bridgend, Bangor and Rhydlafar; and if he will place copies of such evaluations in the Library.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: It is intended to undertake a wider evaluation of the treatment centre initiative during 1991. The existing centres have been broadly successful in meeting their contractual targets and are proving an effective complementary method of delivering speedier health care for Welsh patients.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what length of contract is proposed for the second ophthalmology treatment centre for Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The established treatment centres are managed on annual contracts. Decisions on the future funding of the existing centres will be taken in the light of experience during 1991-92. The contract for the proposed new centre at Bridgend will make allowance for referral patterns to become established, but it is not intended that central funding should continue indefinitely.

"Local Strategies for Health"

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will now publish a review of achievement of the strategic objectives specified by the Welsh Office in the circular "Local Strategies for Health", and associated publications on the strategic intent and direction for the NHS in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Our approach to health strategy has been acknowledged by the World Health Organisation and others as putting Wales at the forefront of the drive for better health not only in the United Kingdom but in Europe.

District health authorities and family health services authorities are currently working with community health councils, local government and voluntary groups to prepare local strategies for health aimed at achieving our long-term goal of making Wales one of the healthiest nations in Europe. The first set of local strategies will be submitted to the Department for approval in December.

When the local strategies are available and we have drawn on them to develop a management strategy for Wales as a whole, we will be in a position to monitor progress against the ambitious targets set both locally and nationally.

M4 Flyover

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to take in co-operation with West Glamorgan county council to protect pedestrians from objects falling from the Ynysforgan flyover of the M4 motorway.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Design work is currently under way on alterations to the Ynysforgan flyover parapets where the motorway passes over the footbridge. Parapet heights will be increased and a mesh infill provided over a length of 30m in the vicinity of the footbridge.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to reimburse Swansea city council for the £50,000 spent and thrown away on sending out new poll tax bills following the Government's change in policy.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Department is in consultation with the Council of Welsh Districts on reimbursement arrangements.

Acute Hospital Beds

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of acute hospital beds available in Wales for each of the years 1979 to 1990.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Information on the number of acute hospital beds is given in the following table. In order to give the full picture on trends I have added the figures from 1974-79:

Average daily available acute beds: Wales[1]

	Number
1974	10,880
1975	10,552
1976	10,378
1977	10,425

Children in Care

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has of how many children were in care in the area of the Llanelli borough council at the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Information is held centrally only on the numbers of children in care by county area. There were 275 children in care in Dyfed on 31 March 1990.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children were in local authority care in Wales at the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: There were 3,278 children in local authority care in Wales on 31 March 1990.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children in local authority care in Wales at the latest available date were in (a) residential care and (b) under the care of foster parents.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: There were 585 children in local authority care in residential accommodation on 31 March 1990. Of these, 569 were in local authority community homes and the remaining 16 in registered voluntary homes and hostels.

There were 1,994 children in local authority care with foster parents on 31 March 1990.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children were in care in (a) Dyfed, (b) West Glamorgan and (c) Mid-Glamorgan at the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: There were 275 children in care in Dyfed, 365 in West Glamorgan and 757 in Mid Glamorgan on 31 March 1990.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of fostering children in Wales in the last three available years.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Expenditure by local authorities on boarded-out children in care in Wales since 1987-88 is given in the following table:

Net current expenditure £ million[1]

1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
5·4	5·9	6·8

[1] Expenditure on employees and running expenses net of sales, fees, charges and other local income, but gross of relevant specific grants.

Right to Buy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing the percentage of housing stock sold under right-to-buy schemes by each district authority in Wales in total since 1980.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information requested is given in the following table:

Population Movements

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing (a) the number of young people moving from Wales to England, (b) the number of young people moving from England to Wales and (c) the net outflow for the year between September 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Data from the national health service central register, which relates to movements of persons on national health service doctors' lists, give an indication of the number of young people moving between Wales and England. This information is given in the following table:

National health service central register moves of young people from Wales to England and England to Wales for year ended September 1990

Note: These figures, which are rounded to the nearest 100, relate to re-registrations for year ended December 1990. This is to make an allowance for an average of three months between a person moving and subsequent re-registration.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the latest available estimates of the number of Welsh language learners currently residing in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: This information is not collected centrally.

Farm Employment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farmers, partners, directors and farmworkers were employed by county in Wales in June 1980.

Mr. David Hunt: Figures from the agricultural census for June 1980 are given in the following table:

Numbers of farmers and workers employed in agriculture—June 1980

Adoption

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the children adopted in Wales in the last three available years were 10 years of age and over.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information is given in the following table:

	Number of adoption orders[1]	Number of children adopted aged 10 years or over	Percentage of children adopted aged 10 years or over
1987	442	116	26·2

[2] Five adoption orders did not specify the age of the child and have therefore been omitted from these figures.
[3] One adoption order did not specify the age of the child and has therefore been omitted from these figures.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many adoption orders were made in Wales in each of the last three available years.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The number of adoption orders made in Wales in each of the last three available years is given in the following table:

Year	Number of adoption orders[1]
1987	442
1988	468
1989	437

Source: OPCS
[1] Period January to December

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of the children adopted in Wales in each of the last three available years were legitimate children;

(2) what percentage of the adoptions in Wales in the last three available years were made without parental agreement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not available centrally.

Cancer

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will sponsor an investigation into the incidence of cancer, by type, by location and by age group of the sufferer, in the district of Taff Ely.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The latest available figures published in "Cancer Registration in Wales: 1974-1984" indicate that the standardised cancer registration rate for all malignancies in Taff Ely is below the Wales average. I therefore see no reason for the Welsh Office to undertake such an investigation.

A470

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the latest existing and projected estimates of traffic flow along the A470 by vehicle type.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is given in the following tables:

The current annual average daily traffic flows on the sections of A470 between Coryton and Abercynon are estimated as follows:

Section	Cars	Light goods	Heavy goods	Buses	Total
Coryton—Ynys Bridge	36,600	4,300	3,900	400	45,200
Ynys Bridge—Nantgarw	37,400	4,450	3,600	300	45,750

Pontypridd-Cardiff Railway

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the average numbers of passengers carried by British Rail daily on the Pontypridd to Cardiff branch of its network in (a) 1988, (b) 1989, (c) 1990 and (d) 1991.

Sir Wyn Roberts: This is a matter for British Rail.

Arts Buildings

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of those buildings used for the arts in Wales which have been built, renovated or improved with Government funds since 1979.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information on funding allocated for these purposes by the Welsh Office is given in the following tables.

Specific Grants

St. David's Hall, Cardiff—£300,000 in 1978-79, £500,000 in 1979-80 and £200,000 in 1980-81 towards the cost of building the Hall.

Welsh National Opera—£150,000 in 1981-82 towards cost of constructing new rehearsal facilities:

1991-92	Llangollen International Eisteddfod Site. New Pavilion	£1,390,000

Information about funds disbursed by centrally funded agencies is not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member with this information.

The total allocation to the National Museum of Wales for all capital works at its branches was:

Financial year	Amount £
1979-80	1,087,000
1980-81	786,000
1981-82	619,000
1982-83	799,000
1983-84	657,000
1984-85	711,000
1985-86	995,000
1986-87	924,000
1987-88	2,123,000
1988-89	3,630,000
1989-90	6,499,000
1990-91	7,820,000

Housing Standards

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of houses, by district, in Mid Glamorgan which are below minimum required standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The numbers of unfit dwellings in the districts of Mid Glamorgan as estimated by the 1986 Welsh house condition survey are given in the following table:

District	Total number of unfit dwellings
Cynon Valley	4,400
Merthyr Tydfil	2,500
Ogwr	3,900
Rhondda	4,900
Rhymney Valley	2,100
Taff Ely	2,700

Special Diets

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales, by county, are registered as needing special diets because of physical or mental disabilities; how many of them are eligible for the new lower care component of the disability living allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not held centrally.

Eligibility for disabled living allowance is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Public Transport Expenditure

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications since 1985 his Office has received for section 56 grants under the Transport Act 1968; how many of these applications have been provided, wholly or in part; and if he will name in each case the project concerned, the level of support provided and the date on which the grant application was approved.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Department has received no applications under this provision.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Import Restrictions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the quotas on imports from (a) Thailand and (b) Vietnam for (i) bed linens, (ii) yarn fabric, (iii) sewing thread, (iv) curtains, (v) shirts, (vi) porcelain tableware, (vii) matches, (viii) footwear, (ix) gloves, (x) headgear and (xi) trousers.

Mr. Sainsbury: Restrictions on the imports of yarns, sewing threads, fabrics, shirts, gloves and trousers originating in Thailand under the EC-Thailand MFA bilateral agreement are shown in table 1.

The import to the United Kingdom of bedlinen, curtains, porcelain tableware, matches, footwear, and headgear originating in Thailand is not restricted by quota.

Restrictions on the import of goods originating in Vietnam are set out in table 2.

Table 1

Product	United Kingdom quota level (1991)
Synthetic spun yarns (MFA category 22) (includes some sewing threads)	425 tonnes
Cotton fabrics (MFA category 2)	1,108 tonnes
Fabrics of synthetic spun yarns (MFA category 3)	2,226 tonnes
T-shirts, knitted shirts etc. (MFA category 4)	5,539,000 pieces
Men's and boy's woven shirts (MFA category 8)	251,000 pieces
Woven trousers (MFA category 6)	395,000 pieces
Knitted gloves (MFA category 10)	2,726,000 pairs

Table 2

Product	Quota level (notes) (1991)
Tableware of porcelain, china or pottery; ornaments or statuettes	£23,100
Bedlinen, tablelinen, curtains, synthetic yarn and woven fabrics of synthetic yarn (MFA categories 20, 23, 34, 35, 36, 39, 40)	7 tonnes[1]
Shirts	Import ban[2]
Matches	Import ban
Footwear	Import ban[3]
Gloves	Import ban
Headgear	Import ban[4]
Trousers	Import ban[5]

[1] Certain of these goods of flax, ramie, hemp or silk are unrestricted. Goods of this description of textile categories other than those listed are subject to an import ban.
[2] Shirts of ramie or of silk are unrestricted.
[3] Certain casual footwear (eg espadrilles) is unrestricted.
[4] Certain headgear (eg straw hats and the like) is unrestricted.
[5] Certain trousers for industrial wear are unrestricted.

Note: Full details of import licensing requirements are set out in the Open General Import Licence dated 4th December 1987.

Kuwait (Contracts)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell), 5 June, Official Report, column 264, if he will state, so far as is known to his Department, the number of companies which have won contracts in Kuwait, and the number and value of contracts won by companies employing fewer than 20 people.

Mr. Sainsbury: I am aware of 52 companies which have won contracts in Kuwait with a total of at least £190 million. One of these companies has fewer than 20 employees and has won a contract worth £500,000.

It is not possible to determine how many companies with fewer than 20 employees will benefit from sub-contracts.

Baltic States

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further initiatives are currently being taken by his Department to promote bilateral trade between the United Kingdom and the Baltic republics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Overseas trade services staff in the United Kingdom and Moscow provide a range of export promotion services for the Soviet Union, including the Baltic republics.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the record of export promotion by the British embassy in Moscow in relation to each of the Baltic republics over each of the last five years; and if he will place in the Library a list of companies in the United Kingdom who are exporting to any one or more of the Baltic states, with details of the goods involved and the gross value of the trade.

Mr. Sainsbury: Overseas trade services staff in Moscow are undertaking a series of visits to regions of the Soviet Union with commercial potential for British companies, including the Baltic republics.

The names of companies involved in trade to the Baltic republics, their products and their value is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Overseas trade statistics are compiled on a country basis and cannot be broken down by republic.

Rechar

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what benefit he expects for coalfield areas to derive from the EC Rechar scheme.

Mr. Leigh: The 11 United Kingdom Rechar programmes, submitted in July 1990 and currently awaiting approval by the European Commission, seek some £109 million in EC support for a wide range of infrastructure and small firms measures based on the Commission guidelines published in the Official Journal of 27 January 1990. The actual projects to be supported will be decided once the programmes are approved.

ENVIRONMENT

Greenhouse Gases

17. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is being taken to reduce the emission of greenhouse gases in Britain.

Mr. Trippier: The White Paper on the Environment, "This Common Inheritance", which was published last September describes Britain's strategy to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and sets out the first tranche of measures to curb emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases.

Planning Consent

18. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to introduce legislation to allow councils to penalise those who build properties or extensions without planning consent.

Mr. Yeo: Yes, Sir. My right hon. Friend has introduced provisions in the Planning and Compensation Bill which greatly strengthen and improve local planning authorities' power to deal with breaches of planning control.

Local Government Finance

20. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had on the timescale for phasing out the poll tax.

Mr. Portillo: We have said that we plan to replace the community charge with the council tax with effect from 1 April 1993.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the abolition of the poll tax 20 per cent. contribution rule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: We have recently proposed a new council tax to take effect in 1993. It will be possible for people on low incomes to receive 100 per cent. rebates on the council tax. However, we have not proposed any change to the benefit rules for the remaining period of the community charge.

25. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make further adjustments to standard spending assessment mechanisms.

Mr. Portillo: The standard spending assessments are based on detailed research. They have been subject to extensive review over the last two years. Stability is an important consideration in this area to enable sensible forward planning by authorities. The Government have no proposals for any major changes, although data from the 1991 census will be incorporated into the SSAs as soon as possible after they become available.

Councillors' Allowances

21. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to carry out consultations with local authority organisations on the councillors' allowances scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: My Department has worked closely with the local authority associations in drawing up the new system of members' allowances which took effect from 1 April this year. The new system will be reviewed after a year's operation in consultation with the associations.

Broader issues are being considered in the review of local government.

Housing

24. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he is making with respect to the encouragement of the further provision of affordable housing in non-metropolitan district council areas.

Sir George Young: Development of low-cost housing for rent or shared ownership sale is rising substantially as a result of increases in public expenditure through the Housing Corporation to over £2 billion by 1993-94. We have also reviewed the way resources are allocated to ensure the houses are built where they are most needed, and introduced special programmes to help rural areas. The fall in house prices and reductions in interest rates have eased access to housing for first-time buyers, and deregulation of private rents has helped make more houses available for rent.

31. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have carried out a large-scale voluntary transfer of some or all of their housing to a new landlord.

Sir George Young: Sixteen local authorities have so far transferred their housing stock to new, approved landlords, following a ballot of tenants. These transfers have involved 76,000 homes, have generated £647 million in receipts and have enabled local authorities to repay £400 million worth of debt. Altogether the transfers have attracted over £1 billion of private sector investment in social housing.

28. Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to ensure that local authorities bring back empty council properties into use as soon as possible.

Sir George Young: We have taken a number of steps to reduce the number of empty local authority properties. In particular, under the £300 million homelessness initiative more than 5,300 empty local authority properties in London and the South East will be brought back into use; £1,076 million of credit approvals will be made available this year towards the renovation of local authority stock and the housing revenue account subsidy rules have been changed to give authorities a better incentive to bring empty properties back into use.

Vacant Land

26. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many acres of public vacant and derelict land he estimates as accumulating since he stopped updating the central register of vacant public land.

Mr. Yeo: Because of the incomplete response by owners and changes in the minimum size of site there is no basis for making such an estimate. We are proposing steps to improve the response as my hon. Friend was told on 7 May at column 401.

Roads

27. Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are taken to ensure that the allocation of resources to local government is adequate to ensure that local authority roads are kept in an acceptable state of repair.

Mr. Key: Local authority standard spending assessments include, where appropriate, adequate provision for highway maintenance.

Greenwich Social Services

29. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what determines the standard spending assessment on social services for Greenwich borough council.

Mr. Portillo: The method of allocating the standard spending assessment for social services is set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) as amended by the Revenue Support Grant (Amendment) Report (England) which was approved by the House in January this year. The same method is used for Greenwich as for all other social services authorities in England.

Dog Licensing

30. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has had any recent discussions with the RSPCA about dog licensing.

Mr. Baldry: My officials have regular discussions with the Joint Advisory Committee on Pets in Society, which includes RSPCA representatives, on matters relating to responsible dog ownership and to the implementation of the package of dog control measures contained in the Environmental Protection Act 1990. We will introduce the dog control measures next year. They include a duty on local authorities to enforce the requirement that dogs wear a collar and identification tag when in a public place and to ensure that stray dogs are collected up. We believe that the measures will encourage responsible ownership and directly address the main problems caused by dogs; whereas a national dog licensing or registration scheme would be bureaucratic, expensive to operate and ineffective.

Uncollected Rents

32. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of uncollected council housing rents at the last count.

Mr. Yeo: At the end of March 1990 English local authorities were owed an estimated £360 million in rent arrears.

Figures for the position in March 1991 are not yet available.

Hadrian's Wall

34. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the steps taken to preserve Hadrian's wall.

Mr. Yeo: Hadrian's wall is a scheduled ancient monument. As such, it is protected by the need to obtain the consent of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for any works within the scheduled area, in addition to any planning permission required.

Wind Farms

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning permissions for wind farms have been approved in England and in Wales during the two most recent years for which figures are available.

Mr. Yeo: This information is not held centrally.

Releases of Radioactivity

Mr. Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority released radioactivity to the environment since 1961 at levels that would have been subject to prosecution under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, prior to Crown immunity being withdrawn.

Mr. Trippier: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA) has never been subject to Crown immunity under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 (RSA 60) for the disposal of radioactive waste. Disposals from UKAEA premises are closely regulated by means of certificates of authorisation issued under RSA 60 by HMIP and where appropriate jointly with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, backed up by inspection of premises.

The only prosecution by HMIP under RSA 60 against UKAEA was on 5 June 1991 when the authority pleaded guilty to two breaches of conditions in its certificate of authorisation. We are not aware of any other releases of radioactivity which would have rendered the authority liable to prosecution.

Pollution Registers

Mr. Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out those areas of corporate information on pollution that will be excluded from deposition in the local register on grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Trippier: It is not possible to define exhaustively the areas of information which should be excluded on grounds of commercial confidentiality. Under section 22 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, the onus is on the operator to prove to the enforcing authority that disclosure of information would prejudice to an unreasonable degree their commercial interests—and every case will have to be considered on its merits.

Estate Action

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what approvals he intends to give for estate action funds for the refurbishment of the St. Martin's estate, Tulse Hill, London SW2.

Mr. Yeo: The Department did not offer estate action support for 1991-92 to Lambeth council towards the cost of its proposed work on the St. Martin's estate as the application failed to satisfy the objectives of the programme. No other application is being considered. The Department would be willing to consider a new bid for this estate in a future year, but approval would depend on the quality of the proposed scheme in competition with other bids received.

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the budget for the estate action programme in the current year.

Sir George Young: The estate action budget for 1991-92 is £268 million.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what figure he has included in his budget for granting aid to the National Rivers Authority for (a) the current financial year, (b) 1992-93 and (c) 1993-94.

Mr. Baldry: Grant-in-aid for the current year is £106·5 million. Planned provision for 1992-93 and 1993-94 of £96·9 million and £96 million respectively, as published in the Department's annual report 1991 (Cm. 1508), is subject to the Government's public expenditure decisions which will be announced later this year.

Building (Heating)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration has been given by his Department to the recommendation of the Technical Services Agency, that the law requiring the heating of buildings to a minimum of 16 deg. C should be extended to set a similar minimum temperature for housing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The standard of fitness for human habitation (section 604 of the Housing Act 1985 as amended by schedule 9 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989) requires that a dwelling-house shall have adequate provision for heating. Circular 6/90 advises that in deciding whether a dwelling-house is or is not unfit, an authority should consider whether the dwelling-house has provision for heating capable of generally maintaining the living room at a temperature of 18 deg. C or more and the other main rooms at a minimum of 16 deg. C.

Community Charge

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the amount of community charge payable by each eligible adult in a household of one, two, three, four or five adults where one, two or no adults have been exempted due to severe mental handicap in 1991-92 after the community charge reduction scheme has been applied, for each level of assumed rates in £50 bands from £150 to £500, in £100 bands from £500 to £1,500, £1,750 and £2,000, where in each case the community charge is set at each £10 increment between £140 and £600.

Mr. Key: I have today placed in the Library tables showing the information requested. The tables relate to the number of adults in a property who are not exempt from the community charge.

If there are people in a property who are exempt from the community charge for any reason, these people are disregarded in the calculation of the community charge reduction available to other occupants.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures his Department is taking to encourage recycling by local authorities.

Mr. Baldry: The Environmental Protection Act 1990 requires all waste collection authorities to prepare recycling plans. We have issued guidance on how to draw up the plans for consultation. We have also distributed £12 million of supplementary credit approvals for 1991-92 to enable local authorities to invest in recycling. This will add significantly to measures already in place to encourage recycling.

Homelessness

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he plans to introduce new initiatives to reduce the number of homeless people in Britain.

Sir George Young: All those accepted as homeless by local authorities are provided with accommodation. For the relatively small numbers who are literally homeless, we have allocated £96 million over three years to central London; and we are considering the possibility of extending the initiative to other parts of the country.

Derelict Land

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has completed his review of derelict land policy; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I have today arranged for copies of a derelict land grant advice note setting out the Government's new priorities and objectives for derelict land grant (DLG) to be deposited in the Library of the House of Commons.

The new policies set out in the advice note represent the culmination of the Review of Derelict Land Policy which has been carried out by the Department following the announcement by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside to the House on 20 July 1988. There have been extensive consultations with local authorities and other interested bodies.

The national priorities and objectives of DLG have been redefined to enable support to be given to the reclamation of sites for both development and environmental improvement. Priority will be given to the treatment of sites which are causing major environmental damage, particularly those which are badly contaminated. We have also enhanced the grant regime available to the private and voluntary sectors.

These changes go hand in hand with the 23 per cent. increase in resources for DLG in 1991-92 which I announced in a reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Mr. Favell) on 7 February 1991 at column 226. The Government's aim is to broaden the scope of DLG as a nation wide grant for the reclamation of derelict land and to make the grant regime more flexible and attractive. This will speed up the rate at which derelict land is reclaimed and returned to an appropriate use for the benefit of the local community.

In urban areas priority will be given to recycling land for development where there is a proven demand for investment from the private sector but reclamation for environmental improvement will also be welcomed in order to improve the attractiveness of an area as a place for investment or in which to live or work. This will include, for example, promoting nature or historic conservation and community forests.

In rural areas, emphasis will be placed on reclamation in areas of particularly high scenic quality and on schemes to foster development having regard to local planning policies.

Local authorities will be encouraged to develop reclamation strategies in consultation with local interests involved in reclamation. The number of rolling programmes of reclamation which allow local authorities to plan their reclamation strategies for several years ahead will be increased.

A more attractive grant regime for the private sector and for voluntary bodies has also been introduced. A wider range of costs will be eligible for grant and voluntary bodies will be able to apply directly to the Department for grants to clear up neglected or unsightly land. Non-local authority DLG will also be re-introduced into the 57 urban programme areas.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give for each available year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, or the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Information on my Department's energy consumption prior to 1989-90 is not readily available. In 1989-90 energy expenditure, excluding the Property Services Agency, was as follows (expenditure in 1990-91 money terms shown in brackets):

Electricity	1,593,562	(1,717,063)
Gas	831,377	(895,809)
Oil	362,696	(390,805)
Solid Fuel	4,003	(4,313)

Consumption relating to these was as follows

Kilowatt hours	34,000,000
Therms	2,600,000
Litres	3,300,000
Tonnes	70

The latest estimate of expenditure for 1990-91 which now includes Property Holdings is as follows (Property Holdings in Brackets):

Electricity	1,866,340	(390,000)
Gas	766,932	(66,000)
Oil	427,949	(0)
Solid Fuel	1,500	(0)

Consumption relating to these was as follows:

Kilowatt hours	31,105,667	(6,500,000)
Therms	2,095,442	(180,500)
Litres	3,229,804	(0)
Tonnes	16	(0)

The area of accommodation relating to the 1990-91 figures is 1,303,197 square feet. This excludes specialised property such as the royal parks and palaces which are included in the expenditure and consumption figures but to which the concept of floor area is inappropriate.

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled People

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, if he will make a statement on the number of disabled people who have been assisted in finding employment by his Department in each of the last 15 years?

Mr. Jackson: Information is not available in the precise form requested. However the Employment Service keeps information on the placings of people with disabilities into employment. I have asked Mike Fogden, chief executive of the Employment Service executive agency, to write to my hon. Friend on this operational matter.

Radway Green Ordnance Factory

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many redundancies have been declared at the Radway Green ordnance factory in the last year.

Mr. Forth: Information given to the Department under the redundancy handling provisions of the Employment Protection Act 1975 is provided in confidence and remains confidential until made public by the company concerned.

Child Care

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with the Confederation of British Industry to encourage companies to develop child care provision within their organisation to assist women at work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The CBI is represented on the advisory committee on women's employment which I chair. Child care has been discussed on a number of occasions. I welcome all steps by the CBI and other employers' organisations to encourage the adoption of flexible working arrangements and help with child care to assist working parents.

Labour Statistics

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of unemployed claimants in each constituency in the west midlands in April 1990 and April 1991; what was the percentage change in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the House of Commons Library. Unemployment in the west midlands remains 30 per cent. below what it was at the time of the last general election.

Disabled Trainees

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 586, if he will list the action taken by his Department to ensure that there is no discrimination against trainees with disabilities; and if he plans to introduce further legislative protection for trainees who suffer unjustifiable discrimination on the grounds of disability.

Mr. Jackson: There is a range of measures to enable people with disabilities to benefit from Government training programmes. For example young people with disabilities remain eligible for a guaranteed place on youth training beyond 18 if their availability for YT has been delayed by the effects of their disability or health problem.

From April 1991 people with disabilities regardless of the length of time they had been unemployed, were included in the Government's aim group that offers a place on either ET, EAS at a job club or on the job interview guarantee programme.

People with disabilities can be supplied with appropriate facilities and support to enable them to join youth training and employment training and to pursue suitable training. This covers such items as adaptations to premises, special aids and equipment.

Training and enterprise councils are required to set out in their corporate and business plans how they intend to meet the training needs of people with disabilities. These plans form the basis of their contract with this Department.

We have no plans to introduce further legislative protection for trainees.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what Business and Technician Education Council courses are financed through the TECs.

Mr. Jackson: TECs receive part of their funding from the Department of Employment for the achievement of NVQs and other equivalent qualifications acceptable to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment. There are at present 222 BTEC qualifications so designated.

Careers Service

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the organisations from which he received a response to his Department's consultative paper on the future of the careers service; and, of these, how many commented specifically on the future of careers advice for young people with disabilities.

Mr. Jackson: Many organisations responded to my Department's consultation on the future of the careers service announced in the White Paper "Education and Training for the 21st Century" (Cm. 1536). Those with an interest in providing services for people with disabilities were well represented in the responses. It is my intention to ensure that, however provision is organised, a high quality of careers service will be safeguarded everywhere.

Woodlee Employment Rehabilitation Centre

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the provision by Woodlee employment rehabilitation centre in Egham of residential assessment and rehabilitation for people with disabilities.

Mr. Jackson: The Secretary of State announced on 16 April, in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans) Official Report, columns 157-59, that employment services for people with disabilities are to be improved and developed.

New local employment service teams will be established over the next 12 to 18 months to provide more professional advice, assessment and help in finding and keeping work for people with disabilities.

Greater use will be made of the voluntary sector and others to provide employment rehabilitation, including residential facilities, and nine employment service regional centres of excellence will be established over, approximately, the next five years.

Operational responsibility for the development of employment services for people with disabilities, including the future of the Egham employment rehabilitation centre, rests with the chief executive of the Employment Service executive agency, Mike Fogden, to whom I have referred the right hon. Gentleman's question for a more detailed reply.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) members and (b) chairs of industrial tribunals are black; what ethnic monitoring policy is in operation in respect of industrial tribunals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: It is estimated that 51 lay members and 2 chairmen of the industrial tribunals are from the ethnic minorities. The number of lay members is monitored by asking applicants to give details of their ethnic origin. The monitoring of chairmen is a matter for the Lord Chancellor.

Job Clubs

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what instructions have been issued to managers of job clubs in connection with visits by hon. Members and parliamentary spokesmen.

Mr. Howard: As an executive agency, the employment service is being encouraged to promote contact between hon. Members and their local ES offices.

In the case of proposed visits by parliamentary spokesmen to local offices or to ES programmes such as job clubs, officials are required to notify such requests to my office. I am keen that parliamentary spokesmen should have an opportunity to see ES operations at first hand and I have written to the hon. Member to explain the position.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Student Numbers

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what were the student numbers in the bachelor of education degree, honours, in each year since 1988 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast;

(2) what were the student numbers in the bachelor of education degree, general, in each year since 1988 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast;

(3) what were the student numbers in the diploma in the advanced study of education in each year since 1988 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast;

(4) what were the student numbers in the post-graduate diploma in education in each year since 1988 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast and (c) Queen's university of Belfast.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers were:

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91
(a) Stranmillis college
BEd (Honours)	499	597	637
BEd (General)[1]	98	46	—
DASE[2]	69	70	58
PGCE[3]	67	63	55
PGCE (Hons) Psychology	3	6	6
(b) St. Mary's college
BEd (Honours)	512	587	629
BEd (General)[1]	111	46	—
DASE[2]	78	99	94
PGCE	65	64	58

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91
Queen's university PGCE[3]	119	125	146

[1] 1987-88 was the last year of entry to the three-year general degree course. Since 1988-89 all BEd entrants have followed a four-year honours course.
[2] DASE figures represent the full-time equivalent student loan.
[3] The diploma in education was replaced by the postgraduate certificate in education in 1976.

Education (Finance)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the budgetary allocation to Stranmillis college of education and St. Mary's college of education in each year since 1988.

Dr. Mawhinney: The budgets for approved recurrent expenditure in the last three financial years were:

	Stranmillis college	St. Mary's college
1988-89	3,544	3,345
1989-90	3,836	3,709
1990-91	4,117	4,032

The figures represent gross expenditure, part of which is funded from tuition fee income.

Private Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many private residential and nursing homes are currently registered in the Eastern and Southern health and social services boards; and if he will list them.

Mr. Hanley: At 31 December 1990, the latest date for which information is held centrally, the numbers of nursing homes registered by the Eastern and Southern health and social services boards were 66 and 29, respectively.

At 31 March 1991, the latest date for which information is held centrally, the numbers of homes for persons in need, registered by the Eastern and Southern health and social services boards were 105 and 23, respectively.

As the list requested is very lengthy, I have arranged for a copy to be sent to the hon. Gentleman and for copies to be placed in the Library.

Eye Surgery

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what measures will be taken to reduce the waiting list for cataract operations at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast;

(2) what additional resources will be allocated to eye surgery at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: Additional funds of some £440,000 have been allocated to ophthalmology at the Royal Victoria hospital over the past two years. The funds allocated thus far have enabled an extra 600 procedures to be carried out during 1990-91, the great majority of which have been for cataracts. I hope to announce in the near future further additional funding for 1991-92 which should enable an additional 1,200 procedures to be carried out during 1991-92.

Better management of waiting lists also helps to reduce both their length and the waiting time. The Department therefore supports the initiatives by the clinical resource efficiency support team, a group of clinicians formed to promote clinical efficiency. The team has produced a guidance booklet on waiting list management. As a result, boards have been asked to draw up programmes of management action focusing in particular on those specialties which have the greatest problems.

Social Services Committee

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will announce the composition of the new Social Services Committee which replaces the district committees disbanded on 1 April.

Mr. Hanley: The chairmen of the four councils were announced on 4 April and I hope to be able to announce the membership within the next few weeks.

Eye Surgery

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cataract operations were carried out at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast in each year since 1 April 1985.

Mr. Hanley: Information is based on calendar years from 1985 to 1988 and on the financial year for 1989-90. The numbers are:

Year	Cataract operations
1985	959
1986	957
1987	1,329
1988	1,595
1989-90	1,552

Advance Factories

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what locations there are unoccupied advance factories.

Mr. Needham: There are unoccupied advance factories at Antrim (technology park), Armagh, Ballymena, Bangor, Belfast (Adelaide), Craigavon, Londonderry (Springtown), Newtownards and Strabane.

Ryan Park, Castlereagh

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Northern Ireland Housing Executive removed the play equipment from the play area at the rear of Ryan park in the borough of Castlereagh; and what proposals there are to provide play equipment for the children of this residential area.

Mr. Needham: I am advised by the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that the Housing Executive has not removed any play equipment from the play area at the rear of Ryan park.

The Department of Environment has been unable to establish who removed it. However, I understand that Castlereagh borough council is now considering the provision of new play equipment for the children of the area.

Extradition (Irish Republic)

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the persons who have been extradited for political offences since 1980 (a) from Northern Ireland to the Republic of Ireland and (b) from the Republic of Ireland to Northern Ireland, giving the year in which the extradition occurred and indicating the outcome of the case.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. The legislation effecting extradition between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland precludes extradition for a political offence.

Fair Employment

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland including staff transferred from the former Fair Employment Agency, how many members of the Fair Employment Commission staff have been appointed since Mr. Harry Goodman was appointed chief executive of the commission; how many of these staff members are Roman Catholics; and if he will make a statement about Mr. Goodman's previous experience of industry and personnel management prior to his appointment as chief executive of the Commission.

Mr. Needham: Thirty one members of the Fair Employment Commission staff have been appointed since Mr. Harry Goodman was appointed chief executive of the commission, of whom 18 are Protestant and 13 are Roman Catholic.

Mr. Harry Goodman's career began in the Northern Ireland civil service. Prior to leaving the NICS in 1978, he had been a senior manpower adviser on personnel and industrial relations matters, work which necessitated extensive contact with both sides of industry at the highest levels of both management and trade unions.

On leaving the civil service, Mr. Goodman became assistant chief executive and chief officer (advisory services) of the Labour Relations Agency where his work included the development of a range of advisory services to industry on industrial relations and employment and personnel matters, as well as the management of finance and personnel within the organisation. He also had responsibility for the conciliation services associated with individual complaints.

Mr. Goodman is an economics graduate of Queen's university Belfast and a fellow of the Institute of Personnel Management.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will state the number of persons whose perceived religious affiliation was Protestant and Roman Catholic and (a) operational staff and (b) other staff of (i) the Fair Employment Agency at the time of its dissolution, (ii) the Fair Employment Commission at the time of its creation and (iii) the Fair Employment Commission at the present time.

Mr. Needham: As the Fair Employment Agency became the Fair Employment Commission on 1 January 1990, the number of staff at the time of the agency's dissolution is the same as the number of commission staff at the time of its creation.

The commission has declared its intention to make monitoring information available on a yearly basis. To make such information available more frequently and covering shorter periods could infringe the confidentiality requirements of the Fair Employment Acts by disclosing the religious beliefs of identifiable individuals. Accordingly, details are provided in relation to support and operational staff as at 1 January 1991.

1 January 1990	Protestant	Roman Catholic
Operational staff	7	15
Support staff	7	4

1 January 1991	Protestant	Roman Catholic
Operational staff	18	19
Support staff	12	8

Further Education

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what plans he has to remove further education in Northern Ireland from education and library board control;

(2) if he will make a statement on his conclusions for the future of further education subsequent to the consultative document "Signposts for the 90s"

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. and noble Friend the Paymaster General recently announced the conclusions that the Government have reached about the future of further education in Northern Ireland. These took account of the responses received to the consultative document "Signposts for the 90s". In particular, my right hon. and noble Friend announced proposed new arrangements designed to achieve the Government's aim of a better planned and co-ordinated system of further education in the Province. The Government are satisfied that this aim can be achieved without disturbing the existing statutory position of the further education colleges and the education and library boards.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will specify the number of lecturing posts in each college of further education which have been transferred from youth training programme funding to mainstream further education funding since April 1991.

Dr. Mawhinney: Following the introduction of the block funding arrangements for the youth training programme (YTP) on 1 April 1990, the Department of Education was advised that, in a number of further education colleges, some full-time teaching posts which had been funded from YTP resources in previous years were now deployed mainly on mainstream (non-YTP) courses. The number of posts, and the colleges involved are:

Name of College	Number of posts
Institute of Further and Higher Education—Belfast
College of technology	4
College of busines studies	3
Rupert Stanley college	3
Antrim	3
Ballymena	1
Coleraine	2
Magherafelt	3
Newtownabbey	5
Fermanagh	4

Name of College	Number of posts
Limavady	3
North West college	6
Omagh	2
Down	9
Lisburn	2
Newcastle	5
North Down and Ards college	8

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will specify how much has been allocated by each education and library board to further education out of his recent announcement to allow boards to spend £2·7 million to help to prevent teacher redundancies and to specify the mechanism by which boards allocated this money to colleges.

Dr. Mawhinney: Of the total sum of £2·7 million allocated by the Department, £1·3 million was earmarked for primary schools. Boards then decided how the remaining £1·4 million should be allocated to their post-primary schools and further education colleges.

The amounts allocated by boards to further education colleges were as follows:

Education and library board	£
Belfast	70,000
Western	50,000
North-Eastern	80,000
South-Eastern	Nil
Southern	40,000

Boards allocated these sums to colleges by application of the formula set out in their FE delegation schemes or on the basis of greatest need.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will specify the amount of the unit of resource being applied by each education and library board to fund a full-time equivalent student in further education.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the relative value of the unit of resource for further education to the level of funding for an A-level student in each grammar school in each board area.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

SCOTLAND

Staffing Levels

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the whole time equivalent number of (i) medical staff, (ii) hospital doctors, (iii) general practitioners, (iv) community doctors and (v) nursing and midwifery staff employed in the Scottish health service in each year since 1974, inclusive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested for each year from 1974 to 1989 is contained in editions of Scottish Health Statistics, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Staff in post at 30 September 1990, whole-time equivalents

	Wte	Wtu
Medical staff		9,918·0
Comprising hospital doctors	5,746·3
Community doctors	428·7
General medical practitioners	[1]3,743·0
General dental practitioners		1,694·0
Nursing and midwifery		63,687·2

[1] Provisional, including assistants and trainees.

Council Housing

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many council houses there are; and how many council (a) houses and (b) flats have been sold in (i) Scotland and (ii) Renfrew district since May 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on local authority housing stock was published in table 14 of Statistical Bulletin HSU No. 17. Copies were sent to all Members representing Scottish constituencies and are available in the House Library.

Information on the number of council houses and flats sold to sitting tenants between April 1979 and December 1990 is set out in the table.

	Total	Houses	Flats
Scotland	[1]159,020	116,334	42,267
Renfrew	7,064	4,204	2,860

(1) Includes sales where dwelling type is not known.

Mortgage Repossessions

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mortgage repossessions there have been in (a) Strathclyde region and (b) Renfrew district during each of the past 12 months for which records are available; and what were the annual figures for each of the past 12 months.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available in the form requested. The Council of Mortgage Lenders publishes statistics in their regular newsletters on various aspects of mortgage lending by building societies but this is on a Great Britain basis and no corresponding information is available for Scotland only. No information about other mortgage lenders is held centrally.

Road Safety

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve road safety in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office is committed to playing its full part towards achievement of the Government's target of reducing road accident casualties by one-third by the year 2000. The Scottish Office will work closely with local roads authorities to draw up the road safety plans recommended in the Local Authority Association's "Code of Good Practice" endorsed by COSLA in 1989. It will initiate appropriate engineering works and standards, publicity, education and enforcement measures and legislative changes to improve road safety in Scotland.

In addition to a very substantial ongoing investment on the road network in Scotland, the Scottish Office has set up an accident investigation and prevention (AIP) unit with its own budget to finance safety schemes on trunk roads. A rolling programme has been prepared by the local authority agents, whose accident remedial unit's viability and establishment has been largely underwritten by the volume of trunk road work, thus allowing expanded expenditure on local roads.

The Scottish road safety campaign, which is largely funded by the Scottish Office, has an ongoing programme providing publicity and education materials in Scotland to raise public awareness of the importance of road safety. This is in addition to the Department of Transport's national campaigns.

Sexual Offences

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many reported cases of rape there were in Scotland in 1989 and 1990; how many men were prosecuted for rape in each of these years; how many were convicted; what were the sentences; and how many had previously served a sentence for the same offence.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1989 and 1990, 328 and 326 cases respectively of rape were recorded by the police in Scotland. In 1989, 89 men were proceeded against, 50 of whom had a charge of rape proved against them. Of these 50, 39 were imprisoned, seven were sent to a young offenders' institution, two were admonished, one was fined and in one case no order was made.

In 1989, three men successfully prosecuted for rape were recorded as having previously served a sentence for this crime. Court disposal figures for 1990 are not yet available.

Mental Handicap

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will amend the current community charge legislation so as to exempt from any liability those with a mental health handicap who live in accommodation of the Ark housing association and other special housing associations.

Mr. Lang: I have no plans to make any changes to the existing community charge arrangements. However, I have previously made it clear that I would be prepared to do so if particular circumstances showed that changes were necessary.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will exempt those with a mental handicap who live in property of the Ark housing association and other special housing associations from liability to all or part of the proposed council tax.

Mr. Lang: We shall be considering the responses to the consultation paper on our council tax proposals before reaching final decisions on issues of this kind.

Student Accommodation

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many students were resident in college accommodation at each university in Scotland in 1990; and what was the proportion of the total number of students in such accommodation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is given in the table:

Session 1989-90

University	Number of students in university-owned residence	Percentage of total full-time students
Aberdeen	2,808	46·0
Dundee	1,494	39·7
Edinburgh	4,270	39·3
Glasgow	2,682	23·3
Heriot-Watt	1,026	23·3
St. Andrews	2,448	62·1
Stirling	2,086	61·1
Strathclyde	1,520	18·2
All Scotland	18,328	35·0

Primary School Testing

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations have been made to him by school boards or parent-teacher associations which have been in favour of compulsory primary school testing.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: To date, about 1,300 representatives including those from school boards and parent teacher associations have been received, covering a complete spectrum of views on testing.

Dogs

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of dogs in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Springburn (Mr. Martin) on 5 June 1991 at column 262.

Farm Employment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farmers, partners, directors and farmworkers were employed by region in Scotland in June 1980.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of farmers, spouses doing farm work and farmworkers employed on main holdings in June 1980, by local authority region, is shown in the following table. Partners and directors are not separately enumerated in the June census but are included either as farmers or farmworkers.

Region	Number of farmers	Number of spouses doing farm work	Number of farmworkers
Borders	1,143	309	3,513
Central	738	265	1,322
Dumfries and Galloway	2,352	806	5,176
Fife	755	225	2,623
Grampian	4,826	1,290	7,549
Highland	2,997	938	2,734
Lothian	805	253	2,802
Strathclyde	4,393	1,989	7,316
Tayside	2,025	532	6,212
Islands	3,027	1,265	1,355
Scotland	23,061	7,872	40,602

Note:

The coverage of main holdings has changed since June 1980. In 1986 some 6,000 holdings were transferred from the main to the minor holdings list. At that time these holdings returned 3,480 farmers, 1,071 spouses and 463 farm workers.

Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which organisations representing parents the Minister of State is willing to meet to discuss educational matters.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am happy of course to receive the views of parents on educational matters at any time, whether or not they are members of an organisation.

House Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number of private sector houses in Glasgow over each of the past five years, and the total amount of grant for repairs and maintenance in each year, and express that total as divided by the number of private sector houses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1991]: The available information is set out in the table. Grant is not payable for ongoing works of maintenance.

	Private sector dwellings[1] (a)	Amount of repair grant paid[2] £ (b)	(b) ÷ (a)
1986	119,172	24,143,865	203
1987	122,176	24,116,945	197
1988	125,401	23,575,413	188
1989	128,093	30,197,296	236
1990	n/a	18,690,760	n/a

n/a not available.

New Towns (Employment)

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs were created, and how many jobs were lost, in each of the Scottish new towns in 1990.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 June 1991]: This information is not available for the 1990 calendar year. The development corporations' estimates for the 1990-91 financial year are as follows:

New town	Number of jobs created	Number of jobs lost	Net loss or gain
Cumbernauld	872	189	+683

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food further to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 375, if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the amount spent on agricultural support in the United Kingdom under the common agricultural policy and by national grants and subsidies in both actual and real terms for 1960-61 and for each year from 1973-74 to 1990-91.

Mr. Curry: Separate figures for expenditure under the Common Agricultural Policy and on national grants and subsidies are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the positive steps taken by his Ministry to move the emphasis from quantitative to qualitative support in agriculture policy in the EC.

Mr. Curry: The Government have supported a number of changes to the common agricultural policy designed to make Community agriculture more market orientated. Such changes should encourage farmers to respond to consumer demand and to rely less on artificial outlets such as intervention.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet constituents of the hon. Member for Devon, North who suffer from the effects of using organophosphorous sheep dip compounds.

Mr. Maclean: I met representatives from the Pesticides Exposure Group of Sufferers (PEGS) on 23 October 1990. I can see little advantage in having a further meeting at this time.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many complaints he has received about the physical side effects of organophosphorous sheep dip compounds; if he will refuse future licences for these compounds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have received 63 reports since 1985 of suspected adverse reactions concerning the physical side effects to humans of organophosphorous sheep dips. Twelve of these reports relate to products no longer licensed. In addition I have recently received 18 brief reports from the National Poisons Centre which my officials are currently investigating. I am not yet able to say whether these reports include duplicates of those mentioned above.

These 63 reports should be set in the context of more than 1 million dippings since 1985.

All suspected adverse reaction reports are investigated. Future licence applications for such compounds will continue to be determined in accordance with the Medicines Act criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. Existing organophosphorous sheep dip products are currently being reviewed to see whether they meet up-to-date standards. Any products which fail to do so will have to be withdrawn from the market. The review will be completed later this year.

Pigs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library copies of representations he has received concerning his proposed regulations on sow stalls and tethers; and when he expects these regulations to become effective.

Mr. Maclean: Those consulted on the draft Welfare of Pigs Regulations 1991 were not warned that their responses might be made public and I do not therefore propose to make them available.

If Parliament approves the proposed regulations this month, they will make it illegal to use new close confinement systems for pigs from 1 October this year and will phase out existing installations of this kind by the end of 1998.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the evidence of blue ear disease among pigs in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Symptoms not immediately attributable to any specific disease have occurred on eleven premises in Humberside. Blue-eared pig disease, which has occurred in a number of other Community countries, cannot be ruled out as the cause. Movement restrictions have been imposed on the areas surrounding the holdings concerned and investigations are continuing.

Meat Inspection Charges

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the practices of meat inspection charges being passed directly to producers.

Mr. Maclean: We are aware of the concerns expressed by livestock producers about the passing back of an element of the meat inspection charges. The purpose of meat inspection and residue sampling at slaughterhouses is, of course, to protect the final consumer. We are also aware that the Director General of Fair Trading is considering this issue and this Department stands ready to provide any inspection he may require.

Dogs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 3 June, Official Report, what information he holds concerning the details of dogs imported into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Prospective importers of dogs into this country are required to supply details of their animal such as breed, age and sex in order that the Department can issue an import licence. This information is used to check that a dog arriving in the United Kingdom is covered by an import licence. Subsequently the information is not required and it could only be retrieved at disproportionate cost. The numbers of import licences issued for dogs during the last five years are:

	Number
1986	4,738
1987	5,249
1988	5,132
1989	5,915
1990	5,999

Sugar

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the 1991-92 farm prices as they affect sugar production and prices.

Mr. Curry: In the 1991-92 price settlement, EC support prices for sugar beet and white sugar were frozen at 1990-91 levels in ECU terms. A green pound devaluation will result in a 2·04 per cent. increase in these prices in the United Kingdom.

Green Pound Devaluation

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on consumers arising from the recent green pound devaluation.

Mr. Curry: It is estimated that when the effects have fully worked through the devaluations will increase the food price index by approximately 0·25 per cent. and the retail price index by less than 0·05 per cent.

Farm Employment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers, partners, directors and farmworkers were employed by county in England in June 1980.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is given in the table. Data are taken from the June 1980 agricultural census and hence exclude estimates for minor holdings not in the annual census.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for the future of the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Curry: The Government's approach has been to encourage the dairy industry to come forward with proposals for more open and competitive milk marketing arrangements. We welcomed the milk marketing board's decision to submit plans for transforming itself to co-operative status. The next step is for the board to bring the dairy trade into its discussions and there will need to be an opportunity for wider consultation with all interests affected before decisions are taken. The Government are ready to facilitate change provided it commands industry support and is compatible with competition law.

DEFENCE

JP233 Weapons

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has completed his evaluation of the effectiveness of the JP233s delivered by the RAF in the Gulf war; if this weapon is still being produced; and if any have been sold to other nations.

Mr. Alan Clark: We are continuing to study all aspects of the Gulf campaign. Production of the JP233 has now ceased. It is not our normal practice to comment on whether particular items of defence equipment have been sold abroad.

Gulf War

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete the lessons of the Gulf weapons and tactics used by Her Majesty's Forces in the recent war.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Detailed analysis of the campaign and the conclusions to be drawn from it is continuing, and will not be complete for some time.

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is now able to state how many of the seven Tornado aircraft lost in the Gulf war were shot down by enemy action; and how many crashed after flying into the ground without being hit by hostile fire.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Of the six Tornados lost in action during the Gulf conflict, it now seems likely that two aircraft were lost to anti-aircraft fire and a third to a surface-to-air missile at medium level, but detailed investigations are continuing.

Boxer System

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why the Royal Air Force needs a new advance communications network; how many towers are to be built as part of the Boxer system, and where; how much these new arrangements will cost; what discussions he had with British Telecom and Mercury with a view to their providing such a network for leasing by the Royal Air Force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Royal Air Force's existing communications system within the United Kingdom, which relies almost entirely on commercially-rented facilities, lacks sufficient capacity for high-speed digital data transfer. The Boxer network which will replace it, will include a total of 212 microwave link towers, using existing towers wherever possible. For security reasons locations cannot be disclosed. The estimated cost of the project is £230 million. The option of continuing to rely on commercially-rented facilities has been considered but rejected on cost grounds.

Married Quarters, Hampshire

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the sufficiency of availability of married quarters for the various units due to be withdrawn from BAOR under the new NATO arrangements; and what assessment he has made of the effect upon housing requirements in Hampshire.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The future requirement for married quarters in the United Kingdom is currently being reviewed as part of the "Options for Change" studies.

Low Flying

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the avoidance areas for low-flying military aircraft over Wales.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: As set out in the Government's reply to the Defence Committee's report on low flying last year (HC 659/90), it remains our policy not to release such information.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the corridor for low-flying aircraft running north from the Severn estuary to the Black mountains was narrowed in the past 10 years; and what were the reasons for the change.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I am not aware of any such corridor. The structure of the current United Kingdom low flying system is designed to make the widest possible area available for low flying training so as to minimise the level of disturbance to those on the ground.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if fhe will define the boundaries of the transit areas for low-flying aircraft over Wales now and those which existed prior to 1985.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I will write to the hon. Member.

Rapid Reaction Force

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom nuclear weapons will be allocated in support of the new allied command in Europe rapid reaction force; and what additional costs will result to the armed forces budget as a result of the NATO Ministers' meeting on 28 May.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We do not comment on nuclear weapon deployments. The costs of the force structure emerging from the "Options for Change" study and from consultations with NATO are being further refined and the Government's spending plans for defence will be set out in the Autumn Statement following this year's public expenditure discussions.

Challenger Tank

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ask General Dynamics to detail those aspects of its tender for the Challenger tank replacement which cover senior executives' emoluments.

Mr Alan Clark: No.

Helicopter Flights, Northern Ireland

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average daily number of helicopter flights to and from Army installations at (a) Crossmaglen, (b) Bessbrook, (c) Forkhill, (d) Drummuckavall, (e) Crievekeeran and (f) Glassdrummond in each month since 1 January 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the practice to provide operational details of this kind.

General Dynamics

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those contracts valued at over £10 million for which General Dynamics is currently tendering as prime contractor.

Mr. Alan Clark: Involving my Department, one only —the contract for a main battle tank to replace the Chieftain.

Contract Tendering

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to ask companies tendering for contracts for information in relation to senior executives' emoluments.

Mr. Alan Clark: Our existing arrangements with industry are adequate in this regard.

Vacant Land

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out in the Official Report the location of each site and its acreage of the unused and underused land held by his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The MOD register of unused and underused land in England is presently being updated. A list of sites included in the register as at 31 March 1990 is set out below. Many of these sites have now been sold or are in the process of disposal. I will provide the hon. Member with a revised list when available. Similar information for land held in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Batus Range Accident

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether metal detectors were used as part of the range clearance or safety measures before Grenadier guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey were ordered to dig a trench in an impact area of the Batus live firing range in Canada on 7 July 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Metal detectors are not used as part of the range clearance measures at the Batus training area. The range covers some 2,630 sq km (1,000 sq mi) and it would be impractical to use detectors to sweep the area.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the findings and of the summary findings of the board of inquiry into the Batus range accident of 7 July 1989 involving Grenadier guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will arrange for a summary of the findings of the board of inquiry into this incident to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement outlining the reasons for his conclusion that no blame attached to anyone for the detonation of an unexploded shell that caused grievous injuries to Grenadier guardsmen Adrian Hicks, John Ray and Sean Povey.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Legal advice was that it was not reasonably foreseeable that there should be a buried live munition at the spot where the trench was being dug and there was no blame attributable.

Written Answers to Questions

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Court Appeals

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Attorney-General what arrangements are available to review convictions which have been upheld on appeal from the magistrates court to the Crown Court, but in relation to which new evidence has come to light after the Crown Court appeal; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: There is no statutory power to enable such convictions to be reviewed or appealed against although the Divisional Court has held that it has, in its supervisory jurisdiction, power to quash the conviction of a defendant who pleaded quilty on the basis of flawed evidence unwittingly relied on by the prosecution or whose conviction was obtained by fraud, collusion, perjury or other like matter. I refer the hon. and learned Gentleman to the judgment in R. v. Bolton Justices Ex Parte Scally which is reported at [1991] 2All ER 619 and at [1991] 1 QB 537.

Legislation Texts

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Attorney-General if he will review the arrangements for enabling the public to have access to the texts of legislation; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor recognises that he has a responsibility, on behalf of the Government, to ensure that satisfactory arrangements are made for the publication of the statute book, in order that the citizen may know by what laws he is bound. Since 1868, the Statute Law Committee, established by Lord Chancellor Cairns, has met periodically to consider issues relating to the publication of the statute book. In recent times it has been assisted by an editorial board to supervise the publication of statutes in force and by a secretariat. The Lord Chancellor has come to the conclusion that these somewhat complex arrangements are not best suited, under modern conditions, for the effective discharge of this responsibility. He has, therefore, decided to replace the committee, and its subordinate bodies, with a single body to be known as the Advisory Committee on Statute Law. This body will advise him as and when required on all matters relating to the publication of the statute book, including the availability of up-to-date texts in both printed and electronic form. It will meet under his chairmanship or that of his Permanent Secretary, and its membership will comprise the Clerk of the Parliaments, the Clerk of the House of Commons, the Chairman of the Law Commission, the chairman of the Scottish Law Commission, First Parliamentary Counsel, the legal secretary to the Lord Advocate and First Scottish Parliamentary Counsel, First Legislative Counsel for Northern Ireland, the Treasury Solicitor, the Solicitor to the Scottish Office, and representatives from Her Majesty's Stationery Office and the Lord Chancellor's Department. In addition, it will be able to involve user and consumer groups as necessary, either by way of consultation or by invitation to attend meetings of the Committee.

CIVIL SERVICE

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which his office was responsible for each of the past five years together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

Mr. Renton: In the past five years, my office has been responsible for a number of appointments to the Civil Service Appeal Board. The appointments are fee-paid. Chairmen are normally appointed for three years and deputy chairmen and members for two years. Further details may be found in "Public Bodies" which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the expenditure covered by his office's hospitality fund for the financial years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Tim Renton: Expenditure by my office, excluding No. 10 Downing street and my executive agencies, on hospitality, is as follows:

1989-90	6,702
1990-91	4,393
[1]1991-92	1,422

[1] To date.

THE ARTS

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which his office was responsible for each of the past five years together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the annual publication "Public Bodies" and to the Women's National Commission's "Handbook for Women's Organisations" published in July, 1990. My office is the sponsor department for a large number of public bodies. The verification and provision of the termination date of each board or council member's appointment would, I regret, involve disproportionate costs.

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will list the expenditure covered by his office's hospitality fund for the financial years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Tim Renton: The Office of Arts and Libraries has spent £5,741 on official hospitality in 1989-90, £2,890 in 1990-91, and £1,262 in 1991-92 to date.

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his office during the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Renton: "The Cook Report: Raiders of the Lost Art"—ITV, 29 April 1991. No purchases were made in 1990-91.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give for each available year from 1978, the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1990-91 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes; and if he will give the square footage of accommodation to which these figures relate.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 3 June 1991]: The information requested by the hon. Member is available only in (a) cash and (b) 1990-91 money terms from 1987-88, and (c) in units of consumption from 1989-90. This is given in the table:

	Electricity			Gas			Liquid fuel
	Cash £	1990-91 prices £	'000 kilowatt hours	Cash £	1990-91 prices £	'000 therms	Cash £	1990-91 prices £	'000 litres
1987-88	5,069	6,241	n/a	1,349	1,661	n/a	659	812	n/a
1988-89	6,717	7,699	n/a	970	1,112	n/a	845	969	n/a
1989-90	5,877	6,332	102	872	940	2	778	838	6
1990-91	6,048	6,048	106	280	280	1	860	860	5

n/a = Not available.

No solid fuel is used. The figures relate to 14,262 sq ft of floor space.

Bradford Cinema

Mr. Madden: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement about provision for cinema in Bradford involving the British Film Institute.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 10 June 1991]: Discussions are continuing between the British Film Institute and interested parties in Bradford on the future configuration of cinema in Bradford as a partnership between the Museum Library Cinema and the Bradford Playhouse.

ENVIRONMENT

Royal Parks

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his written answer concerning the status of the royal parks, of 3 June, Official Report, column 3, he will list the changes that are liable to occur to (a) employment of permanent staff in the royal parks, their career structure and skill training, (b) recruitment, and morale and (c) supervisors of work of ground maintenance by contract or other means, including outside tendering or agency arrangements.

Mr. Yeo: The changes for staff in the royal parks will depend on future arrangements for carrying out ground maintenance work. These are still under consideration.

Local Government Structure

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the proposed change to the structure of local government.

Mr. Key: So far we have received 432 responses to our consultation paper on local government structure.

Countryside Preservation

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has considered the effect of hedgerow and stonedyke systems upon the conservation of wildlife and management of the countryside; if he will consider the introduction of statutory controls over the removal of such systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Department has commissioned a research project on hedgerow management—including environmental and wildlife aspects. We shall receive the final report shortly.

In our White Paper "This Common Inheritance" we announced our intention to give local planning authorities powers to protect important hedgerows in their areas. A consultation paper issued in December gave further details. Responses to that paper have raised a number of key issues, and we are giving these careful consideration. It would therefore be premature to legislate, and we have tabled an amendment to the Planning and Compensation Bill to delete provision for such orders from that Bill. I shall be making a full statement on this matter at the resumption of Report stage. Our aim is to ensure that any scheme commands the widest possible agreement and will be fair and practicable.

Homelessness

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what annual percentage of households accepted as homeless by local authorities in London have been accepted under the category of vulnerability due to age each year for the last 10 years; what number of households this represents for each year; and what number of people this represents for each year.

Sir George Young: The available information relates to the number of households accepted by local authorities under the homelessness legislation as having a priority need for accommodation because of vulnerability due to old age. The number of persons in such households is not reported. The estimates based on returns from London boroughs are as follows:

Year	Number of households	as percentage of all priority acceptances
1981	1,300	7
1982	1,700	8
1983	1,900	8
1984	1,900	8
1985	2,300	9
1986	2,200	8
1987	2,100	7
1988	2,100	7
1989	1,900	6
1990	1,800	5

Note: Including estimates for missing returns.

East Quayside Development, Tyne and Wear

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation first entered into any legal or binding agreement in respect of the East Quayside development; with whom these agreements were made and on what terms; what is their current status and when this altered; and what is the current position of the corporation with respect to receiving tenders for this development;

(2) on what date Tyne and Wear urban development corporation carried out a full financial investigation into the financial standing of NQD plc in relation to the selection of a preferred developer of East Quayside; what guaranteees were sought from NQD as to its ability to continue the development after the collapse of Stanley Miller; and what steps were taken to monitor the accounts of NQD over the past three years;

(3) when was the last time that a financial check was made on the preferred developer for the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation East Quayside project;

(4) when the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation was first aware that NQD plc was trading while insolvent;

(5) how much money was paid by Tyne and Wear urban development corporation to the successful developer as a contribution for work preceding the competition for the redevelopment at East Quayside; to whom this money was paid; and in what form it was paid;

(6) if he will make a statement on the stages of selection to find the preferred developer for the East Quayside scheme, East Newcastle;

(7) what criteria the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation applied to selecting preferred developers; and how these were applied in assessing the financial status of NQD plc in regard to East Quayside development;

(8) what is the compulsory purchase order price agreed with the district valuer for the seven acre site on East Quayside, Newcastle, formerly owned by Stanley Miller;

(9) what is the current value of the land formerly owned by Stanley Miller on the East Quayside; on what date Stanley Miller transferred ownership of the land to NQD; and how many days then followed before Stanley Miller was in receivership;

(10) if he will name (a) the architects and (b) the engineers who designed the original Godfrey Bradman scheme which was accepted by Tyne and Wear urban development corporation, for the redevelopment of Newcastle Quayside; and whether either are still associated with the project;

(11) what action the chief executive of Tyne and Wear urban development corporation took to seek a partner for Shearwater after Stanley Miller went into receivership;

(12) how many consultants reported findings to the board of Tyne and Wear urban development corporation on the competition for the East Quayside development on (a) financial assessment, (b) hotel advice, (c) quantity surveyors, (d) valuers, (e) retail leisure specialists, (f) design/planning consultants and (g) economic assessment; and where these reports are available for inspection.

Mr. Key: It would not be appropriate to comment at the present time on matters relating to the proposed redevelopment of Newcastle's East Quayside. A related compulsory purchase order and stopping up of highways order may yet be subject to further legal challenge in the Court of Appeal. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member as soon as all the legal issues are resolved.

Rents-to-Mortgages Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the percentage target figure his Department has set in respect of the rents-to-mortgages pilot scheme for council house tenants in Basildon.

Mr. Yeo: The scheme is for tenants of the Commission for the New Towns, not local authority tenants: that would require primary legislation. There is no set target for sales, the purpose being to test the working of rents to mortgages.

Water Privatisation

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the range of remuneration received by the former board members of the water authorities immediately prior to privatisation.

Mr. Trippier: The ranges were set out for each authority in "Public Bodies 1989"—ISBN 0 11 430042 9—a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the salaries received by former chairmen of the water authorities immediately prior to privatisation.

Mr. Trippier: The salaries were listed in "Public Bodies 1989"—ISBN 0 11 430042 9—a copy of which is in the Library.

EC Nuclear Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department was invited to participate in or send an observer to the conference on European Community nuclear issues and local authorities, held in Birmingham on 5 June; and if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of papers presented.

Mr. Baldry: I have no knowledge of this conference.

Radioactive Waste Disposal

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the proposal to be put forward by Iceland, Norway and

Denmark to the Paris Commission on Marine Pollution in its meeting in the Hague on 17 June, recommending that the disposal of radioactive waste under the seabed be brought within the remit of the commission.

Mr. Baldry: The Government take the view that the disposal of radioactive waste under the seabed accessed from the land is outside the scope of the present Paris convention. However, this issue will need to be addressed at the appropriate time, within the context of the review of the Oslo and Paris conventions which is currently under way.

Glenlochay Compensation Award

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what policy conclusions he has drawn from the Glenlochay compensation award.

Mr. Trippier: We shall wish to study the details of the award carefully before reaching any conclusions.

Planning and Development

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has considered the report of the research carried out on behalf of his Department into the effects of the Use Classes Order 1987 and associated provisions in the General Development Order 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Independent research into the effects of these orders was carried out last year on behalf of the Department by Wootton Jeffreys Consultants, in association with Bernard Thorpe. I have considered the consultants' report, which is being published today by HMSO.

The researchers found that the introduction in 1987 of "business" use class had improved the efficiency with which space is used and had widened choice. They found evidence that some existing industrial uses have been replaced by cleaner uses, and that the opportunity for change has attracted greater investment, resulting in improvements to the local environment. Although the researchers found some evidence of increased traffic generated by more intensive use of former industrial land, no other adverse effects on amenity or the environment were associated with the business use class. I am therefore satisfied that there is no case on environmental grounds for amending the business use class.

The research confirmed continuing misgivings about the business use class in other respects, including the displacement of manufacturing jobs, which have traditionally met local employment needs, and of pressures on specialised activities which have built up in particular locations. Nevertheless, I am satisfied that development activity since the 1987 Use Classes Order has been generally consistent with existing, often long-established market trends. I have concluded that to amend legislation which applies uniformly throughout England and Wales in response to these concerns would not be justified.

Where clear justification can be provided, it remains open to planning authorities to propose policies in development plans aimed at channelling particular types of business development into particular locations. Development plans should not generally contain policies advocating the imposition of general restrictions on the freedoms provided by the Use Classes Order or the General Development Order.

The research revealed evidence of some local controversy resulting from changes of use involving fast-food and take-away outlets within the food and drink use class. I am also aware of some misgivings over changes of use to and from public houses within that use class. I am not persuaded that a case has been made for adjusting the present scope for changes of use in the high street sector, where the researchers found that market activity has been generally subdued since 1987.

I am encouraged that the researchers found that the inclusion of small group homes within the dwelling houses use class has benefited the care in the community programme, without adverse effects on amenity. My attention has been drawn to concern about the impact on residential areas of changes of use within the hotels and hostels use class. This concern appears to be associated as much with the characteristics of the clientele, where "down market" changes of use have taken place, as with any land-use planning difference between the uses encompassed within the use class. There is some very localised evidence of harm to amenity, through increased traffic and general activity, associated with the conversion of hostels into hotels, but this is insufficient to merit amending the order.

I have concluded that the freedom from planning control currently provided by the Use Classes Order and part 3 of schedule 2 to the General Development Order should remain unchanged. However, the Government proposes to continue to monitor closely the effects of the Use Classes Order and General Development Order and we are minded to commission further research in another three to five years.

Discharge Consents

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will approve the scheme of charges in respect of discharge consents proposed by the National Rivers Authority in March under the Water Act 1989.

Mr. Baldry: Following public consultation my right hon. Friend has today approved the NRA's proposed charging scheme for implementation from 1 July, subject to a number of modifications mainly aimed at making the scheme's provisions clearer. A copy of the modified scheme has been deposited in the Library. We shall keep the operation of the scheme under careful review throughout its three-year period of validity.

The scheme represents an important element of the Government's wider commitment to implement the "polluter pays" principle. It will ensure that the NRA's costs incurred in authorising and monitoring direct discharges of effluent to water are borne by dischargers themselves. By recouping the costs in this way it will save the general taxpayer some £41 million in a full year via a reduced need for grant in aid to the NRA.

New Parliamentary Buildings

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to save the mahogany railed staircase and related iron-work after the proposed demolition of No. 1 Bridge street.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 7 June 1991]: As the hon. Member will no doubt be aware, the Opposed Bill Committee which considered the Jubilee Line Bills has recommended that approval to demolish Nos. 1 and 2

Bridge street, which is necessary to enable the new Westminster station to be constructed, should not be given until the House has approved the design of the new parliamentary building, to be built on the site.

Design work has not yet started so it is too soon to say whether the staircase can be used in the new building or should be removed for use elsewhere.

Councils (Internal Management)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the third paper of his review of local government relating to internal management of local councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 21 May 1991 at column 402.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Incomes

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what percentage police pay, pensions and allowances have been raised higher or lower than the rate of inflation for each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested in respect of pay is set out in the table and shows the minimum and maximum of the salary scales of a police constable. Equivalent figures for the various allowances to which police officers are also entitled can be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. Police pensions are uprated annually in line with movements in the retail prices index and have thus kept pace with inflation over this period.

Power Station, Isle of Man

Mr. Carr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to the Manx Government concerning the proposed power station to be sited in the River Neb valley, Isle of Man.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No such representations have been made. The Isle of Man is not part of the United Kingdom and has primary responsibility for its own domestic affairs.

Fire Service

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time fire fighters were employed in England and Wales as at 1 January 1990 and 1 January 1991, indicating both the authorised and actual establishment figures.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is given in the table.

Total of full-time fire fighters (establishment and strength)

	1990	1991
England
Establishment	33,863	34,082
Strength	33,309	33,850
Wales
Establishment	1,753	1,730
Strength	1,693	1,709

Charities

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the total income of charities which is derived from direct mail and related fund-raising.

Mr. John Patten: Information on the income of charities from these sources is not collected centrally.

Sudbury Prison

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently held at Sudbury prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: On Monday 10 June 1991 there were 497 prisoners on the roll at Sudbury prison, 405 in the main prison and 92 in the Foston hall annexe.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were released from Sudbury prison during the last 12 months for which figures are available.

Mrs. Rumbold: According to the records held centrally, which are approximate, about 1,020 prisoners were discharged from Sudbury prison on licence or on completion of sentence in 1990.

Interpol

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information about convictions of British citizens is passed to Interpol for dissemination to member countries for information; and whether such information is removed from Interpol after any fixed period of time.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The national central bureau of Interpol does not keep details of all criminal convictions. It will pass on information about convictions only when a specific request is made by a member country. The bureau will pass on the details which are requested, but these will only be supplied once it has been confirmed through fingerprint checks that the subject of the request and the subject of the conviction are the same person.

Member countries have also been made aware of the effect of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act on convictions in the United Kingdom. The bureau will keep a copy of the information which has been sent; this will normally be destroyed after seven years. The member country recieving the information will have its own rules for how long such information is retained.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make an estimate of the number of offences committed, in the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available, by juveniles who have absconded from local authority care to which they have been committed following conviction or pending trial (a) in the Metropolitan police area and (b) in the remainder of England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not available in the detail required to enable such estimates to be made.

Northern Ireland Prisoners

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is made for Northern Ireland prisoners who are serving sentences in gaols in England and Wales to serve the remaining part of their sentences in gaols in Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Rumbold: Section 26 of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 makes provision for the transfer of a sentenced prisoner on request to another United Kingdom jurisdiction to serve the remainder of his or her sentence.

Radiation

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals the South Yorkshire fire and civil defence authority has to equip fire rescue unit appliances with geiger counters for use at incidents involving radiation.

Mr. John Patten: Each of the six emergency rescue tenders in the South Yorkshire fire brigade is equipped with a survey meter. The decontamination unit is equipped with a contamination meter. All pumping appliances and special appliances are equipped with one dosimeter per firefighter.

Prisoners (Suicides)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the in-service training of prison staff regarding prisoners who are regarded as potential suicide risks.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 19 December 1990 at columns 206-7. A working group has since been established by the prison service to oversee the production of a suicide awareness training film for prison staff, and to assess the needs of staff for further guidance and training in relation to the treatment and care of prisoners.

Prisoners

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has plans to improve the links between families in Northern Ireland and relatives who are held in prison in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs Rumbold: My noble Friend Lord Ferrers announced in another place on 4 June at columns 577-78 that the Government would carry out a comprehensive review of the arrangements governing the transfer of prisoners to Northern Ireland, either permanently or temporarily, to maintain family ties.

Iraqi Armed Forces

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since 1979 members of the Iraqi armed forces have been granted entry into the United Kingdom under paragraph 1(1) of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not available. Statistics collected on passenger admissions do not separately identify members of the armed forces who enter the United Kingdom.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the results of the management review of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board will be available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: With the concurrence of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, who is responsible with me for the criminal injuries compensation scheme in Great Britain. I have today placed in the Library the report of the wide-ranging management review of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board which we commissioned last year.

The review was carried out by a team of management services specialists from the Home Office and Treasury, co-ordinated by a private sector consultant. As well as examining in depth the board's operations, the team took account of practice elsewhere in the civil service, and outside.

In recent times the board has had difficulty in coping with rising business. But with the changes to the scheme and the 60 new staff we provided last year, it is now making great strides. It dealt with 53,000 claims in 1990-91, against 39,000 in 1989-90, and it expects to clear around 60,000 in 1991-92. Last year, for the first time in 10 years, it dealt with more claims than it received, reducing its backlog, and it has been able to establish that the true level of backlog is much lower than it had reckoned.

Despite this encouraging picture the board needs to gear itself to do still better, cutting delays—which are often still unacceptably long—and further reducing its arrears, while coping with steadily increasing workload.

I therefore welcome the recommendations of the management review, which hold out the prospect of a faster service to applicants, and a much reduced backlog, with no increase in staff. This will be achieved by simplifying procedures, cutting out duplication, and better management. Board members will need to set better guidelines for decisions, improving consistency all round, and enabling staff to deal with the majority of cases, which do not require the special skills of a QC or similarly eminent lawyer. I look to the board and its senior managers to respond positively and quickly to all of these recommendations.

The report also makes some more radical suggestions.

Arrangements under the scheme have not changed much since the board was created in 1964, when it was far smaller and dealt with far fewer claims. The review team does not believe that a board of more than 40 members—drawn from the single discipline of law, and most of whom have other claims upon their time—can reasonably be expected to carry responsibility for managing the organisation effectively on its present scale.

The review recommends that I and the Secretary of State for Scotland should establish a small executive board, which should include members with business experience, and perhaps representatives of victims' interests. We think that this is a useful suggestion, on which we should like to have views from the board itself and from others with an interest in its work.

The review also questions whether the scheme compensates the right people and in the right way. In particular, it discusses concentrating the scheme on injuries attracting higher or lower awards, by varying or imposing lower or upper limits on what awards are payable; excluding more strictly those who by alcohol or drug misuse contribute to their own misfortunes; transferring responsibility for criminal injuries at work to employers; and simplifying the basis of assessment to allow decisions to be taken more consistently and quickly. Finally, it suggests that we should explore whether the insurance industry might administer the scheme on an agency basis, or whether criminal injuries compensation might be amalgamated with other private and public sector compensation schemes to work more effectively and economically. These issues go well beyond the scope of the management review but the Government recognise that there are serious questions which should be open to public discussion.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Small Businesses

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many businesses currently register an annual taxable profit of £35,000 or less; and how many of these businesses have been operating for (a) one year or less, (b) between one and two years, (c) between two and three years and (d) for three or more years.

Mr. Maude: It is estimated that about 250,000 incorporated businesses had taxable profits of £35,000 or less in accounting periods ending in the year to 31 March 1989. This is the latest period for which reasonably complete information is available.

The approximate lengths of time for which these businesses had been operating are shown in the table.

	Number
One year or less	20,000
Between one and two years	20,000
Between two and three years	20,000
Three or more years	190,000

Information on unincorporated businesses could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Building Societies

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, excluding corporation tax, how much in total will have been lawfully received in tax through and from building societies in each financial year from 1984-85 on the basis of clause 50 (a) being enacted and (b) not being enacted.

Mr. Maude: Net receipts of income tax from building societies, excluding those subsequently repaid as the result of decisions by the courts, are shown in the second column of the table. The third column shows the corresponding receipts after deducting the estimated amount of income tax due for repayment if clause 50 were not enacted. Such repayment would increase societies' liability to corporation tax.

Defence Companies (Surpluses)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation to implement a recoverable levy on surpluses generated by defence-based and military production companies.

Mr. Maude: No. Increased use of competition, taut contracting and suitable contractual mechanisms are already designed to ensure maximum value for money in defence procurement.

EC Meetings

Mr. Day: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council, the meeting of the intergovernmental conference on economic and monetary union and the inter-institutional meeting with the European Parliament.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Economic and Finance Council of the European Community met in Luxembourg on 10 June. I represented the United Kingdom. I also attended a meeting of the intergovernmental conference on economic and monetary union. The Minister of State attended the inter-institutional meeting with the European Parliament in Strasbourg on 11 June.

Following the meeting on 3 June, the Council again discussed the presidency's proposals for the future of VAT and excise duties in the single market. No agreements were reached and discussions will continue. I reiterated that the United Kingdom remains unconvinced that there is a need for a centrally imposed minimum VAT rate in the single market. But I again made it clear that the United Kingdom has no intention of changing our VAT rate.

On excise duties, member states remain very wide apart. I argued that the minimum duty rates on alcohol and tobacco in the presidency proposals were too low. I reiterated that there would need to be much higher minimum rates or measures such as limits on the amounts of these goods that can be brought into any member state tax paid, if agreement were to be reached.

The Community's contribution towards loans by the G24 to Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania was also discussed. An informal agreement was reached that the first tranche of 100 mecu of an EC guaranteed loan to Hungary could now be released, since a matching sum had been committed by members of the G24 outside the EC, but it was agreed that the release of a first tranche of 150 mecu to Bulgaria should await a similar matching contribution. Discussion of a loan to Romania was deferred until the meeting of ECOFIN in July.

At the ministerial meeting of the intergovernmental conference on EMU, the presidency invited member states' views on key issues, which would inform preparations for the meeting of the European Council later in the month. I noted that a significant number of important issues required further debate in the IGC and suggested that the presidency might want to refer to these, while also registering the consensus achieved on issues such as the importance of convergence, in its report to the European Council.

Our negotiating position in the IGC remains unchanged. The United Kingdom cannot accept changes to the treaty of Rome that would bind us to move to a single currency or a single monetary policy without a separate decision by the United Kingdom Government and Parliament.

The inter-institutional meeting with the European Parliament enabled Members of the European Parliament to put their views on the EMU IGC to Finance Ministers. The meeting was purely consultative in nature.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had from the United States federal criminal prosecution authorities for assistance with documentation on the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

Mr. Maples: None.

TRANSPORT

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by year for the last 10 years, and for each port in the United Kingdom, the number of tonnes of nuclear waste that was imported.

Mr. McLoughlin: Nuclear waste is not imported into this country.

Primary Aggregates

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the amount of primary aggregates used in (a) construction and (b) maintenance of the railway network over the past 10 years, in (i) tonnes and (ii) as a proportion of total national aggregates' consumption.

Mr. Freeman: The figures for purchases of ballast by British Rail are as follows:

	Tonnes (millions)
1986-87	2·9
1987-88	2·9
1988-89	2·7
1989-90	2·4
1990-91	2·2

The other information is not available.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the amount of primary aggregates used in (a) construction and (b) maintenance of motorways and trunk roads over the past 10 years, in (i) tonnes and (ii) as a proportion of total national aggregates consumption.

Mr. Chope: Detailed information across the whole range of road construction is not kept by the Department. Estimates are, of necessity, coarse. Industry estimates show some 32 per cent. of United Kingdom aggregates production is used in road construction and maintenance. This figure has remained stable over the past 10 years. The Department estimates that in 1980 around 10 per cent. of aggregates consumption—21 million tonnes—was used in the construction and maintenance of motorways and trunk roads. This compares with estimates of 12 per cent. of aggregates consumption—36 million tonnes—in 1989.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the amount of primary aggregates used in (a) construction and (b) maintenance of local roads over the past 10 years, in (i) tonnes and (ii) as a proportion of total national aggregates' consumption.

Mr. Chope: Detailed information across the whole range of road construction is not kept by the Department. Estimates are, of necessity, coarse. Industry estimates show some 32 per cent. of United Kingdom aggregates production is used in road construction and maintenance. This figure has remained stable over the past 10 years. The Department estimates that in 1980, 22 per cent. of aggregates consumption—43 million tonnes—was used in the construction and maintenance of local roads. This compares with estimates of 20 per cent.—60 million tonnes —in 1989.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated requirement for primary aggregates arising from the Government's road building programme, set out in the May 1988 White Paper "Roads to Prosperity."

Mr. Chope: The requirement for primary aggregates is estimated at 120,000 tonnes per kilometre. The Government's road building programme, set out in the White Paper "Roads for Prosperity" established a target of 4,247 kilometres—2,655 miles. The overall requirement is therefore in the region of 510 million tonnes.

Railway Crossings

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will give urgent consideration to the installation of barriers at the open railway crossing in Tirydail, Ammanford and at other open crossings on the Heart of Wales railway line;

(2) if he will bring forward the proposed installation of barriers at the open crossing in Cilyrychen, Llandybie.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Stott criteria for the conversion of automatic open crossings to half-barriered crossings take into account the daily use by both road and rail traffic. In the case of Tirydail crossing, traffic is not sufficiently heavy to warrant upgrading.

The only crossing on the central Wales line which met the upgrading criteria is at Cilyrychen. Conversion is scheduled for early next year. It is for British Rail to determine the conversion programme in the light of its resources available to carry out the work.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many open railway crossings there are, and how many have barriers, on the Heart of Wales line from Swansea to Shrewsbury; and if he will identify their locations.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is as follows:

Location	Type of barrier
Pantyffynon	Hand operated gates
Tirydail	AOCL
Brynmarlais	AOCL
Llandebie	AOCL
Cilyrychen	AOCL
Ffairfach	AOCL

AOCL—Automatic open crossing locally monitored.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those open crossings in Wales that have already been fitted with half-barriers as recommended by the Stott report and those earmarked for conversion in 1991 and 1992.

Mr. McLoughlin: The following automatic open crossings in Wales have been converted to half-barrier crossings under the Stott programme:—

Harlech Morfa
Llanbadarn Fawr
Maes (Criccieth)
Ynyslas

Those at Tygwyn, Cil-y-rychen and Llanboidy are due for conversion in 1991, 1992 and 1992 respectively.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many open railway crossings in Britain are to be fitted with barriers in accordance with the Stott recommendation for each year from 1988 to 1992 and thereafter.

Mr. McLoughlin: Eighty-three automatic open crossings were identified for conversion to half-barrier crossings by the Stott criteria.

Forty-six have been converted so far; the work was carried out as follows:

	Number
1988	13
1989	21
1990	10
1991	2

Sixteen of the remaining 37 conversions are scheduled for this year and 21 in 1992.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Textiles

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reaction he has made to the proposals from the Greek, Spanish and Portuguese Governments for use of European Community funds to assist their textile and clothing industries; and what assessment he has made of the likely impact on activity and employment in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Leigh: I have not been informed of any such proposals. I am having inquiries made and will write to my hon. Friend.

WALES

Trunk Roads

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total expenditure by his Department on major improvement schemes on (a) the A487 trunk road, (b) the A483 trunk road and (c) the A470 trunk road in each year since 1979.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Total costs including design and land acquisition for major improvement schemes costing over £3 million completed, in progress and in preparation, for each year since 1979 are given in the table.

Treatment of Pain

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial resources have been allocated to the Welsh Office budget this year for the relief and treatment of pain.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: It is for individual health authorities to determine from within their annual overall resource allocations, and in the light of local circumstances and priorities, the level of funding which is available for the relief and treatment of pain.

Community Charge

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the amount of community charge payable by each eligible adult in a household of one, two, three, four or five adults where one, two or no adults have been exempted due to severe mental handicap in 1991-92 after the community charge reduction scheme has been applied, for each level of assumed rates bill in £50 bands from £150 to £500, in £100 bands from £500 to £1,500, £1,750 and £2,000, where in each case the community charge is set at each £10 increment between £140 and £600.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The community charge payable, on average, within each Welsh charging authority, net of £140 reduction and the community charge reduction scheme, by each eligible adult for 1991-92 is given in the table. The charge shown is the same irrespective of the number of adults in a household. Severely mentally impaired adults do not pay the community charge.

The Welsh community charge reduction scheme is based on the difference between the notional average domestic rates per adult in 1989-90 and the average community charge paid in 1990-91 for each area. The reduction is this difference less £37 and is payable to every eligible adult in each qualifying community.

Further Education

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (i) what was the total cost of training further education governors in Wales;

(2) if he will indicate the total cost of implementing the Government's reforms to the structure of governing bodies of further education colleges in Wales as a result of the Education Reform Act 1988.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not available.

Drinking Water

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects all water supplies in Wales to meet the drinking water standards set by the EC drinking water quality directive; and what is the number of people currently supplied from non-complying sources.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Public water supplies already comply with the great majority of the standards in the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 (SI 1989 No. 1147) which implement EC standards or set more stringent standards. Where relaxations from the standards have been authorised under regulation 4 or undertakings accepted under section 20(5)(b) of the Water Act 1989, most should comply with the standards by 1995. Undertakings have been accepted which relate to all the zones supplied by the companies my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has appointed. The existence of a relaxation or undertaking does not mean, necessarily, that the water supplied does not meet the standards set in the water quality regulations. Copies of all the relaxations and undertakings have been placed in the Library of the House.

Universities and Colleges Funding Council

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce details of the funding and staffing arrangements for the Universities and Colleges Funding Council for Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I will announce detailed proposals for the new higher education funding council at the time legislation is introduced in Parliament.

Casualty Units, Gower

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new attendances there were in 1990-91 between 10 pm and 8 am at Singleton, Morriston and Neath casualty units; and how many of these at each were residents of West Swansea and Gower.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information is not centrally available in the form requested. However, data collected to inform the Welsh Office review of Singleton minor casualty unit (MCU) indicated that during the period 1 June 1988 to 31 May 1989, new minor casualty attendances at Singleton totalled 1,318 between 10 pm and 8 am, an average of four per night.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been each year's funding by his Department to enable a night service to be offered at Singleton casualty unit.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Funding in respect of the minor casualty unit at Singleton hospital was agreed as part of the cost of reorganisation of services in West Glamorgan consequent upon the opening of Morriston hospital. However, the distribution of funding within its overall allocation is a matter for West Glamorgan health authority.

Prince of Wales Hospital, Rhydlafar

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his allocation separately to each health authority in Wales of (a) knee and (b) hip replacement operations to be carried out from Welsh Office central funds at the treatment centre at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic hospital, Rhydlafar, near Cardiff.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Allocations are based on established referral patterns and currently these are:

	Hips	Knees	Others
West Glamorgan	37	5	3
Gwent	25	16	7
Mid Glamorgan	19	6	21
Powys	14	1	1
East Dyfed	5	1	0
South Glamorgan	32	10	8
Pembrokeshire	26	11	0
Total	160	50	40

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from patients, members of the public, Clwyd health authority or the relevant community health councils concerning the recent return of a patient requiring an artificial knee joint operation to Clwyd without treatment from the treatment centre at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic hospital, Rhydlafar.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: We have not received any representations.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from Clwyd health authority, community health councils in Clwyd, or otherwise, concerning the allocation of knee replacement operations to be carried out with Welsh Office central funds at the treatment centre at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic hospital, Rhydlafar, near Cardiff.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: We have not received any representations on this matter.

Opted-out Schools

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether opting-out schools in Wales will be allowed to apply for a change of the nature of the school in less than five years.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend is still considering whether it will be in the best interests of grant-maintained schools in Wales to alter his policy that they should not normally be able to change their character within five years of incorporation. That policy gives him the option of approving proposals for change when there are sufficiently strong reasons.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his most up-to-date estimate of the number of jobs created by the activities of the Cardiff Bay development corporation.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 25 February 1991.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of Friday 7 June, what was the reason for the delay in placing copies of the Welsh Office report in the Vote Office and the Library until the day after publication and two days after they had been made available to the media; and if he will make it his policy in future to make copies of publications available to the media, the House and to the individual hon. and right hon. Members at the same time.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Our normal practice is to place copies of inspectorate reports in the Library of the House, further copies being available on demand from the Welsh Office. The delay in placing copies of the recent three reports in the Library of the House was due to administrative oversight for which I apologise on behalf of the Department.

Community Homes

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors determined the publication date for reports on three community homes in Wales following investigations undertaken in 1989.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett [holding answer 7 June 1991]: The reports of inspections of secure units at Ty Mawr, Silverbrook and Llwyncelyn community homes were published as soon as possible following the completion of consultation on the drafts with the relevant local authorities.

Future reports will be issued within four months of the inspection. Any actions requiring urgent attention by the relevant authority will as now be brought to their notice immediately.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

World Poverty

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Presbytery of Glasgow since 14 May in respect of world poverty; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The Overseas Development Administration has received a letter on world poverty from the Presbytery of Glasgow. A reply has been sent.

Iraq

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held between representatives of the relief agencies responsible for the relief effort for refugees in Iraq and British military representatives.

Mrs. Chalker: The relief agencies in northern Iraq and Turkey have worked closely with the allied forces. They meet regularly with the military commanders of Operation Haven.

Bangladesh

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of plans for meeting long-term rehabilitation needs in Bangladesh following the annual meeting of the Bangladesh aid consortium on 29 and 30 May.

Mrs. Chalker: At the Bangladesh aid consortium meeting, the World bank announced that the total indications of financial support from bilateral and multilateral donors amounted to $2·3 billion. This level of resources is sufficient to meet Bangladesh's relief, rehabilitation and overall development needs for 1991-92.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to assist the Government of Sierra Leone in response to its appeal for aid; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 12 June, Official Report, column 562.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

The Gulf (Disappearances)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made concerning the disappearance of Roseanna della Casa, and the deaths of Nick della Casa and Charles Maxwell, in the Turkish-Iraqi border region (a) to the Turkish authorities, (b) to the Iraqi authorities and (c) to allied military authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has made and is making widespread representations to try and trace Mrs. Rosanna della Casa. Following representations made by Her Majesty's ambassador at Ankara, the Turkish authorities have extended full co-operation. The senior Iraqi diplomat in London and the Iraqi representatives to the ceasefire talks in Riyadh were asked to help. British embassies in the area made inquiries and sought the help of the Governments of neighbouring countries. We have maintained frequent contact with coalition military forces in northern Iraq. Urgent attempts to find Mrs. della Casa continue.

No representations have been made regarding the deaths of Mr. Nicholas della Casa and Mr. Charles Maxwell. The cause of their deaths has not yet been determined.

COREPER

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British civil servants have been appointed or seconded to work for the Committee of Permanent Representatives serving the European Council of Ministers; and what is Her Majesty's Government's assessment of the effectiveness of COREPER in the development of European Community policies.

Mr. Garel-Jones: COREPER is composed of representatives of the Twelve member states and meets to prepare decisions for the Council of Ministers, a job it has done effectively since the Community was founded. The Committee meets in two formats: COREPER ambassadors, comprising member states' permanent representatives to the EC, and COREPER deputies. The United Kingdom's permanent representative is Sir John Kerr. He heads the United Kingdom permanent representation which numbers 65 British civil servants.

Syria

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance was given during the period when diplomatic relations with Syria were broken about the steps which Syria was required to take to ensure a restoration of diplomatic relations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We consistently made it clear that we could not consider restoring diplomatic relations without firm evidence that Syria had given up support for international terrorism.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances were given by the Syrian Government before the restoration of diplomatic relations on 28 November 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made clear in the House on 28 November 1990 —at columns 867-88—the assurances we had received that enabled us to resume relations.

Gordievsky Family

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response has been received to representations for Maria and Anna Gordievsky, with their mother Leila Gordievsky, to be able to come to Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: This case has rightly attracted public concern in the United Kingdom, and has also received sympathetic attention in a number of articles in the Soviet press. We have made repeated oral and written representations to the Soviet Government, including at high levels, about the reunification of the Gordievsky family. The Soviet authorities have frequently indicated that they wish to resolve this matter, but have not given a positive and substantive response to our many representations. Mrs. Leila Gordievsky and her two small daughters, Mariya and Anna, are entirely innocent of any wrong-doing. We believe that there can be no justification for the Soviet authorities' refusal to them of permission to come to Britain to be reunited with Mr. Oleg Gordievsky, in accordance with their clearly expressed wish. The Soviet Government's denial to them of the right to travel stands in clear contravention of the detailed provisions relating to family reunification and freedom of travel in the documents of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe, to which the Soviet Union is a party. We will continue to press this human rights case strongly until the family are granted their right to travel.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to accede to a request from the Gibraltar Government to negotiate the entry of Gibraltar into the EC customs union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Gibraltar Government have not made such a request. If they did, we would consider it in the light of the prevailing circumstances, including our assessment of the benefits of such a step for Gibraltar.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the financial consequences for Gibraltar of its joining the EC customs union.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We keep this under review and are in close touch with the Gibraltar Government about the cost/benefits of Gibraltar joining the Community customs territory.

Germany (Nuclear Facilities)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any of the treaties endorsed by the European Council of Ministers in establishing a unified Germany provide for the application of Euratom safeguards to nuclear plants, facilities and materials located in the former German Democratic Republic.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The integration of the former German Democratic Republic into the European Community required neither a new treaty nor amendments to existing Community treaties. In principle the provisions of the treaties have applied in the territory of the former German Democratic Republic since unification. A package of measures was however agreed covering temporary and strictly defined derogations. No such derogations apply to united German's obligations under the Euratom treaty of 1957, chapter VII of which provides for the application of Euratom safeguards in all member states.

Libya

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Libyan Government are required to take to ensure the restoration of diplomatic relations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We cannot consider improved relations until we have proof that Libya has completely broken off its support for international terrorism, including the IRA. People are still being killed in Britain with Libyan-supplied weapons.

Mozambique

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on interference by Kenya in the internal affairs of Mozambique, and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We are aware of claims about Kenya's alleged interference in Mozambique, but we know of no evidence to support them.

HEALTH

NHS Trusts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has obtained a copy of the financial memorandum of Guy's hospital, referred to on 29 April, Official Report, column 22; and if he will make a statement on its implications for patient care and staffing levels.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. The paper was an internal working document of the Guy's and Lewisham Trust, prepared to assist it in developing its financial plans for 1991-92 and is now out of date.

Health Education Authority

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been spent by the Health Education Authority on the "Look After Your Heart" campaign in each of the last three years; and what is the planned level of expenditure for 1991-92.

Mr. Dorrell: "Look After Your Heart", England's coronary heart disease prevention programme, is jointly managed and funded by the Health Education Authority —HEA—and the Department of Health. Spending in the last three years, taking both basic allocations and special grants made during the year, has been as follows:

Year	Expenditure
1988-89	4,550,000
1989-90	4,000,000
1990-91	5,500,000

A basic allocation of £5,300,000 has been approved for 1991-92. There are also departmental and HEA programmes for the specific risk factors, such as smoking, which contribute to the work on prevention of coronary heart disease. Additional support is also provided through commerce and industry through the workplace project and the health education work of regional and district health authorities.

Child Abuse

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage increase of child abuse cases for the last available five years in the Carlisle constituency; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information collected centrally about child abuse relates to the children and young persons on child protection registers for each local authority with social services responsibilities. The data were first collected in 1988. The number of children on the child protection register in Cumbria on 31 March 1988 was 226; on 31 March 1990 the number was 453.

Physiotherapists

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the training of physiotherapists; and how much his Department spends annually on such training.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. Funding for physiotherapy training is a matter for individual health authorities to determine in the light of local needs and priorities.

Care Services

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretry of State for Health if he will meet a delegation from the Doncaster community health council, local councillors and hon. Members to discuss the future of Doncaster royal infirmary, Mexborough Montagu hospital and Conisbrough hospital and the development of a strategy for continuing care services for the elderly.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes.

Medical Confidentiality

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ensure that medical confidentiality is maintained for patients in the billing arrangements between health authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Personal health information is strictly confidential. It may be disclosed only on a need-to-know basis by authorised persons, and only to the extent authorised. It must be anonymised unless it is essential for the recipient to know the identity of the patient. Health authorities have been reminded of their responsibility for safeguarding confidentiality in the context of contracting for health services, and have been strongly advised to draw up procedures under the guidance of their directors of public health. In particular, references to diagnosis or operations in contract information must be coded. Any breach of confidentiality by NHS staff is regarded as a serious disciplinary offence which may result in immediate dismissal.

Mile End Hospital

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of how waiting lists are affected by the Royal London hospital trust's agreement with the Charterhouse clinical research unit concerning Mile End hospital;

(2) whether the Royal London hospital trust sought his prior approval for its agreement with Charterhouse clinical research unit concerning the Mile End hospital;

(3) if he will make a statement about the terms of the agreement between the Royal London hospital trust and the Charterhouse clinical research unit concerning Mile End hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No agreement has been reached between the Royal London hospital trust and Charterhouse clinical research unit.

Pregnancy

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money was given to (a) the British Pregnancy Advisory Service and (b) the Life care and housing trust for the last year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department gives no money to either organisation.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any proposals to issue guidelines on the use of the chorionic villus sampling test; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The use of chorion villus sampling is a matter of clinical judgment.

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated additional cost to a hospital in respect of the procedures required to be undertaken in recovering a kidney for transplant; whether any recompense is currently available to hospitals in respect of such additional costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on the cost of organ recovery procedures is not collected centrally. We are actively considering the possibility of identifying and reimbursing hospitals for costs incurred in organ donation.

Abortions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the cost to the national health service of an abortion at (a) under 12 weeks' gestation, (b) under 18 weeks' gestation, (c) under 24 weeks' gestation and (d) under 42 weeks' gestation in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the expenditure covered by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial year (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department spent approximately £147,000 on hospitality in 1989-90; £158,000 in 1990-91; for 1991-92 information is only available on spend until 30 April totalling £12,000.

NHS Beds

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what has been the number of beds available to (i) NHS patients and (ii) private patients in (a) Guy's hospital, (b) King's College hospital, (c) St. Thomas's hospital, (d) the Lewisham and North Southwark health authority, (e) the Camberwell health authority and (f) the West Lambeth health authority at the beginning of each financial year since 1979.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 2 May 1991]: The information that is available centrally is given in the tables. The number of NHS beds is not a reliable indicator of patient activity. Activity in the three district health authorities listed in the tables increased during the period as follows:

Number of in-patients and day cases treated 1979 to 1989-90

	1979	1989-90	Percentage increase
West Lambeth HA	37,549	42,692	14
Camberwell HA	37,478	46,262	23
Lewisham HA	59,960	61,518	3

The number of NHS beds authorised for use by private patients is not a measure of private patient activity. These beds are also available to health service patients and are not particular beds reserved for the exclusive use of private patients. Reliable information about the number of private patients treated is not available centrally.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teacher Strikes

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many days have been lost by teachers through strike action for each of the past 11 years; and what was the number of children affected.

Mr. Fallon: Information on days lost by teachers due to strike action and on the number of children affected by such action is not centrally recorded by the Department. However, figures for the United Kingdom provided by the Department of Employment show the following numbers of days lost due to strikes by all employees in nursery, primary, secondary and special schools, including both teachers and non-teaching staff:

	Days lost
[1]1980	127,880
[1]1981	45,364
[1]1982	97,241
1983	19,455
1984	248,414
1985	851,518
1986	315,064
1987	133,429
1988	27,658
1989	1,300
1990	30,370

[1] Figures for 1980-82 also include employees in further and higher education establishments.

Primary Classes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to bring in legislation to set a maximum class size for primary schools.

Mr. Fallon: No. The deployment of teachers and the internal organisation of schools are properly matters for local decision.

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the expenditure covered by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Eggar: Expenditure on hospitality met from Department of Education and Science running costs totalled £89,000 for 1989-90, £61,000 for 1990-91 and £4,000 for the first month of 1991-92.

REPLAN

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will reconsider his decision to discontinue the funding of the REPLAN educational development programme.

Mr. Eggar: No. The REPLAN programme will have largely fulfilled the purpose for which it was established when its current term is completed in October this year. My right hon. and learned Friend will however be making additional funding available to the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education and the further education unit for the production and dissemination of a manual of guidance on education and training for unemployed adults which will further promote the lessons and experience gained from the REPLAN programme over the last seven years. As I said in my reply to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) and my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on 23 January 1991, Official Report, columns 196-97, it is now for the adult education providers to continue to develop provision for the adult unemployed, drawing on the lessons learned under REPLAN, and in particular working with the training and enterprise councils who are responsible for delivering the major training programmes for the adult unemployed.

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his Department during the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Eggar: The titles of the video recordings purchased by the Department of Education and Science in the financial year 1990-91 are as follows:

Agreeing to agree
Autism: behind an invisible wall
Early stages: school play
First things first
Food without fear
Happy accident
Helen's story
Hindi Urdu Bol Chaal
An inside job
Meetings, bloody meetings
Motley crew
Passport to success: National Record of Vocational Achievement.
Through the maze: a guide to information sources in education
Time for training
Trouble with training
Working mathematically with infants.

During the financial year 1991-92 to date the following video recordings have been purchased:

Building the perfect team
Databases
Teleworking
30 ways to make time
Working together: English in the national curriculum in Key Stages 1 and 2.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what criteria are used for the determination of capital allocations for those schools which have held grant-maintained status for more than one year.

Mr. Eggar: The same criteria for determining capital allocations apply to the 29 schools that have been grant maintained for more than a year as those which have entered the sector more recently. All schools receive a formula allocation for small capital works based on their pupil numbers. In addition, all schools can bid for named capital projects. Priority in these allocations has been given to schools' most pressing needs. These include projects related to the health and safety of pupils, and to projects concerned with the introduction of the national curriculum, especially in science and technology.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the capital allocation for each grant-maintained school for (a) 1990-91, where appropriate and (b) 1991-92 and the purpose of each capital allocation.

Mr. Eggar: The table lists the allocations for named capital projects for grant-maintained schools to begin in the two years. I shall write to the hon. Member when decisions are taken about further allocations for 1991-92.

In addition to named project allocations, each grant-maintained school is eligible to claim an amount of capital grant calculated according to a formula which takes account of the number of pupils on roll. The grant is used for small capital works and the purchase of equipment. For 1990-91 the formula was £13,000 plus £6 per pupil on roll. For 1991-92 the formula is £19,000 plus £9 per pupil on roll.

Education and Training

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the discussions he has held with (a) local education authorities and (b) other organisations about the future of adult education following the publication of the White Paper "Education and Training for the 21st century".

Mr. Eggar: Although my right hon. and learned Friend regularly discusses the future of education with representatives of local education authorities and other organisations, no meetings specifically on the further education of adults have taken place since the publication of the White Paper "Education and Training for the 21st Century."

Teachers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his department's latest estimate of the number of qualified teachers who are not currently teaching.

Mr. Fallon [pursuant to his reply, 21 May 1991, c. 423]: In March 1988 there were estimated to be 385,000 qualified teachers aged under 60 who were not in regular teaching service. This total includes all those who had previously taught or been trained in England and Wales, except for those who were in full-time or part-time teaching service in the maintained or non-maintained sector in England and Wales, or had retired from teaching.

EMPLOYMENT

Training Schemes (North Staffordshire)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the expenditure on Government-financed and assisted training schemes in North Staffordshire for each of the last five years; and what it is projected to be in the current year.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available in the form requested.

The following figures for 1990-91 and 1991-92 are for the Staffordshire training and enterprise council—TEC—which became operational on 15 October 1990. Prior to that date the Training Agency area office administered the Staffordshire area.

The TEC boundaries are not coterminous with those of the area office. Staffordshire area office covered the whole of Staffordshire whereas the TEC boundaries exclude part of south Staffordshire.

Staffordshire AO/TEC: Actual Expenditure

Year	£ million
1990-91	30·14

Staffordshire TEC: Budget Allocation

Year	£ million
1991-92	31·59

Petrol Containers

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received following the Health and Safety Executive's directive that petrol may be sold only in one or two gallon containers at filling stations and the withdrawal of the use of five gallon approved containers which are used by boat owners and inshore fishermen; and what effects he expects this will have on safety at sea.

Mr. Forth: None. No HSE directive has been issued restricting the sale of petrol to one or two gallon containers or prohibiting the use of 5 gallon containers.

Storage of petrol in 5 gallon containers is subject to the discretionary powers of Petroleum Licensing Authorities under the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act 1928, the Petroleum-Spirit (Motor Vehicles &c) Regulations 1929 and the Petroleum-Spirit (Plastic Containers) Regulations 1982. Licensing authorities would take into account the suitability of the containers themselves and the individual circumstances of the storage place.

Citizen's Europe Advisory Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has had any recent meeting or communication with the Citizen's Europe advisory service in regard to employment mobility within the European Community.

Mr. Forth: No.

ENERGY

Nuclear Materials

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the European Energy Council last discussed the application of Euratom safeguards to nuclear materials and facilities within the European Community.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The application of Euratom safeguards has not been a Council agenda item in recent years. When such matters are discussed they are taken by the General Affairs Council.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the implementation in the United Kingdom of EC regulation No. 220/90 (Euratom) on nuclear materials inventories.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Regulation No. 220/90 constituted a minor amendment to Commission Regulation (Euratom) No. 3227/76. This was to cover possible circumstances where nuclear material is concentrated by processing to a level above that specified in article 2 of regulation No. 9—428/60.

Sensitive Buildings

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 384, if he will define sensitive buildings.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A sensitive building is one which contains or could give access to information or material which needs to be protected in accordance with defined Government requirements or prudent management practice.

Sellafield

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for energy whether people entering the BNFL dining room at Sellafield are required to wear (a) special clothing, (b) body monitors for radiation, (c) helmets or (d) shoe covers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that all personnel leaving controlled areas are required to monitor themselves in a manner appropriate to that area. I am told that there is no requirement in all cases to undergo a change of clothing, although when leaving an area in which contamination may arise it is necessary to remove overalls. It is not unusual for employees to wear their radiation dosimeters when outside controlled areas—indeed in some circumstances it is a requirement of the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985. It is thus to be expected that diners will be wearing a range of clothing/radiation dosimeters.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether building 215 at Sellafied is a sensitive building; whether it is in an active area; what controls are applied to people entering the building; whether people entering the building are required to wear (a) special clothing, (b) body monitors for radiation, (c) helmets or (d) shoe covers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that Sellafield management consider B215 to have a degree of sensitivity. Building B215 handles radioactive material and is within a much larger active area, known as the separation area. People entering the building are required to be dressed for standard entry to an active area—factory shoes and socks, a laboratory coat or overall and radiation monitors are needed.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will name the two people referred to in his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 384; and what evidence he has that the two people referred to were demonstrators.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that the persons to which my answer of 7 June, Official Report columns 383-84, referred gave their names and addresses as Anne Marie Black and Chris Drake of Blue Gate, Greenham Common Womens Peace Camp, Newbury.

Their address and the press release from CORE—Cumbrian's Opposed to a Radioactive Environment—suggest that they were demonstrators.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 384, whether the two people apprehended on Thursday, 23 May had entered (a) building 215 or (b) the vitrification plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that the intruders' claim that they entered B215 has been investigated and that there is no evidence that they gained entrance to this building or to the vitrification plant.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 384, whether British Nuclear Fuels plc kept his Department's officials fully informed of the official statements made to the press by BNFL following the apprehension of two people within the Sellafield perimeter fence on Thursday, 23 May.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that to be the case.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what warnings were given to the two people apprehended within the Sellafield perimeter fence on Thursday, 23 May about the circumstances in which they would be required to undergo a body scrub.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The two people were monitored for contamination in the presence of the police officers. No contamination was detected and no action was needed.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy further to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 384, if he will now review security at Sellafield.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Security at Sellafield is kept under constant review by British Nuclear Fuels plc, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and the Government.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the nature of the process undertaken at building 215 at Sellafield.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Building B215 is primarily a store containing the highly active waste arising from reprocessing, held awaiting vitrification in the adjacent plant. The function of the building is to maintain the concentration of the material, the temperature and the consistency in the desired range.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish the operational log for building 215 at Sellafield for Thursday, 23 May.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No, this is a matter for BNFL.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 384, which security fences were breached by the two people apprehended at Sellafield on Thursday 23 May; and whether they entered an active area.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In order to enter the active separation area, the intruders must have penetrated both the factory boundary fence and the separation area boundary.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether, pursuant to his answer of 10 June on multiple share applications, all stockbrokers involved in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry have now supplied Touche Ross with a full list of names corresponding to their nominee accounts.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Under the terms of the regional electricity companies' offers, stockbrokers were required to supply information on the underlying beneficiaries of applications made by those firms either on bulk manager application forms or on individual forms; failing this, the applications would have been rejected. Touche Ross has had access to this information in connection with its audit activities.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answers of 6 June, Official Report, column 267 and of 10 June, to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West on representations from stockbrokers involved in electricity privatisation, what proportion of the fees and commisssions owing to the five stockbrokers referred to have so far been paid.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The payments already made, in respect of the admissible claims of these and other eligible brokers, are the amounts which the calculation and audit of their claims has shown with sufficient certainty to be due to them. In many cases a balancing payment may become due and my Department expects to make such payments shortly. A small number of brokers have not received any payments pending the clarification of queries arising from their claims or the audit process.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answers of 6 June, Official Report, column 267 and of 10 June to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West on representations from stockbrokers involved in electricity privatisation, what arrangements he has made to meet the principals of the stockbroking firms concerned, together with Touche Ross.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Secretary of State has no plans to meet the principals of any of the stockbroking firms concerned. I expect Touche Ross, together with officials from my Department, to be able to resolve all outstanding issues.

Home Energy Efficiency

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has yet received any recommendations from the Energy Action Grants Agency with regard to the future operation of the home energy efficiency scheme in the Scottish area 14; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that the Energy Action Grants Agency has received a report from consultants on the future operation of the home energy efficiency scheme in Scottish area 14 and will be making recommendations to my Department shortly.

SCOTLAND

Homelessness

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were registered homeless in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Renfrew district during the past 12 months for which records are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available information relates to 1989-90. During that period, district councils in Strathclyde assessed as homeless 4,901 households who applied to them under the homelessness legislation. The corresponding figure for Renfrew was 359. Approximately 3,000 returns for 1989-90, mostly from Glasgow, are outstanding. It is not possible to say what percentage of the applicants to whom these related might have been assessed as homeless. The 1989-90 returns did not collect the number of persons in applicant households.

Housing Associations

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce in Scotland a special needs management allowance similar to that available in England and Wales.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes is currently reviewing funding arrangements for housing associations in Scotland and I shall consider its proposals with care in due course. Any changes in revenue funding arangements are unlikely to be announced before the spring of 1992. Hostel deficit grant will continue to be available for eligible schemes until 1 April 1992.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid out in hostel deficit grant to housing associations in Scotland in the last five years for which figures are available; and how many units of accommodation were covered by hostel deficit grant in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is given in the table.

	Hostel deficit grant £	Number of units
1986-87	18,870	214
1987-88	28,125	209
1988-89	101,708	298
1989-90	184,279	292
1990-91	611,241	742

Sexual Offences

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reason statistics relating to sexual offences in Scotland are not collected centrally in a way which separately identifies such offences against children; if he will make it his policy in future to collect statistics in this way; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: While statistics on crimes collected centrally have generally not been classified by the characteristics of the victim of the crime, the Scottish Criminal Statistics Committee is currently examining the feasibility of collecting information for certain offences, including sexual offences, on whether the victim was a child or an adult.

Fire Services

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many fire appliances were in operation in Scotland as at 1 January 1980 and each succeeding year;

(2) how many full-time fire fighters were employed in Scotland as at 1 January 1980 and each succeeding year, indicating both the authorised and actual establishment figures.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information as at 31 December of each year, is as follows:

Scottish fire authorities: Full-time firefighters and appliances

Year	Establishment	Actual strength	Fire appliances[1]
1979	4,033	4,271	561
1980	4,359	4,300	560

Renewable Energy Programmes

Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how far the administrative and consultative arrangements for the 1991 review of renewable energy programmes have progressed in relation to Scottish interests.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Energy on 3 June 1991, at columns 8-9.

Glenlochay Estate

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his assessment of the size and number of older estates in a similar position to Glenlochay, in relation to sites of special scientific interest and compensation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have asked the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland to advise me on this issue. I will then write to the hon. Member.

NHS (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made within the Scottish health service with competitive tendering; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Health boards have made commendable progress. By the end of March, 226 contracts had been awarded and these are expected to release savings of more than £80 million over the periods of the contracts. These awards include nearly all the domestic, catering and portering services being provided in health boards throughout Scotland. The savings realised are available to boards for re-investment in direct patient care.

Boards have also extended competitive tendering into other service areas. Laundry/linen, grounds and gardens, estate maintenance and transport are just some of the services where contracts are being awarded. Some boards have, following competitive tendering, awarded contracts for the care of the elderly and for renal dialysis services. In all cases quality of delivery of service is of paramount importance in preparing tender specifications.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) central and (b) local Government expenditure, (i) capital and (ii) revenue, devoted to creating facilities for residential care of the profoundly mentally handicapped in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not held centrally.

Fishing (Payments)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will identify the destination of all payments made by the Secretary of State under section 5 of the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No such payments have been made.

Green Belt

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many acres of green belt zoned land in Scotland have been dezoned and used for building in each year since 1985;

(2) how many houses have been built in Scotland each year since 1985 on land which was changed from green belt zone status to allow building.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each available year from 1978 the amount invested in improving the energy efficiency of his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) 1990-91 money terms.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 June 1991]: Information in respect of the Scottish Office, but excluding the associated Departments and the Scottish prison service, is available for the following years:

	cash terms £	1990-91 money terms £
1987-88	150,000	184,730
1988-89	62,000	71,060
1989-90	100,000	107,750
1990-91	148,000	148,000

Disability

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has given to the Scottish tourist board concerning special provisions for disabled people.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 June 1991]: The Scottish tourist board has long recognised the special needs of the disabled and has actively encouraged the provision of adequate facilities in Scotland. The board was one of the national tourist authorities which collaborated with the holiday care service to produce in 1989 the report "Tourism for All" and is, at the Government's request, implementing a Scottish implementation strategy, which is now in its second year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Tourism

14. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to meet the chairman of the Northern Ireland tourist board to discuss tourism in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: I meet the chairman of the Northern Ireland tourist board regularly to discuss tourism matters and will continue to do so as required.

Labour Statistics

15. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the latest unemployment figures for Northern Ireland; how many of those workers have been unemployed for a year or more; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: At 9 May, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 97,951 unemployed claimants in Northern Ireland. This represents a fall of 1,059 over the previous month. Approximately 49,900 (50·9 per cent.) claimants have been unemployed for over one year.

Inward Investment

16. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the number of inward investment projects in Northern Ireland over the last two years.

Mr. Needham: During the last two years the Industrial Development Board has secured 27 inward investment projects for Northern Ireland, with the prospect of over 3,000 new jobs.

Higher Education

18. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to implement the White Paper "Higher Education: A New Framework in Northern Ireland," and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: As one of the joint signatories of the White Paper, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State fully supports the plans for the future of higher education set out therein and believes them to represent the best way forward for the entire United Kingdom. In determining the arrangements needed to reflect the new structures in Northern Ireland, he will wish to ensure that the Province's institutions retain the close cross-channel links and high quality standards that have enabled them to play their full part as members of the United Kingdom higher education community. At the same time, he will be seeking a strong and continuing local input to the decision-making process and will be considering what type of links with the new higher education funding councils will best secure these objectives.

Terrorism

19. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he is taking against the financiers of terrorism.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have sought to include in the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Bill measures which should help to ensure that the financiers of terrorism will not profit from their illegal activities. I am pleased to say that the measures have received wide support in this House and in another place.

20. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have died as a result of terrorist incidents since Thursday 2 May; and how many of these deaths were caused by (a) republican terrorists, (b) loyalist terrorists and (c) the security forces.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave earlier today to the right hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Molyneaux).

The Provisional IRA has claimed responsibility for seven of the murders. To date no organisation has claimed responsibility for the murder of one policeman and one soldier. Three men, apparently members of the Provisional IRA, were killed in an incident at Coagh involving members of the security forces.

Electricity Privatisation

21. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are his reasons for deciding not to privatise Northern Ireland Electricity generation and distribution as a single entity.

Mr. Needham: I am anxious to inject as much competition as possible into the Northern Ireland electricity industry, as I believe competition will lead to benefits for consumers. It would be difficult to have fair competition for future generation if NIE also owned generating stations.

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he has made in the privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Littleborough and Saddleworth (Mr. Dickens).

Rathlin (Roads)

22. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the roads of Rathlin is hard surfaced.

Mr. Needham: Approximately 48 per cent. are hard surfaced with bitumen-bound stone.

Labour Statistics

23. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current level of unemployment in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: At 9 May 1991, the latest date for which information is available, there were 97,951 unemployed claimants in Northern Ireland, representing 13·5 per cent. of the work force.

Sport

24. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money was spent on sport per capita in the Province in the past year and in 1978-79 at current prices; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Comprehensive records about how much money is spent on sport in Northern Ireland are not held centrally.

Grants paid on sport in Northern Ireland by Government per capita, for 1990-91 and 1978-79 at current prices are respectively £1·30 and £1·32 on recurrent items and £0·65 and £8·85 on capital projects. The reduction in capital expenditure reflects the fact that the provision of major leisure facilities across the Province has progressively been completed during the 1980s.

Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what observations he has received from the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons concerning the use of strychnine as a poison for the control of foxes; and if he will take steps to prohibit such use.

Mr. Hanley: No observations have been received from the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons.

The Department of Agriculture is, however, currently reviewing the use of strychnine for fox control, with a view to a possible ban.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those sites licensed for the disposal of hazardous, toxic and special wastes, respectively; what has been the cost of disposal of such wastes in Northern Ireland since 1979; and whether there are any plans to change the arrangements for handling such wastes in the future.

Mr. Needham: Licenses for the disposing of controlled wastes are issued by the district councils. The wastes include industrial wastes, certain of which may comprise substances in concentrations considered to be hazardous or toxic (defined as "special wastes"). Licenses which provide for depositing these types of waste have been issued for sites at Culmore, Londonderry and Dargan road, Belfast by the Derry and Belfast city councils respectively.

Details of the cost of disposing of hazardous, toxic and special wastes since 1979 are available only from the producers of such wastes.

In 1990 the Government published "A Review of Waste Disposal in Northern Ireland" commissioned from the waste management consultants, Aspinwall & Co. Ltd. The review suggests various options for waste management. Comments on the review have been received from the 26 district councils and other interested bodies, and the Government are now formulating a waste strategy for Northern Ireland which will be the subject of further public consultation this year.

Peace Initiative

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of his current peace initiative.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw) and to the statement that I made on 26 March 1991 at column 765-66 which set out the purpose and objective of the current talks process.

Advance Factories

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what locations it is proposed to commence construction of advance factories in the next 12 months.

Mr. Needham: The Industrial Development Board has no plans to build any further advance factories in the next 12 months. The factory stock is considered adequate to meet demand in this period.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, further to his answer on 4 June, Official Report, column 196, how many of the 27 Roman Catholic members of the staff of the Fair Employment Commission were civil servants prior to their employment by the Commission.

Mr. Needham: I understand that of the 27 Catholic members of the staff of the Fair Employment Commission none was a civil servant immediately prior to employment by the commission, but five had been in civil service employment earlier in their careers.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next intends to meet the Taoiseach to discuss the Anglo Irish Agreement.

Mr. Brooke: I have no present plans for such a meeting. The current political talks will provide opportunities for discussion of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Population Statistics

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated population within each of the district council areas within the area of the Eastern health and social services board; and what was the population in each of these district council areas 10 years ago.

Mr. Hanley: The information, contained in the mid-year estimates of population, is:

District Council Area	1990[1]	1981
Ards	65,400	57,800
Belfast	295,100	315,300
Castlereagh	58,100	60,700
Down	57,700	53,600
Lisburn	98,700	84,900
North Down	72,600	66,700

[1] Figures for 1991 will not be available until mid-1992.

Sunday Trading

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has recently received about the law on Sunday trading.

Mr. Hanley: None, Sir.

Irish Sea

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his Department's response to the report on the Irish sea from the environment education and culture committee of the British-Irish Inter-Parliamentary body.

Mr. Needham: The Government are at present considering the report and will be making its response in due course.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 454, on flying over Caerwent, if he will outline the radius in nautical miles, and height restriction, within which military aircraft are required to take account of the potential hazard.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is not our practice to publish detailed information on flying restrictions in individual areas.

Helicopters

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the recent Royal Marine operations in northern Iraq in respect of the operational sufficiency of the number of Sea King helicopters available to the armed forces to fulfil simultaneously commitments in Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and elsewhere.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal Marines of 3 Commando Brigade are to be congratulated on their achievements in providing relief and assistance to the Kurdish population in northern Iraq. They have been admirably supported by Royal Navy Sea King helicopters which continue to play an important part in this successful operation. Previously, Royal Navy Sea King helicopters were also able to make a substantial contribution during hostilities in the Gulf and they were, in addition, used in support of the recent relief operation in Bangladesh. This exceptional effort was due in no small part to the dedication and professionalism of our armed forces.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any scientists from the Blacknest verification centre attended the eighth thematic conference on geologic remote sensing in Denver, Colorado, on 29 April to 2 May in connection with their work on verification of a nuclear test ban treaty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None attended.

Contracting Companies

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Department of Defense in the United States of America in relation to its policy on questioning contracting companies about senior executives' emoluments.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's latest discussions with Colin Wallace about compensation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the payment of £30,000 in September 1990, the Department has had no discussions with Mr. Wallace about compensation.

Territorial Army

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for the future strength of the Territorial Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We continue to attach the greatest importance to all our reserves and volunteer reserves. The Territorial Army will continue to have a key role to play. We shall be examining our requirements in this area, including the roles, size and organisation of TA units, in the light of the numbers we can expect to recruit and retain. Final decisions have yet to be taken.

Kuwait

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether members of Her Majesty's forces who have been contracted out to Royal Ordnance plc in respect of Kuwaiti minefield clearance operations have volunteered for the job; what will be the terms of compensation available in the event of injury or death; and if he will list the occasions on which members of Her Majesty's forces have been contracted out to a commercial company in circumstances where their safety and lives may be at risk.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The men of 21 Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squadron are under military tasking and as such they were not required to volunteer. The squadron's task includes explosive ordnance disposal (EOD) which has been restricted by the MOD to exclude mine clearance, except where it is necessary for the squadron to gain access to specific and agreed EOD task locations. In the event of injury or death, the service men concerned will receive benefits payable by the Department of Social Security and by the Ministry of Defence under the terms of the war pensions scheme and the armed forces pension scheme respectively. The nature of this deployment reflects the unique circumstances that existed in Kuwait following its liberation and the successful immediate post-hostilities work carried out by the Royal Engineers. I am not aware of any precise comparisons but, for example, RAF personnel seconded to British Aerospace served in Saudi Arabia throughout the Gulf war.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Disabled Staff

Mr. McMaster: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what percentage of the staff of the Palace of Westminster is registered as disabled; what is the target level; what measures are being taken to improve employment opportunities for disabled people within the Palace; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Beith [holding answer 10 June 1991]: Of the staff employed by the House of Commons Commission, 0·6 per cent. are registered disabled.

The Commission's policy on the employment of disabled persons remains as set out in the Commission's annual report 1981-82. The Commission has appointed a disabled persons officer who is responsible for promulgating the Commission's policy on the employment of disabled people and for advising management and staff on matters concerning disablement. He keeps up to date with civil service policy on disablement and from time to time arranges seminars for departmental management with organisations concerned with disabled people.

Although not statutorily bound by the provisions of the Disabled Persons Acts 1944 and 1958, the Commission has nevertheless undertaken to accept the same responsibilities as other employers. This includes compliance with the requirement to employ a 3 per cent. quota of staff who are registered disabled.

Management has endeavoured to achieve the quota by encouraging applications from disabled people through recruitment literature and contacts with organisations dedicated to finding employment for the disabled. The implementation of this policy has recently been reviewed with the object of making it more effective. Consequently management have agreed, on the advice of the disabled persons officer, to adopt certain further measures. These will have the effect of ensuring that all applicants for vacancies in the House of Commons service who are registered disabled will be shortlisted for interview provided it is clear that their disabilities do not prevent them from satisfactorily carrying out the duties of the post and they have the qualifications asked for, if any. Disabled applicants who have not the required academic qualifications may take a short answer test. Where there are two candidates of equal merit, one of whom is disabled, the policy will continue to be to select the latter. Further measures are being considered.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his Department during the financial year 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

Mr. MacGregor: No video recordings have been purchased by the Department in the years mentioned.

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the expenditure covered by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. MacGregor: The expenditure incurred by the Privy Council Office in respect of hospitality was as follows:

1989-90 £	1990-91 £	1991-92 to date £
3,726·50	4,450·22	273·05

Recycled Paper

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) of 6 June, Official Report, column 319, what percentage of publications printed by Her Majesty's Stationery Office on behalf of the House of Commons is not of archival significance; and what are the reasons for not producing such material on recycled paper.

Mr. MacGregor: It is not possible to give an objective estimate of the percentage of publications considered to be of archival significance. The Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee is giving further consideration to the use of recycled paper for the Vote bundle, which could include a trial run by HMSO during the summer recess, and I would be prepared to ask it to carry out similar exercises for material which is clearly not of archival significance.

PRIME MINISTER

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the expenditure covered by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

The Prime Minister: This information is not available in the form requested. The cost of official hospitality met by my office during 1989-90 was £27,427; it is estimated to be £20,904 and in 1991-92 to date, it is £6,485.

Statistics

Mr. Soames: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to improve the quality, substance and accuracy of economic and commercial statistics available to Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: A comprehensive statement on the current state of official economic statistics was submitted by the Central Statistical Office to the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee on Wednesday 24 October 1990 —HC 671, Session 1989-90.

The memorandum gave details of an important package of measures to improve the reliability of economic data which the Central Statistical Office is now implementing. I announced this package to the House as Chancellor of the Exchequer on 17 May 1990, Official Report, column 172. It is directed towards improving the quality of both the gross domestic product and the balance of payments estimates. In this context it has three major objectives:

(i) Reducing revisions to early estimates of both gross domestic product and the overseas current account by extending the range of quarterly sources;

(ii) Improving the accuracy and coherence of the measurement of gross domestic product through strengthening the weaker elements in the estimates;

(iii) Improving the accuracy and coherence of the financial accounts including the overseas or balance of payments accounts.

For details of the measures being undertaken, in order to achieve these aims, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan (Mr. Wray) by the Economic Secretary on 13 May, Official Report, columns 19-21. Further and more detailed information appeared in an article, titled "Improving Economic Statistics—The Chancellor's Initiative", in the February 1991 edition of "Economic Trends" which is available in the House of Commons Library.

The Government attach great importance to the need for reliable economic statistics and will consider further measures to maintain and improve the quality of economic data as the need arises.

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which his Department was responsible for each of the past five years, together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

The Prime Minister: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his Department during the financial year 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

The Prime Minister: No.

Ministerial Correspondence

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Prime Minister what action Departments have taken in response to the report of the efficiency scrutiny on ministerial correspondence; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The report of the efficiency scrutiny on ministerial correspondence was made available to Members of Parliament and others last December. The report, which provides recommendations of good practice, was accepted by the Government.

Departments have reacted very positively to the scrutiny report. Each Department has produced an action plan to implement those recommendations which they have accepted, and which are not already departmental practice. Each Department has nominated a Minister for correspondence issues.

Every Department accepted a majority of the scrutiny team's recommendations; overall 90 per cent. were accepted and none was generally rejected.

The report recognised that Members of Parliament always have the right to approach Ministers directly, but that a more efficient service could be achieved by decentralisation of correspondence on operational matters to agency chief executives and other discreet units or local offices. Departments have generally accepted these recommendations, and the most recent edition of the "List of Ministerial Responsibilities" has been extended to provide information on agency chief executives and other key addresses.

The report identified the use of targets and monitoring of performance as important factors in improving the management of correspondence and all Departments agree with this. All Departments accept the recommendation that their own targets on correspondence should be published, and there has been widespread acceptance of the recommendation to send a prompt and informative interim reply where a departmental target will not be achieved. Departments also gave a strong support to the recommendations for monitoring annual publication of performance.

Departments are pursuing other recommendations, designed to improve the handling of correspondence, taking into account their differing functions and organisation.

In line with the normal procedures for an efficiency scrutiny, each Department will produce by July next year an implementation report to record the achievements in carrying through their action plan.

Minister for Ex-Service Men

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Prime Minister if he will appoint a Minister with responsibility for ex-service men.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 12 June 1991]: No. It would simply add another tier of administration to the present system as one Department could clearly not have policy responsibility for all the matters of concern to ex-service men or their widows. Creating a new Department could lead only to unnecessary delay on inquiries since these would need to be referred to other Government Departments for consideration.

The Ministry of Defence is responsible for service pension matters, the Department of Health, through the NHS, for treatment of the disabilities of ex-service personnel and the Department of Social Security for war pension matters. The Department of Social Security administers the war pensioners' welfare service through a countryside network of offices. The service offers war disablement pensioners and war widows help and advice on personal problems and liaise on their behalf as necessary with statutory and voluntary bodies. War pensions committees also play an important part locally in matters relating to the welfare of war pensioners.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Benefit

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current rates of child benefit if uprated in line with inflation since 1985.

Mr. Jack: The rate would be £9·55 per week for each child.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response he has made to the chief adjudication officer's complaint, in his annual report for 1989-90, regarding the failure of presenting officers to attend social security appeal tribunal hearings.

Mr. Scott: The chief adjudication officer made no formal recommendation in his report about non-attendance by presenting officers at tribunal hearings and I have not made a response to him on this point.

The Benefits Agency makes every effort to ensure that a presenting officer attends every tribunal hearing. Non-attendance is not a widespread problem and existing liaison arrangements with the office of the president of social security appeal tribunals provide the opportunity to resolve any difficulties which may arise.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will arrange for information to be collected on the number of social security appeal tribunal hearings at which, and the reasons why, there is no presenting officer.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to collect such information.

Departmental Relocation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for the location of new jobs or relocation of existing jobs in his Department in Wales.

Mr. Scott: We have no current plans to locate new jobs or relocate existing jobs in Wales.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will consider raising cold weather payments made to senior citizens; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will introduce automatic cold weather payments for all senior citizens, irrespective of income; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: On 11 February I announced in the House that I would undertake a review of the operation of the cold weather payments scheme. I shall be making an announcement shortly.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will name the statutory instrument from which he derived his definition of full-time education as 12 hours or more of supervised study each week in the "Invalid Care Allowance Claim Pack," DS700 (1991).

Mr. Scott: Regulation 5 of the Social Security (Invalid Care Allowance) Regulations 1976, as amended, describes the circumstances in which people are to be regarded as receiving full-time education.

Local Offices

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to provide suitable benefit office facilities in the constituency of Darwen and Rossendale following the proposed closure of the Rossendale social security office.

Mr. Scott: We are presently conducting a service planning exercise to establish the needs of our customers throughout Rossendale. There are no plans either to close Rossendale social security office or to reduce the customer services currently being provided in the area.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pigs

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are being taken by his Department to ensure that blue-ear disease in pigs is kept out of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean [pursuant to his reply, 25 April 1991, c. 554]: The history of blue-eared pig disease. Blue-eared pig disease has been diagnosed in Germany, the Nertherlands, Belgium and Spain and it appears that a similar condition has occurred in North America in recent years. Experience on the mainland of Europe is that the disease lasts for four to eight weeks in affected herds. The symptoms are by no means consistent—only a few affected animals show blue ears, for example. The first signs may be high temperatures and pigs off their food. A mild influenza-like illness may be seen in all ages of pigs on the premises. Sometimes blue discolouration of extremities such as ears, teats, vulva and backs of legs occurs. A consistent feature of the disease is an increase in the level of abortions that would normally be expected and in still births in pregnant sows. Those piglets which survive show laboured breathing, diarrhoea and other symptoms and up to 40 per cent. or more may die within the first two weeks of life. Deaths among adult pigs are very low and infected sows normally recover.

Spread of disease has been associated mainly with the movement of breeding pigs but airborne spread may also occur. The Dutch central veterinary institute announced recently that it had isolated a virus that causes the disease.

In the Community, the disease first occurred in Germany in November 1990, although it was not reported until 16 February. Since 1 March the Community rules on trade in pigs (which require that all pigs traded between member states should be subject to veterinary inspection and health certification) have been supplemented by additional measures and trade safeguards in response to the disease. These include a prohibition on the export to other member states of any pigs from infected holdings and of pigs for breeding or fattening from municipalities where disease is present or has recently occurred. In practice the United Kingdom does not import pigs from any of the infected countries.

Britain's precautionary action. Last year, the British Government took powers to restrict the movement of animals if a new disease was suspected, under the Movement of Animals (Restriction) Order 1990 as amended. These powers enabled us to be quicker in our reactions to any disease threat than previously, and indeed quicker than other members of the European Community.

Suspicious symptoms were first reported to the veterinary investigation service on 16 May. On investigation the symptoms appeared significantly different from those found elsewhere in Europe, but nevertheless precautionary restrictions were imposed on the premises concerned on 20 May. To date, 12 premises have been placed under restriction for the same reason, all in the Humberside area apart from one in county Durham.

The restrictions that have been imposed since suspicious symptoms first appeared are more stringent than those required by Community rules for the control of blue-eared pig disease and more stringent than those imposed in the Community countries where the disease is established. All movements of pigs off premises where disease is suspected are subject to licence by a veterinary inspector. No such movements have so far been licensed except for movements direct to a slaughterhouse. If severe overcrowding were to occur on a suspect farm, growing pigs might have to be moved off. Such movements would be only to a non-breeding farm already situated in an infected area and not situated adjacent to a breeding unit, and the receiving farm would be placed under restriction as soon as the movement took place.

In addition, farms in the areas surrounding those where disease is suspected have been put under restriction too. In these areas licences have been issued allowing movement of pigs direct to a slaughterhouse. The movement of growing pigs to fattening units in Humberside has also been licensed subject to there being no breeding stock on the receiving premises, nor any breeding unit adjoining the receiving premises.

Blue-eared pig disease confirmed. Yesterday evening (12 June), a Dutch veterinary laboratory using the only known diagnostic test sent us results which showed that blue-eared pig disease had indeed spread to the United Kingdom. The very early action that we have taken under our existing range of measures has meant that we already have in place restrictions which are significantly tougher than those employed on the continent. Now that we have a positive identification of the disease, these measures will be made specific under the Blue-Eared Pig Disease Order 1991, which I have already signed, and which came into force at 12.01 pm today. The new order will confirm measures we have already taken which enable movement restrictions to be imposed or maintained on infected premises and areas. In addition, the order

- enables movement restrictions to be imposed on premises which have received animals from premises where infection exists;
- lays down requirements about the destruction of infected material;
- lays down requirements about the cleansing and disinfection of premises.

Finally, the disease will now be notifiable, which clearly it could not have been until it was properly diagnosed by yesterday's results. As no test for the disease is generally available, and as a wide range of symptoms can occur, the Ministry will be publishing guidance to farmers and veterinary surgeons on the signs giving rise to suspicions.

Limiting the spread. All the steps we have taken were designed to limit the disease to the maximum extent possible. We have been in close touch with our Community partners who also have the disease, and they have co-operated fully with us. Even so, none of us have sufficient information to know fully how the disease is spread. We cannot guarantee therefore that any particular measure will be successful in preventing its communication. Nonetheless, it must be sensible to take those steps which are most likely to make a difference, and it would be irresponsible not to try to protect those areas of the country where it has not occurred, if at all possible. It seems clear that one factor which does lead to the spread of disease is the movement of breeding pigs. Following discussion with the pig industry I therefore intend to use the powers under the new order to define a large restricted zone. This will not be easy for the industry in the parts of the country which will be covered, but in discussions today their representatives have made it clear that they support the Government's determination to prevent the spread of disease. This zone will embrace all the infected farms in Humberside, and a wide area around them bounded by a line running roughly from Cleethorpes through Lincoln, Doncaster, York and Scarborough. The movement of pigs out of this zone will be permitted only when going direct for slaughter. Pigs from farms where infection is not suspected or confirmed may, however, move freely within the zone.

As I have already indicated, it is by no means certain that this measure will succeed in curtailing the disease. Our policy will therefore need to be kept under close review, in discussion with the industry.

Blue-eared pig disease has important economic effects upon individual producers, but it is exclusively an animal health problem and there are no implications for human health.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether pigs from areas of the United Kingdom which are not under movement restrictions are able to be exported to other EC and non-EC countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Provided that pigs meet the conditions of Directive 64/432 and the conditions set out in the appropriate Community decision 91/237 they can be exported to other member states. Commission decision 91/237 lays down conditions for breeding and production pigs from farms and municipalities under restriction. Exports to non-EC countries would need to meet the conditions laid down by those countries.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the causes of blue-ear disease; and whether he has eliminated the possibilities of (a) a virus, (b) a bacteria and (c) chemical contamination;

(2) whether he will make blue-ear disease notifiable;

(3) what evidence he has on the means of transmission of blue-ear disease; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what inspections are carried out by his Ministry on the health of pigs which are imported and exported to and from the United Kingdom to ensure that they are free of blue-ear disease and other diseases; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what information he has concerning the infectious nature of blue-ear disease; and if he will make a statement;

(6) on what date he first knew about the problems of blue-ear disease in pigs in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) in other EC countries; and if he will make a statement;

(7) what controls and regulations exist on the import and export of pigs between EC member states where blue-ear disease has been found; and if he will make a statement;

(8) how many man hours have been devoted by his Ministry to the investigation of the cause of blue-ear disease; and if he will make a statement;

(9) if he will list (a) the numbers of farmers and (b) the numbers of pigs under movement restrictions as a result of blue-ear disease to date on a county by county basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson) earlier today.

Farm Budget

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the overall farm budget agreed for 1991-92 as a result of the new farm price package; and what was the actual common agricultural policy expenditure in this area last year.

Mr. Curry: Taking account of this year's price settlement, the European Commission is forecasting that Community expenditure on agricultural support in 1991 will exceed the budget of £22·0 billion but will fall within the agricultural guideline of £22·7 billion. A supplementary budget will be put forward in due course. For 1992 the budget has yet to be agreed but expenditure cannot exceed the agricultural guideline of £24·4 billion. The forecast outturn for Community agricultural guarantee expenditure in 1990 is £17·9 billion.

Simazine

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he envisages any restrictions being placed on the use of the herbicide Simazine; and whether its continued use has been considered by the appropriate European Community authorities.

Mr. Maclean: Simazine is not being considered by the European Community authorities but is under review in the United Kingdom. Any recommendations concerning the approval status on conditions of use of simazine made by the advisory committee on pesticides as a result of the review will be considered by the six Ministers responsible for pesticides.

Badgers

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to implement the recommendation of the Dunnet review and re-examine the Ministry's policy on badgers and bovine tuberculosis.

Mr. Maclean: We are already implementing the recommendations of the present interim badger control strategy which is firmly based on the recommendations of a committee chaired by Professor Dunnet. One of these was that the strategy should be reviewed if certain criteria were met three and five years after the strategy was implemented. In the event, the criteria were not met at the three-year point, and five years have not yet elapsed. Nevertheless in line with Professor Dunnet's recommendations, a test to detect tuberculosis in live badgers is undergoing field trials. The way in which such a test might be used is being considered with the assistance of the consultative panel on badgers and tuberculosis.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Ministry's badger eradication programme.

Mr. Maclean: There is no badger eradication programme, and no such policy is justified. Small numbers of badgers are removed when implicated in a tuberculosis breakdown in cattle, as recommended by Professor Dunnet's independent review.

Animal Diseases

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many man hours were devoted to (a) BSE, (b) salmonella and (c) blue-ear disease at the Lincoln veterinary investigation centre on (i) 31 December and (ii) 31 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: In the period 31 December 1990 to 31 May 1991, 398 man hours were devoted to BSE, 1,239 man-hours were devoted to salmonella and an estimated 100 man-hours were devoted to suspect blue-ear disease of pigs at the Lincoln veterinary investigation centre.

Megrim

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated catch of megrim in British coastal waters in each of the past five years.

Mr. Gummer: The information is not available in the form requested. Total landings of megrim into the United Kingdom by British vessels in each of the last five years were as follows:

1986	2,284 tonnes landed weight
1987	3,660 tonnes landed weight
1988	4,141 tonnes landed weight
1989	3,810 tonnes landed weight
1990	3,720 tonnes landed weight

Whaling Conference

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the Governments which were present and entitled to vote at the recent international whaling conference at Reykjavik.

Mr. Curry: The countries are Australia, Brazil, Chile, the People's Republic of China, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Iceland, India, Ireland, Japan, the Republic of Korea, Mexico, Monaco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Oman, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, the Seychelles, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States of America. One country left the meeting early before certain votes had been taken or considered.

Quarantine

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the disease quarantine premises he has in the United Kingdom, giving the location in each case, and which animals they are approved for handling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Quarantine is required for three diseases. For foot and mouth there is one quarantine premise at Poole. For rabies there are a number of approved premises throughout the country. For Newcastle disease there are a number of privately owned approved premises. Lists of the premises currently approved for rabies and Newcastle disease are available from the Ministry and I will send a copy to the hon. Member.

TRANSPORT

Tyres

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations govern the manufacture of re-mould tyres used on commercial vehicles.

Mr. Chope: The Motor Vehicle Tyres (Safety) Regulations 1984 require all re-mould tyres to comply with British Standard BS 144b: 1977.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations govern the use of re-mould tyres fitted to commercial vehicles.

Mr. Chope: There are no regulations which refer specifically to the use of re-mould tyres, but all tyres are required by the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 to be suitable for the use to which a vehicle is put.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving commercial vehicles were attributable to defective re-mould tyres during the years 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Chope: Statistics are not available for 1989 or 1990 on accidents attributable to failure of tyres on commercial vehicles. However, the Department is co-ordinating research into the incidence and causes of tyre failures among heavy goods vehicles on motorways.

Supplementary Grants

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much transport supplementary grant was made available to West Sussex county council for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Chope: Before 1985-86 transport supplementary grant was given for capital and current expenditure. Since then current expenditure has been subsumed in revenue support grant, so figures before 1985-86 are not comparable with later figures. Transport supplementary grant for the last 10 years has been:

Settlement year	£ million
1982-83	3·908
1983-84	3·475
1984-85	3·719
1985-86	3·241
1986-87	3·622
1987-88	3·089
1988-89	2·730
1989-90	1·526
1990-91	4·532
1991-92	4·126

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the Atkins report on the channel tunnel rail link and when he does so, if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail sent us a copy of the report yesterday. We shall study it alongside all the other material it has sent us. The report and other key documents will be published in due course when we are ready to announce our conclusion.

DVLA Information Technology Directorate

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the future of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's information technology directorate.

Mr. Chope: I have recently reviewed the status of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's directorate of information technology, known as DVOIT (Drivers, Vehicles and Operators Information Technology). This is a separate unit within the agency, comprising some 500 staff, which provides IT support to DVLA and to a number of other customers within the Department of Transport.

As a first step DVOIT will be established as a separate executive agency from next April. This will allow it to develop a more commercial style of operation and in particular to establish more formal contractual relationships with its customers. I hope this will pave the way for eventual privatisation in a few years' time.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Bromley and Kingston Education Authorities

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to introduce amending legislation in the light of the recent High Court decision concerning Bromley and Kingston education authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend is aware of the recent court cases involving the school admissions policies of Bromley and Kingston education authorities. He will be looking at the pattern of school admissions this September before deciding whether legislation to amend the law on admissions would be appropriate.

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which his Department was responsible for each of the past five years together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

Mr. Eggar: Until June 1990 information on public appointments was not held centrally within the Department, but is available in "Public Bodies" which is published annually and gives details of all such appointments together with salary details. Current appointments together with salary details and the date when each appointment is due for renewal are as follows:

Schools (Budgetary Delegation)

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local education authorities which, in the most recent year for which information is available (a) had introduced full budgetary delegation to (i) all primary schools and (ii) all secondary schools and (b) had introduced school funding (i) fully in accordance with their published formula, (ii) partly in accordance with the formula and partly in accordance with historical principles and (iii) only in accordance with historical principles.

Mr. Fallon: The following table lists those local education authorities whose primary or secondary schools have full delegated management as of 1 April 1991.

With regard to formula funding, the vast majority of LEAs have taken advantage of the transitional arrangements which allow for the change from historic to pure formula funding to take place gradually in the period up to 1 April 1994.

The detailed information on each LEA is not immediately available. I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list local education authorities from which a secondary school has (a) voted for and (b) achieved grant-maintained status showing what proportion of its secondary provision such schools represent.

Mr. Eggar: The table gives the number and proportion (in percentage terms) of secondary schools within a local education authority which have: (a) voted in favour of seeking grant-maintained status; (b) voted in favour of seeking grant-maintained status and been approved for GM status.

Notes:

(1) Column (a) lists the total number of schools in an authority which have voted in favour of seeking grant-maintained (GM) status. Some of these schools have yet to publish proposals, others have published proposals which Ministers will be considering soon or which they have already either approved or rejected.

(2) Column (b) lists the number of schools whose proposals have been approved. This includes schools which are already operating as GM schools and those which were approved for incorporation in September.

School Premises

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in England do not meet the requirements laid down in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981.

Mr. Fallon: This information is not held centrally. It is the duty of LEAs and others directly responsible for schools to ensure that school premises conform to the standards prescribed in the regulations.

Higher Education (Salaries)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total number of teaching staff and the total salary bill, exclusive of the employers' insurance and superannuation contributions (a) for English universities, and (b) for polytechnics and colleges under the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council for 1984-85 and 1989-90.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information on the numbers of universities' teaching staff and salaries inclusive of employers' insurance and superannuation contributions is contained in the annual volume "University Statistics Volume Three—Finance" table 9 published by the universities' statistical record. The latest edition is for financial year 1988-89. Copies of this publication are in the Library.

Data on polytechnics and colleges are not available in the requested form.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Bangladesh

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what have been the annual grants made to Bangladesh by the Bangladesh Aid Consortium in each year since 1972; what has been the United Kingdom's contribution within the same period; and what have been the sums devoted by the Bangladesh Aid Consortium to programmes designed (i) to protect coastal areas from cyclone damage and (ii) to prevent flooding within Bangladesh.

Mrs. Chalker: Total net official development assistance to Bangladesh from all donors, and from the United Kingdom, is as follows:

In the period 1972-81 the figures for the donor group include DAC donors and multilateral institutions. From 1982 the totals also include assistance from Arab donors.

We do not maintain statistics on the sectoral breakdown of other donor countries' aid programmes and cannot therefore give details of financial support for cyclone protection and flood prevention.

British Council

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries, and the towns or cities in these countries, where Overseas Development Administration work is sub-contracted to the British Council.

Mrs. Chalker: The ODA has engaged the British Council to act as its agent in providing certain services in 106 countries. These services are normally available in the main towns and cities of these countries, which are as follows:

Algeria
Angola
Anguilla
Antigua and Barbuda
Bangladesh
Barbados
Belize
Benin
Bhutan
Liberia
Madagascar
Malawi
Malaysia
Maldives

HEALTH

Dental Health

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the water supply in England and Wales is now fluoridated artificially; and what is his policy for ensuring the optimum level of fluoridation in the interests of securing better dental health.

Mr. Dorrell: Some 12 per cent. of the population in England and Wales receive water where the fluoride content has been artificially increased. It is for health authorities to decide whether or not to ask water authorities to increase local fluoride levels. Where arrangements are made the Water (Fluoridation) Act 1985 requires that they should include provisions to ensure that, as far as reasonably practicable, the concentration of fluoride is maintained at 1 milligram per litre which is the optimal level for reducing dental caries.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy for improving the dental health of children in the ethnic minitory communities; what specific steps he is taking to ensure that children receive regular dental examinations and treatment and are encouraged to use toothpaste containing fluoride; what specific resources are being devoted by regional and district health authorities to implement any such programmes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: It is the responsibility of district health authorities to monitor the dental health of all age and ethnic groups in the population, to provide dental health education and preventive programmes and to screen the teeth of children in state-funded schools at least three times in each child's school life. Any advice on oral hygiene would include a description of the benefits of regular brushing of teeth and the use of toothpastes, the majority of which now contain fluoride.

To meet these objectives district health authorities through the community dental services will need to monitor levels of dental health throughout the population, to identify special needs, to encourage the use of the general dental service and to provide a safety net service of treatment for those whose needs cannot be met in the general dental service.

The resources devoted by any particular regional or district health authority to any programme will be a matter for the authority concerned; there will inevitably be variations between regions and districts reflecting the differences in the dental health of the population.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in tabular form details of the average number of decayed, missing or filled permanent teeth in 12-year-old children in England in each district health authority.

Mr. Dorrell: The most recent dental caries prevalence surveys by health districts of 12-year-old children were carried out during 1988-89. Not all health districts were represented in the surveys, which were co-ordinated by the British Association for Community Dentistry (BASCD). The average number of decayed, missing or filled permanent teeth (DMFT) in each district surveyed is shown in the table.

Training

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the amounts allocated in England by each regional health authority in 1991-92 for (a) the training of managers in the national health service, (b) postgraduate medical education and (c) continuing medical education.

Mr. Waldegrave: This information is not at present held centrally. Separate budgets for postgraduate and continuing medical education will operate for the first time this year.

Adoption

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will review the current policies of social services departments regarding the upper age limits for prospective inter-country adoptive parents; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There is no policy which places an upper age limit on prospective adoptive parents.

Age is one of many factors considered by social services departments in each case before making their recommendation about the suitability of people to become adoptive parents.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what security grading is given to establishments in England and Wales providing secure accommodation for juvenile offenders in care; and if he will publish details of those which have the highest rating;

(2) if he will publish in tabular form a list of establishments in England and Wales providing secure accommodation for juvenile offenders in care together with the number of beds in each establishment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Secure accommodation provided by local authorities in community homes is for all children in care, both offenders and non-offenders. All such establishments are required to comply with the Department's design guidance in terms of safety and security.

Details of all local authority-provided secure units as at 31 March 1991 are given in the table.

The same standards are applied administratively to the two youth treatment centres directly provided by the Department. The two youth treatment centres are at St. Charles, Brentwood (30 secure beds) and Glenthorne, Birmingham (30 secure beds).

Information about secure accommodation in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Correspondence

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he can expect to receive a reply to his letter of 31 January to the Under-Secretary of State about proposed charges by the Public Health Laboratory Service.

Mr. Dorrell: Unfortunately the original correspondence went astray. I wrote to the hon. Member with a full reply including an apology for the delay yesterday.

Disabled Clothing Workshops

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he received the report on disabled clothing workshops from Ms. Sally Guttrie; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The report was received by the Department on 31 May. We expect to respond later in the summer.

Mile End Hospital

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had about the proposed use of wards in the Mile End hospital by a private drug company; and if he will ensure that no decision will be made before the current consultation on the future of the hospital has been completed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Any decision will be a matter for the trust; the trust has given an assurance that under no circumstances would it undertake any agreement which would prejudice its services to patients.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what date NHS trusts were required to submit their business plans to the NHS management executive; and how many trusts submitted their plans by the date.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 11 June 1991, c. 490]: I regret that the number of business plans quoted as having been submitted to the NHS management executive by 8 March 1991 was incorrect. Four NHS trusts submitted their plans by this date and a further nine by 11 March.

PRIME MINISTER

Japanese Cars

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will oppose the views expressed in the European Parliament that Japanese marque cars should be subject to a quota whether imported into the European Community or manufactured within its borders; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Cars manufactured in the European Community are European whatever the nationality of the manufacturer. I strongly oppose any attempt to restrict the circulation of such cars within the Community, for example, by incorporating them in a single quota with imports from Japan as suggested in the European Parliament debate. The Government's position on this question has been made quite clear to the EC Commission.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of (a) males and (b) females who are serving sentences on conviction of murder under the age of (i) 14 years, (ii) 16 years and (iii) 18 years in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: The numbers of young people in those age groups serving sentences for murder on 31 May this year were as follows:

	Males	Females
Aged under 14	0	0
Aged under 16	1	0
Aged under 18	[1]4	0

[1] Excluding the one under 16.

Hospitality

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the expenditure by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial year (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Following is the information about my Department's expenditure on hospitality:

Year	£
1989-90	28,630
1990-91	[2]29,447
[1]1991-92	6,665

[1] To 12 June.
[2] Provisional figure.

Bail

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make an estimate of the number of offences committed in the Metropolitan police area during the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available by persons after they have been released on bail either by the courts or by the police.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not available. Home Office Statistical Bulletin 30/90 "Reasons for refusing unconditional bail January to February 1989" estimates that 19 per cent. of those remanded in custody had previously reoffended on bail. A copy of this bulletin is in the Library.

Interpol

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what constraints the Data Protection Act 1984 imposes on information about convictions sustained by British citizens being passed to Interpol; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The police national computer is subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act. Under these provisions, information on convictions held on the PNC may be disclosed to member countries of Interpol for policing purposes.

Refugees

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political refugee status there have been in each year and from which countries of birth since 1980; how many were admitted in each year; how many rejected and how many left the country; and how long it took to process each application on average.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on asylum applications and decisions, by nationality, is contained in tables 2-5 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 22/90 "Refugee Statistics, United Kingdom 1989", and in the provisional estimates for 1990 provided to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on 22 April. Copies of both these documents are in the Library of the House. The 1990 estimates are likely to understate because of delays in recording. Information on the average length of time between the receipt of an application and the decision, for total decisions in each of the years 1983-90, is given in the table. A reliable analysis of this information by nationality, and corresponding data for 1980-82, are not available.

Prisoners (Northern Ireland Conflict)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the figures for each year since 1980 of the numbers of prisoners convicted in England and Wales for offences arising out of the Northern Ireland conflict.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of prisoners serving sentences in Britain for offences arising out of the Northern Ireland conflict.

Mrs. Rumbold: Readily available information on the number of prisoners in England and Wales whose offences were related to terrorism in the quoted context is limited to those classified as category A. Thirty-eight such prisoners were in custody on 7 June 1991.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the number of requests by prisoners for permanent transfer to Northern Ireland and the outcome of these requests in each year since 1985; and whether these requests came from loyalists, republicans or prisoners whose offences were unconnected to the Northern Ireland conflict;

(2) what are the figures for each year since 1985 of the number of requests by prisoners for transfer to Northern Ireland for accumulated visits and the outcome of these requests; and whether these requests came from loyalists, republicans or prisoners whose offences were unconnected to the Northern Ireland conflict;

(3) what are the figures of the number of requests by prisoners for transfer to Northern Ireland which he notified to the Northern Ireland Office in each year since 1980 broken down on the basis of permanent and temporary transfers.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information is not kept on the political background of inmates seeking transfers to Northern Ireland. The other information requested is given in the tables.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether requests by prisoners from Northern Ireland for permanent transfer are initially processed by the prison governor and may be rejected at this stage;

(2) whether requests by prisoners from Northern Ireland for temporary transfer to take advantage of accumulated visits are initially processed by the prison governor and may be rejected at this stage.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. All such requests are referred to prison service headquarters for consideration.

Trespass

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision exists for compensating landowners who incur costs in obtaining repossession orders against trespassers.

Mr. John Patten: It is open to a landowner who incurs costs in obtaining a repossession order against a trespasser to apply to the court for an order for costs against the trespasser.

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the Avon and Somerset constabulary on enforcing section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986 to deal with unlawful occupation of land by travellers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is entirely an operational matter for the police to decide, in the light of all the circumstances, whether or not to exercise the powers available to them under section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced on 22 May at columns 487-88 that guidance on the use of section 39 had been issued to the police. A copy is available in the Library.

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about trespassers at Charmy Down, near Bath and other sites in the area.

Mr. John Patten: None.

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will review the adequacy of funding for police forces to apply section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The basis on which police forces are funded is set out in the Police Act 1964. There are no special provisions for funding police action under section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he received representations from the Welsh Language Board on the difficulties experienced by the family of the late Mrs. Mair Irene Davies in having the inquest proceedings conducted in Welsh; on what date he sent a substantive reply; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Representations from the Welsh Language Board about the inquest into the death of Mrs. Mair Irene Davies were first received on 31 October 1990. Following consultations with the coroner concerned, a substantive reply was sent on 28 January 1991. Further correspondence from the board was received on 6 February, which was again passed on to the coroner concerned for comments. We hope to reply shortly.

Animal Experiments

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what review he has undertaken of the provisions affecting the number of non-human primates used as laboratory animals which are kept in single cages in isolation from their fellows; and whether there are any proposals to phase out such housing;

(2) how many project licences have been granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 which would necessitate the keeping of primates in isolation;

(3) what information is collected on the number of designated places under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 involving the use of larger primates in the United Kingdom which provide any kind of environmental enrichment; and what proportion of the total this number represents.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 6 June 1991]: Statistics on the housing of non-human primates are not routinely collected centrally, although the Home Office inspectorate carried out a special survey of large non-human holding facilities in 1988. A further review of establishments using larger primates is planned for next year and one of its aims will be to examine progress made in improving facilities since the 1988 review.

The special needs of non-human primates are recognised in the Home Office "Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals used in Scientific Procedures", HC107, published in 1989, which was based closely upon guidelines drawn up by the Royal Society and the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare. Paragraphs 3.43 to 3.59 of the code set out the general considerations which should be taken into account for housing non-human primates. Chapter 5 of the code gives details of the recommended cage dimensions for non-human primates.

As the code makes clear, non-human primates should be housed so that they have the opportunity for social interaction. Single housing, which may allow animals such interaction through seeing and hearing one another but without physical contact, is not the preferred option but may be necessary in some cases for animal welfare or scientific reasons. We are aware of no current project licences which require the housing of non-human primates in isolation away from the sight and sound of other animals of the same species.

Since the code was published there has been a marked improvement in the standard of facilities for non-human primates in designated establishments. There has also been an encouraging increase in awareness within establishments of the desirability of providing environmental enrichment. Home Office inspectors continue to pay particular attention to the way in which non-human primates are housed and cared for. They will continue to monitor the progress being made by establishments in upgrading their non-human primate facilities to the standards set out in the code and encourage the provision of environmental enrichment.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Booklets

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review his Department's benefit booklets to ensure that if receipt of a benefit is dependent on entitlement to another benefit this is made explicit.

Miss Widdecombe: It is the Department's policy to make this interdependance clear whenever possible in our leaflets. However, leaflets cannot cover every possible combination of circumstances without loss of clarity.

We will of course continue to check new or revised editions of leaflets to ensure that they explain the connection between benefits. If the hon. Member has a particular booklet in mind, I would be happy to look at it.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the reasons for rounding the retirement pension to the nearest 5p and the war disablement pension to the nearest 10p.

Miss Widdecombe: Rounding is done for administrative simplicity. In any one year an individual beneficiary may gain or lose very marginally, but even this effect will tend to balance out in the longer term. Disablement awards are expressed in mutliples of 10 per cent. Rounding the 100 per cent. pension to 10p ensures that individual awards are whole numbers of pence.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the amount by which the retirement pension has been rounded up or down in each year from November 1979 to April 1991.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is provided in the table. Figures relate to the single rate of basic retirement pension. Roundings are in pence rounded to one place of decimals.

Uprating Date	Amount of Rounding
November 1979	down 0·3p
November 1980	up 0·6p
November 1981	up 0·7p
November 1982	down 0·6p
November 1983	down 1·5p
November 1984	up 1·3p
November 1985	down 0·6p
July 1986	down 2·1p
April 1987	down 1·3p
April 1988	down 0·9p
April 1989	up 2·2p
April 1990	down 1·3p

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average weekly income for (a) single pensioners, (b) pensioner couples and (c) all pensioners, for 1988 and for 1990; and what was the cash and percentage change in income (i) 1979-1988 and (ii) since 1988.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not currently available. The most recent data available from the "Family Expenditure Survey" show that in 1987 the average net weekly income for single pensioners was £75·10 and for pensioner couples was £140·70. Single pensioners' net weekly income increased by 30 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1987 and for pensioner couples the increase was 31 per cent.

Water Metering

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has as to the effect of the water metering trials on people on benefit and on low-income households.

Miss Widdecombe: The water metering trials are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. I understand that the final report upon them will not be available until their completion at the end of 1993. Nevertheless, some information will become available in 1992, as a result of the survey into the impact of water metering announced by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment and Countryside on 30 April.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he has any plans to make an additional winter payment to all pensioners throughout the winter months from October to March;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that elderly people can meet the costs for heating their homes;

(3) whether he has sought the views of pensioner forums and other pensioner organisations in making his review of the cold weather payments;

(4) what plans he has to raise the current £6 per week cold weather payment;

(5) whether he will extend entitlement to cold weather payments to all pensioners, including those with incomes above the income support level; and whether he will change the cold weather payment system to make automatic payments without any need to claim;

(6) if he will express the value of the cold weather payment as a percentage of its real terms value when the payments were first introduced;

(7) what representations he has received on the current level of cold weather payments;

(8) if he will extend entitlement to cold weather payments to all pensioners, including those with incomes above the income support level;

(9) if he will change the cold weather payment system to make automatic payments without any need to claim.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him earlier today. I have received representations from a number of organisations, including Age Concern. There was no standard amount payable for extreme cold weather when payments were first introduced.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Social Security what progress he is making in his review of the cold weather payments system.

Mr. Scott: Following my review of the cold weather payments scheme, I now propose some significant enhancements to the scheme.

The cold weather payments scheme provides additional payments to help vulnerable people with their extra costs of heating in periods of very cold weather and we have already introduced significant improvements to the scheme including a standard payment on a regulated basis; raising the trigger temperature from −1·5°C to 0°C for all regions, and for any consecutive seven days; extending entitlement to households on income support with a child under five or a person over 60 or a disabled person; doubling of the capital limit for the elderly from £500 to £1,000; and increasing the weekly payment from £5 to £6.

These major improvements have increased the numbers eligible to 2·2 million and have also increased the cash amount and the frequency with which it becomes payable.

The substantial improvements I am now proposing are as follows:

First, we will abolish the present special capital rule governing eligibility for these payments. The £1,000 limit for those over 60 (£500 for others) will be abolished. All will be covered by the £3,000 rule which applies generally for income support. We estimate that the numbers eligible will, as a result of this measure, rise from about 2·2 million to about 2·6 million.

Secondly, in future, payments will be made automatically to all those who are eligible. The abolition of the special capital rule will enable us to do that. Subject to consultation with the Social Security Advisory Committee, I shall lay regulations abolishing the need for people to make a separate claim. The information already available about people on income support will identify those eligible, and they will then be paid automatically.

Thirdly, I propose to assure eligible people that if very cold weather arrives, they can turn up their heating. The Meteorological Office can now supply daily a forecast for each of the weather stations which we use which will indicate, with sufficient accuracy, the likely average temperature over the next seven days. Accordingly I propose to introduce a new regulation to provide for payments to be made for a seven-day period if the forecast for the local weather station shows that the temperature is likely to average 0°C or below.

This will be an enhancement, not a replacement, of the existing scheme. If there is no such forecast, but nevertheless 0°C or below is subsequently recorded for a seven-day period, payments will still be made.

Finally, I propose to make regulations further refining the ways in which the weather stations are linked to individual areas, details of which will be announced before the recess.

Corresponding changes will also be proposed for cold weather payments in Northern Ireland.

Community Care Grants

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total community care grants paid for (a) the north Tees area and (b) the south Tees area in (i) 1990-91 and (ii) 1991-92; what is the percentage change in each case; and what undertakings he has given on the minimum levels of increase in these grants.

Mr. Scott: Expenditure on community care grants in 1990-91 was £435,998 in north Tees and £760,975 in south Tees. Expenditure in 1991-92 will not be known until the year is over.

Notes explaining the basis on which social fund allocations were made for each year from 1988-89 to 1991-92 have been placed in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research he has commissioned into the adequacy of income support to meet the basic living costs when deductions are being made.

Miss Widdecombe: We have commissioned no such research, but there are limits on deductions for arrears and some deductions are to cover current expenditure.

Community Charge Benefit

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will show the effects of reducing the community charge benefit taper to (a) 12·5 per cent., (b) 10 per cent., (c) 8 per cent., (d) 6 per cent., and (e) 5 per cent., by showing for each of these tapers the cost at 1990-91 prices of paying community charge benefit to each of the following categories of income units, showing for each category how many income units he estimates would receive community charge benefit (i) all income units, (ii) single people over pensionable age, (iii) pensioner couples, (iv) single people with dependent children, (v) single people without dependent children, (vi) a married or cohabiting couple without dependent children, (vii) a married or cohabiting couple with dependent children, and (viii) any income units not included in the categories above.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 June 1991]: The information requested is in the tables.

Notes:

(1) Information is derived from benefit levels on a 1991-92 basis but expenditure estimates have been revalued to 1990-91 prices.

Estimates also take account of the Community Charge Reductions scheme for 1991-92 and the general reduction of £140 in Community Charge levels.

Source:

Modelled using data drawn from the 1986/7/8 Family Expenditure Surveys.

The definition of "pensioner" is in line with that used by the income related benefits.

Caseload figures include benefit units, and count benefit cases for couples as one.

Retired People

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest year-on-year estimate for the number of people who are retired before the state retirement age as a result of invalidity.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 6 June 1991]: Information is not available on the number of people who retire early on grounds of invalidity.

However, the table shows the number of people receiving invalidity benefit on 31 March 1990 who at the time were within five years of state retirement age.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which his Department was responsible for each of the past five years together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Details of the public appointments for which my Department is responsible together with salary details and when these appointments are due for renewal are contained in the publications "Public Bodies" and "Public Appointments: a Handbook for Women's Organisations" which are published annually. Copies of both publications are in the Library of the House of Commons.

Government Employees (Sickness)

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many days were lost through sickness among central Government employees in the last year for which figures are available; and what is the number of statutory sick days allowed in each sector.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The most recent figures available are for 1989 when about 4·7 million days were lost due to sickness absence in the non-industrial civil service, (accounting for about 4 per cent. of days available in the year). The statutory sick pay (SSP) scheme extends to Government employees. SSP is payable for up to 28 weeks for a period of incapacity for work.

VAT

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that zero rating of children's clothes and footwear remains as a permanent feature of VAT harmonisation in the European Community.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Goverment are pledged to retain zero-rating for children's clothing and footwear. In discussions with the European Commission and other member states the Government have made it clear that they could not accept any proposal which would restrict our ability to retain current zero-rated items. The United Kingdom's position is ultimately safeguarded, in that changes to EC tax law require the unanimous agreement of member states.

Duty-Free Allowances

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the impact on revenue from taxes and duties on the sale of (a) alcoholic drinks, (b) tobacco products, (c) perfumery and (d) other taxable or dutiable items from the ending of duty-free allowances for travellers between member states of the European Community;

(2) what is his estimate of the revenue forgone by the Treasury as a result of the sale of duty-free (a) alcoholic drinks, (b) tobacco products, (c) perfumery and (d) other taxable or dutiable items for travellers between the United Kingdom and (i) other member states of the European Community and (ii) elsewhere.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 13 June 1991]: Reliable estimates cannot be provided because there is no detailed information on the amount of duty free goods brought into the United Kingdom.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he has had with the Governor of the Bank of England concerning the provision of information to the United States federal prosecution authorities regarding documents covering the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 13 June 1991]: My right hon. Friend meets the governor regularly and they discuss a wide range of subjects.

WALES

Hostel Deficit Grant

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the total number of units of accommodation provided for from hostel deficit grant in each of the past five years;

(2) what was the amount of hostel deficit grant paid to housing associations in each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The number of special needs units and the amount of hostel deficit grant provided towards operating costs in each of the last five years is given in the following table:

	Bedspaces	£
1986-87	133	32,227
1987-88	163	54,324
1988-89	203	94,996
1989-90	485	338,497
1990-91	569	754,080

Special needs management allowance replaced hostel deficit grant for 234 bedspaces special needs schemes beginning operation in 1990-91 at a cost of £945,180.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many court summonses were issued by Welsh local authorities in relation to poll tax payments in 1990-91.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The number of court summonses for non-payment of community charge in Wales to 31 March 1991 was 297,019.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average percentage of the total of the poll tax bills collected by Welsh local authorities for the last financial year.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Local authorities in Wales currently estimate that, in respect of community charges for 1990-91, they will collect 94 per cent. of the full amount due.

School Premises

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in Wales do not meet the requirements laid down in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not held centrally. It is the duty of LEAs and others directly responsible for schools to ensure that school premises conform to the standards prescribed in the regulations.

Housing Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his parliamentary replies of 23 May, Official Report, column 571, and 6 June, Official Report, column 311, whether the earlier contracts awarded to Miss C. Lesley Andrews and Aldbourne Associates were won subsequent to competitive tender after open advertisement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: No.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many housing consultancy contracts have been awarded to Aldbourne Associates Ltd. by (a) competitive tendering and (b) fixed fee; and if he will list the appropriate financial years and financial commitments for such contracts.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None: I take it that the hon. Gentleman uses the term "fixed fee" to denote a contract under which the payments made will in all circumstances conform to the total established for the contract at the outset.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to his parliamentary answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 311, (1) if the housing consultancy contract with Miss C. Lesley Andrews was renegotiated when Aldbourne Associates Ltd. took over responsibility for it;

(2) when Aldbourne Associates Ltd. took over responsibility for the housing consultancy contract given initially to Miss C. Lesley Andrews.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The contracts were not taken over in the sense the questions imply. The initial contract was made with Miss Andrews trading under her own name. The 1985 contract was made with Aldbourne Associates, under which name she then traded and on whose behalf she signed. The 1988 and 1989 contracts were made with Miss Andrews trading as Aldbourne Associates, and the 1990 and 1991 contracts with Miss Andrews trading as Aldbourne Associates Ltd. Negotiations have preceded the making of each contract.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his parliamentary replies of 23 May, Official Report, column 571, and 6 June, Official Report, column 311, if he will list the full business name and address of Aldbourne Associates.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The full business name and address of Aldbourne Associates is as follows:

Aldbourne Associates Ltd.
Ulmus
Ogbourne St. George Road
Aldbourne
Wiltshire SN8 2LD

Nebulisers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue guidelines to Welsh health authorities on the supply of nebulisers on prescription or on loan from hospital dispensaries to patients discharged from hospital after treatment for chest diseases.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend has no plans to issue such guidelines. Although nebulising equipment is not available on the NHS on the prescription of a general practitioner, it may be prescribed under the NHS by a hospital consultant if he or she considers it to be clinically necessary for the patient. Nebulisers are normally provided on loan free of charge for as long as is considered necessary.

Further Education

Mr. Grist: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which six colleges of further education failed to respond to the questionnaire sent by Her Majesty's inspectors in connection with their survey of communication skills, numeracy and information technology in further education.

Sir Wyn Roberts: There are a number of reasons why certain colleges did not respond and I shall write to my hon. Friend.

EMPLOYMENT

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his Department during the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Jackson: No central record of videos purchased by the Department is held. This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hospitality

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the expenditure covered by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Jackson: The total expenditure by the Department of Employment on official hospitality was £97,000 in 1989-90 and £100,000 in 1990-91. The amount spent in 1991-92 will be reported to Parliament in the usual way.

Sick Building Syndrome

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, further to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 502, when he expects the Health and Safety Executive to make a decision regarding a possible epidemiological study on sick building syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: In accordance with its annual planning cycle, the Health and Safety Executive will reach a decision in the autumn on whether to fund an epidemiological study on sick building syndrome.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Private Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many patients (a) in total and (b) from hospitals and homes owned by the Eastern and Southern health and social services boards were referred to private residential and nursing homes in each of the past five years;

(2) what hospitals and other institutions within the national health service referred patients to private residential and nursing homes in the Eastern and Southern health and social services boards in each year since 1 April 1985.

Mr. Hanley: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Fergal Carraher

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the grounds for refusing access to the autopsy report on Mr. Fergal Carraher by the representatives of the Carraher family.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the Coroners (Practice and Procedures) Rules (NI) 1963, the decision whether and, if so, when to make available to properly interested persons a report of a post-mortem examination of the body of a person whose death has been reported to a coroner, is entirely a matter for the coroner concerned. He is an independent judicial officer.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Set-aside Land

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what animals it is permissible to graze on set-aside land; and whether such animals may be sold for slaughter for human consumption;

(2) if he will make a statement on the grazing of horses on set-aside land.

Mr. Curry: The grazed fallow option of the set-aside scheme allows for agricultural animals, defined as cattle, sheep, goats, deer and horses, to be grazed on set-aside land, subject to certain conditions. Agricultural animals can be grazed under the non-agricultural use option, provided they do not form part of an agricultural production process.

GATT and Export Refunds

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had recently with the European Commission on GATT and export refunds; and when he will be resuming these negotiations.

Mr. Curry: The Council of Ministers regularly takes stock of the GATT agriculture negotiations with the Commission, most recently at the Council meeting on 20-25 May. The Commission negotiates on behalf of the Community in the negotiations which are still proceeding.

Food and Agriculture (Trade Balance)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whom he has consulted so far in his review of the United Kingdom balance of trade in food and agriculture.

Mr. Curry: I have spoken to a wide range of individuals and organisations in the agriculture and horticulture, food and drink manufacturing, food retailing and consumer fields.

Animal Deaths

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number and species of animals deaths suspected to be caused by pesticides for each available year since 1979; and what proportion of the deaths were suspected to be caused by (a) deliberate abuse of pesticides, (b) illegal poison of baits, (c) legitimate use of pesticides and (d) other causes.

Mr. Maclean: Information from 1985 onwards is contained in published reports on "Investigations of Suspected Poisoning of Animals by Pesticides in Great Britain," copies of which are placed in the Library of the House. The report for 1990 will be issued very shortly.

Veterinary Products

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average length of time taken to test and approve a veterinary compound for use on livestock; and what was the time taken for the most recently licensed sheep dip compound.

Mr. Maclean: Following its establishment as a next steps agency in April 1990, one of the veterinary medicines directorate's published 1991 targets is for 100 per cent. of assessments to be completed within 120 days clock time —that is, excluding time when an application is referred back to the applicant for further information—of acceptance.

The most recently licensed sheep dip compound was approved in 1988 and its assessment took 498 days clock time to complete.

New Forest

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food whether the Forestry Commission intends to pay the council tax contributions of its employees, the New Forest keepers.

Mr. Curry: The Forestry Commission will follow guidance that the Treasury will be issuing to Government Departments generally on this matter when the tax is implemented.

Pesticides

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the dates of commencement of the review of pesticide active ingredients for all those that are currently under review.

Mr. Gummer: The dates when the reviews started of the pesticide active ingredients currently under review are detailed as follows.

Pesticide active ingredient	Date of review
Alachlor	January 1990
Atrazine	November 1990
Benomyl	December 1989
Bromoxynil	November 1989
Captan	March 1988
Carbendazim	December 1989
Chlorothalonil	April 1990
Demeton-S-methyl	June 1989
Demeton-S-methyl-sulphone	June 1989
Diazinon	April 1991

Lindane	March 1989
Linuron	November 1989
Methyl bromide	May 1988
Monolinuron	November 1990
Oxydemeton-methyl	June 1989
Simazine	November 1990
Synthetic Pyrethroids:
Cypermethrin	April 1989
Deltamethrin
Permethrin
8 post-1981 compounds
Thiophanate methyl	December 1989
Thiabendazole	December 1989
Tecnazene	February 1989
2-Aminobutane	August 1990
2,4,D	November 1989
Vinclozolin	April 1991

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the pesticide active ingredients which he has decided not to review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The pesticide active ingredients which are not yet subject to routine review by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides are those which have been approved from 1981 onwards.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answers to the hon. Member for South Shields of 6 June, Official Report, columns 340-43, if he will make a statement on the reasons for including some pesticide active ingredients in the list for having had the reviews completed and also on a list of those currently under review.

Mr. Gummer: The list of pesticide active ingredients in my previous answer was annotated with "P" for partial and "F" for full reviews. Those pesticides for which a partial review has been concluded, but which are nevertheless due for full review, still appear as "under review".

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 6 June, Official Report, columns 340-43, concerning the review of active ingredients of pesticides; if he will give the dates when the review of each pesticide listed was completed.

Mr. Gummer: The dates when the reviews were completed of the active ingredients listed in the answer given to the hon. Member for South Shields on 6 June, Official Report, columns 340-43, are detailed as follows:

Active ingredient	Date of review
TBTO[1]	May 1990
Alphachloralose[1]	March 1991
Secanol[1]	March 1991

Active ingredient	Date of review

Mancozeb	April 1991
Nabam	April 1991
Zineb	April 1991
Aineb-ethylene-thiuram disulphide adduct	April 1991

[1] Partial review only.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pesticide active ingredients were awaiting review in June, for each year since 1986.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Blue-ear Disease

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what circumstances he would issue licences for the movement of pigs which have been subject to movement restrictions due to blue-ear disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson) on 13 June 1991.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many licences he has issued for the movement of pigs, giving the locations, date and number of pigs affected in each case from farms which have been subject to movement restrictions due to blue-ear disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Up to the 14 June 735 movement licences have been issued. The rest of the information is not held centrally.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish the names of the farms which have been subject to movement restrictions as a result of blue-ear disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: It is not normal practice to release this information.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pigs out of the total infected with blue-ear disease have died as a result of the infection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The nature of the disease means that it is impossible to be precise about the number of deaths. One of the symptoms of the infection is an increase in the number of still births and abortions but the number of deaths among adult animals is very small.

Sweeteners

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the sweeteners approved for consumption in the United Kingdom, giving the acceptable level of daily intake; and if he will make a statement on the role of the Committee on the Toxicity of Foodstuffs in such approvals and the criteria used in such approvals.

Mr. Maclean: Under the Sweeteners in Food Regulations 1983, as amended, the following sweeteners have been approved for use; the intense sweeteners Acesulfame K, Aspartame, Saccharin and Thaumatin; and the bulk sweeteners hydrogenated glucose syrup, Isomalt, Mannitol, Sorbitol, Xylitol and Lactitol. All have been cleared for need by the Food Advisory Committee and for safety by the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT), which has allocated an acceptable daily intake (ADI) of 0-5 mg per k bodyweight per day for saccharin. The COT takes account of all available toxicological evidence from the manufacturers of the additives and elsewhere including any evidence that some people may suffer adverse reactions from eating a particular substance. The criteria for this are set out in the guidelines for the testing of chemicals for toxicity produced by the committee and published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. A copy is in the Library. Similar guidelines have been produced for mutagenicity and carcinogenicity testing.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about the views of other European Community countries and the European Community Scientific Committee for Food on the acceptability of cyclamate and neohesperidine as sweeteners; what advice he has received from the Committee on the Toxicity of Foodstuffs on these; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: On cyclamate, France, Greece and the United Kingdom have reserved their position pending discussion of a further review of the safety data by the Scientific Committee for Food which the United Kingdom requested as a result of advice from the Committee on Toxicity. No objections have been raised to the inclusion of neohesperidine in the draft directive of sweeteners.

Fish Farming

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much funding is allocated for research and development in fish farming for 1991-92; how much was allocated for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Expenditure on research and development in fish-farming by this Department and the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department under the joint Fish Cultivation Commission is as follows:

Year	£ million
1980-81	[1]2·3
1981-82	[1]2·5
1982-83	2·6
1983-84	2·6
1984-85	2·6
1985-86	2·5
1986-87	2·8
1987-88	2·9
1988-89	2·9
1989-90	2·7
1990-91	[2]3·0

[1] Estimate.
[2] Provisional.

The exact allocation for 1991-92 has still to be finalised but it is expected to be similar to that for 1990-91.

The figures relate to both in-house and external projects, including those dealing with the investigation and control of fish and shellfish diseases. A figure for 1979-1980 is not readily available.

Salmon (Antibiotics)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance his Ministry is giving to United Kingdom salmon farmers to purchase antibiotics; and if he will made a statement.

Mr. Maclean: No assistance is being given by the Ministry to the purchase of antibiotics by United Kingdom salmon farmers.

Pharmaceutical Products

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all pharmaceutical products for use in agriculture and aquaculture known to be used by EC countries but banned in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: There are reports from some member states of the illegal use of certain hormonal growth-promoting substances which are banned throughout the Community. In the United Kingdom, there are no bans on any other pharmaceutical products for use in agriculture and aquaculture. Decisions on whether they should be licensed or not are based on an assessment of the scientific criteria of safety, quality and efficacy laid down in the Medicines Act 1968.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the costs of product certification for new pharmaceutical products for use in agriculture and aquaculture in pounds sterling for each member state in the EC; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is set out in the table. This is based on information circulated by the EC Commission in November 1990 to provide an approximate estimate of the fees payable in each member state. The pounds sterling rates have been converted from ecus at the rate prevailing on 30 November 1990.

Fees payable for authorisation of veterinary medicinal products in EC member states: 1990-91

Country	Product with new active ingredient (£)	Product with established active ingredient (£)
Belgium	1,079	1,079
Denmark	1,915	1,915
Germany	8,202	2,563
Greece	204	204
Spain	8	8
Ireland	1,468	296

Fish Farming (Medicines)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken in response to the British Veterinary Association recommendations concerning a simplified scheme of licensing for medicines used in fish farming; if he will introduce a generic licensing scheme for animal medicines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: A simplified scheme for the licensing of veterinary medicines in general, not just for fish, where limited claims for use are made, was introduced in February 1990. Two simplified licences have subsequently been granted, one of which was for an antibiotic for use in fish.

Veterinary generics may also be licensed if an applicant can demonstrate bioequivalence to a product which is off patent and has been fully licensed in accordance with directive 81/851 for 10 years. Because the directive did not come into effect until 1983 there are currently no such products, although their number will increase rapidly over the next decade.

Canthaxanthin

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussion he has held with representatives of the World Health Organisation regarding the use of canthaxanthin in commercially produced eggs.

Mr. Maclean: None. But I am aware that the monograph published recently by the FAO/WHO Joint Expert Committee on Food Additives takes a similar position to the independent scientific committees which have advised the United Kingdom Government.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to provide funds for the development of alternatives to use of canthaxanthin in food and animal feedstuffs.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that acceptable alternatives to the use of canthaxanthin in food and animal feedstuffs are already available.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the use of canthaxanthin in commercially produced eggs.

Mr. Maclean: I have received a small number of representations on the use of canthaxanthin in commercially produced eggs from egg producers, trade associations and colour manufacturers. Most were in response to the formal consultation on the Food Advisory Committee's report on the review of colours in food regulations.

Sow and Penk Internal Drainage District

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors he will take into account when making his decision on the re-establishment of an independent board for the Sow and Penk internal drainage district; and when he expects to make an announcement.

Mr. Curry: We expect to consider the views expressed by the National Rivers Authority and the representations made to the Department about the proposed re-constitution of the Sow and Penk internal drainage board and to reach a decision shortly; we will inform those concerned as soon as possible.

River Catchment Management

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now initiate discussions between his Department and the National Rivers Authority about the steps required to implement the recommendations of the Salmon Advisory Committee on integrated river catchment management in England and Wales, with particular reference to the creation of riparian buffer zones for the protection of fish stocks, as a part of his forthcoming review of the countryside premium scheme.

Mr. Curry: The Department is already in contact with the National Rivers Authority about aspects of the latest report and recommendations of the Salmon Advisory Committee. As my colleagues and I said on the day of publication, this wide-ranging report clearly warrants careful consideration both within and outside the fisheries departments. We are already considering a number of ways of improving and maintaining wildlife habitats and the committee's views will be taken into account during the forthcoming reviews of the countryside premium scheme, the extensification schemes, the environmentally sensitive area schemes and in the revision of the code of good agricultural practice for the protection of water.

SCOTLAND

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the future of the milk marketing board in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is for the three milk marketing boards in Scotland to decide on the way forward for their industry. I welcome the current debate on the possibility of change to a co-operative structure which will, I am sure, provide the best means of meeting the challenges ahead and will be in the best interests of all sides of the dairy industry and of consumers.

Child Abuse

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage increase of child abuse cases for the last available five years in the constituency of Paisley, North; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Local information about cases of child abuse referred to social work departments is not collected centrally.

Agricultural Advisory Services

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the budget for the agricultural advisory services in Scotland in each year since 1974, in real terms; and if he will make a statement on his plans for the service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The college budget for the agricultural advisory services in Scotland since 1974, expressed in real terms, is as indicated in the table. It is intended that support for advice which contains elements of public good will continue, but will be kept subject to periodic review. For other kinds of advice, the level of public funding is planned to decrease progressively, as the industry increases the contribution towards the cost of the services from which it derives direct benefit.

Dental Health

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in tabular form details of the average number of decayed, missing or filled permanent teeth in 12-year-old children in Scotland in each health board area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The report of the 1988-89 survey of 12-year-old children, published in June 1990 as part of the Scottish health boards' dental epidemiological programme provides details of the average number of decayed, missing or filled teeth in 12-year-old children, and this is as follows:

Health Board	Average Number per 12 year old Child
	Decayed	Missing	Filled	Total

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the water supply in Scotland is now fluoridated artificially; and what is his policy for ensuring the optimum level of fluoridation in the interests of securing better dental health.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: At present there is no artificial fluoridation of water supplies in Scotland, but I shall shortly be issuing guidance to health boards and water authorities, encouraging the introduction of fluoridation schemes. The improvement of dental and oral health is among our health priorities in Scotland as set out in "Health Education in Scotland: A National Policy Statement" which I published on 25 March. Our target is that by the year 2000, 60 per cent. of five-year-old school entrants should neither have cavities nor have had fillings or extractions and that of adults in the 45 to 54 years age group, less than 10 per cent. should be edentulous. Fluoridation of the water supply will facilitate the attainment of these targets.

Hospital Waste

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement regarding the standards of waste incinerators in Scotland's national health service hospitals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The standards of clinical waste incinerators in the national health service in Scotland are expected to comply with current pollution control legislation.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether waste from hospitals in Scotland is entering water supplies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As far as I am aware no hospital waste enters potable water supplies in Scotland.

Health Service Employees

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nurses, doctors and others involved in treatment are employed in Sottish hospitals; and how many officials not involved in treatment are employed by health boards and on site to run those hospitals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The locations at which staff are based can be identified but it cannot be determined how many of them provide treatment in the hospitals and how many provide treatment in the community using the hospital as a base. Equally staff not providing treatment may be based in hospitals but work in support of those involved in treatment in the community.

As at 30 September 1990 there were 141,888 employed in the NHS in Scotland. This equates to 118,025·2 whole-time equivalent staff of whom 82,721·4 were involved in treatment and 35,303·8 were support staff. The latter category includes administrative and clerical, catering, laundry, domestic, portering, maintenance and works staff.

Prisoners (Northern Ireland Conflict)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what are the figures for each year since 1980 of the numbers of prisoners convicted in Scotland for offences arising out of the Northern Ireland conflict;

(2) what is the total number of prisoners serving sentences in Scotland for offences arising out of the Northern Ireland conflict.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the number of requests by prisoners for transfer to Northern Ireland and the outcome of these requests in each year since 1985; and whether these requests came from loyalists, republicans or prisoners whose offences were unconnected to the Northern Ireland conflict.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

	Number of requests	Outcome
		Agreed	Not agreed	Request withdrawn by prisoner
1985	3	2	1	—
1986	1	1	—	—
1987	3	—	3	—
1988	2	1	1	—
1989	1	—	1	—
1990	5	2	2	1

Prisoners are not classified by reference to the political or other motivation of their offences.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether requests by prisoners for permanent transfer from Northern Ireland are processed by the prison governor and may be rejected at this stage.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the figures for each year since 1985 of the number of requests by prisoners for transfer to Northern Ireland for accumulated visits; if he will give the outcome of these requests; and whether these requests came from loyalists, republicans or prisoners whose offences were unconnected to the Northern Ireland conflict.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

	Number of requests	Outcome
		Agreed	Not agreed
1985	1	—	1
1986	—	—	—
1987	—	—	—
1988	1	1	—
1989	—	—	—
1990	1	—	1

Prisoners are not classified by reference to the political or other motivation of their offences.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether requests by prisoners from Northern Ireland for temporary transfer to take advantage of accumulated visits are initially processed by the prison governor and may be rejected at this stage.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Defence Industries

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the benefits to the United Kingdom of the European Community Perifra programme on defence industry diversification.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 13 June 1991]: The Government have applied to the Commission for grant of £4 million from the Perifra initiative. The initiative includes, but is not confined to, the purpose indicated by the hon. Member.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects the Director of Public Prosecutions to reach a decision regarding possible action against police officers involved in the Birmingham pub bombings case.

The Attorney-General: The Devon and Cornwall police are carrying out further inquiries at the request of the Director of Public Prosecutions, who will not be in a position to make a decision on what action, if any, should be taken until after he has considered the report on these inquiries.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what was the total cost to public funds of fees paid (a) to Crown counsel and (b) to counsel for the appellants for their services in relation to the appeal of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

The Attorney-General: Records of the amounts paid to counsel in respect of the 1976 application for leave to appeal are no longer available. For the 1987 appeal a total of £222,484 was paid to the three Crown counsel and a total of £546,084 was paid to counsel for the appellants. No figures are yet available for the 1991 appeal.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what has been the total cost to public funds of (a) the trial of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings (b) each of their appeals in 1976, 1987 and 1991 and (c) their civil action against the West Midlands and Lancashire police forces.

The Attorney-General: The cost of the original trial at the Crown court at Lancaster in 1975 amounted to £237,683, in respect of fees paid to both prosecution and defence lawyers and witness expenses.

The cost of the 1976 application for leave to appeal was approximately £7,361 excluding Crown costs, records of which are no longer available. The costs of the 1987 appeal total £1,084,557. Complete figures are not at present available for the 1991 appeal.

Figures for the civil actions are no longer available.

Civil Legal Aid

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what was the number of successful applicants for civil legal aid and total spending on civil legal aid for each year since 1979.

The Attorney-General: The number of individuals obtaining civil legal aid and total spending are detailed in tables published in legal aid annual reports (to 1988-89) and the Legal Aid Board annual report for 1989-90, copies of which are held in the library. The number of successful applicants for civil (non-matrimonial) legal aid for the year 1990-91 was 159,729. Total spending on civil (non-matrimonial) legal aid for this period was £191,157,000.

Small Claims Courts

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Attorney-General in how many cases coming before the small claims courts in the last year were (a) both parties represented by solicitors, (b) one party represented by solicitors and (c) neither party represented by solicitors.

The Attorney-General: The information requested is not collected.

Lloyd's Syndicates

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Attorney-General if he has received any progress report from the Serious Fraud Office on the investigation into Lloyd's syndicates announced by the hon. Member for Warwicksire, North (Mr. Maude) on 25 March.

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office has today issued a press notice in the following terms:

"As indicated by the Minister for Corporate Affairs in the House of Commons on the 25th March 1991, the Serious Fraud Office has been examining a matter at Lloyd's to see whether there is a case that it should take on.

The SFO has decided, in the light of its initial enquiries, that no further investigation is warranted."

ENVIRONMENT

East Quayside Development

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain transcripts of the Tyne Tees TV and BBC North interviews with the chief executive of the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation on 18 February relating to contracts for the East Quayside development.

Mr. Key: I have no plans to do so.

Environmental Protection Act

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to monitor the implementation of relevant sections of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 by local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Implementation of part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 will be monitored primarily through the Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution/local authority liaison committee (IPLA), which was established in December 1989 and which will in future meet three times a year, and by means of the regular statistical returns that local authorities have been asked to make.

Section 68 of the Act will require my right hon. Friend to keep under review the discharge by waste regulation authorities of their functions under part II. That review will be undertaken by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution which will carry out regular audits of waste regulation authorities' performance. Section 67 of the Act will also require waste regulation authorities to publish annual reports on the discharge of their functions.

To monitor the implementation of part IV, my Department is planning an annual survey, in selected parts of the country, to assess levels of street cleanliness. We also intend to set up a database of information on the implementation of part IV by local authorities, based on regular data collected by the Tidy Britain Group.

Section 143 of the Act concerns registers of land which may be contaminated. The Government intend to require local authorities to open section 143 registers to the public in April 1993. We will ask authorities at that time to provide a summary of the information held on the registers.

The Government will be discussing with the local authority associations both the need for and the practicality of monitoring the implementation of sections 149-151 relating to control of stray dogs and enforcement of collar and tag identification.

The operation of regulations under section 152 of the Act to ban the burning of all crop residues; to permit exemptions to the ban and to control permitted burning will be monitored by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Housing Associations

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many housing associations registered with the Housing Corporation serve the area covered by the Hackney, North and Stoke Newington constituency; what are their names; how many tenants they have; how many units they manage; and what level of overall financial support they receive from the Housing Corporation;

(2) how many housing associations registered with the Housing Corporation which serve the area covered by the Hackney, North and Stoke Newington constituency are black and ethnic minority associations; what are their names; how many tenants they have; how many units they manage; and what level of overall financial support they receive from the Housing Corporation.

Mr. Yeo: The Housing Corporation has responsibility for keeping a statutory register of housing associations and allocating public funds to them. In this capacity, the corporation holds most of the information sought by the hon. Member. However, the information is classed according to local authority areas, rather than parliamentary constituencies. I have therefore asked the corporation to write to the hon. Member with information relating to the London borough of Hackney. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library.

Mobile Homes

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has completed his mobile homes research; when he expects to publish its conclusions; and how.

Sir George Young: The report on the first stage of the research, a postal survey of local authorities entitled "Mobile Homes in England and Wales", was published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in March. The researchers at Birmingham university are now concluding their work on the main physical and social survey of mobile home sites. We expect to publish a final report later this year.

Gas Control Projects

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount available to local authorities via supplementary credit approvals for gas control projects; and if he will list the applications received from local authorities for those credit approvals.

Mr. Baldry: A total of £28 million supplementary credit approvals (SCAs) have been set aside for remedial gas control projects at closed landfill sites in the financial year 1991-92. The following applications from local authorities for SCAs have been received so far:

Petroleum Coke

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictions have been placed on the use of petroleum coke in areas covered by the Smoke Control Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Only fuel authorised by regulations made by the Secretary of State under section 34(1) of the Clean Air Act 1956 may be used or supplied in smoke control areas unless it is burnt on an appliance exempted for that purpose by regulations under section 11(4). Existing regulations do not provide for the use of petroleum coke or exempt an appliance for its use. Regulations, due to come into force on 1 July this year, will permit the use of one product which is a blend of petroleum coke and coal. Enforcement of the provisions of the Act to prevent the use or supply of unauthorised fuel rests with local authorities.

Orimulsion

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have been held with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution about the use of orimulsion in Richborough and Ince power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Proposals by PowerGen to burn the fuel orimulsion at Richborough and Ince power stations were discussed in considerable detail with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to ensure that releases of pollutants to the atmosphere were kept within limits approved by the inspectorate. In both cases the requirements laid down by the inspectorate have been set out in registration certificates which have been placed on public registers. These registers are available for inspection by any member of the general public at the relevant HMIP and local authority offices.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what housing consultancy contracts his Department has with Aldbourne Associates Ltd.; in what year they were awarded; what is their value; and whether they were awarded by open competition.

Mr. Tim Yeo: The Department has no housing consultancy contracts with Aldbourne Associates Ltd.

Renaval

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been spent by way of the European Community's Renaval programme in (a) the Plymouth area and (b) north-east England; what kind of projects received sums of money in each of the two localities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: No ERDF grant has yet been paid to participants in the Renaval programmes in Plymouth nor the north-east of England due to their recent approval. However, within the programmes so far one project to the value of £1·6 million has been approved under the Plymouth programme for the development of industrial land. In north-east England eight projects have been approved to the value of £2·4 million. These are related to the development of land and industrial premises, and improving the environment and image of the area.

Shopping Centre, Trafford

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which of the Department of Transport and the Department of the Environment has the ultimate responsibility for deciding the planning application for a regional shopping centre in Trafford, announced by him in July 1989 and confirmed in May 1991 as the preferred choice; with which Government Department interested parties should negotiate; and when a final decision is expected to be given.

Mr. Yeo: A decision on the planning application for the Trafford centre will be taken by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment who is currently considering representations about the centre's implications for the M63. He will inform parties of the results of his consideration as soon as possible. I cannot forecast when a final decision may be given.

Arrangements for any works which may need to be made to the motorway are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Sewage Works

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the progress of water company improvements for sewage treatment works; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The latest figures available from the National Rivers Authority demonstrate further improvements in the operational performance of sewage treatment works. In 1990 the proportion of works complying with their current consents, including the time-limited consents granted in 1989-90 in connection with the water industry's current £1·2 billion improvement programme, was 92 per cent. Time-limited consent conditions are superseded by long-term performance measures as the improvements work through. The authority believes that the proportion of works which already meet these long-term measures has risen from 77 per cent. in 1986, and 83 per cent. in 1988, to some 88 per cent. in 1990. The water industry's enhanced investment programme is therefore making good progress. The Director General of Water Services is continuing to monitor the programme.

Drinking Water

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by water company area (a) the date by which he expects the drinking water standards set in the EC drinking water quality directive to be met and (b) the number of people currently supplied from non-complying sources.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 13 June 1991]: The current programme of improvements is incorporated in undertakings under section 20 of the Water Act 1989 and in conditions attached to authorisations under regulation 4 of the Water Quality Regulations, all of which are in the Library. Most breaches of the standards will have been remedied by the end of 1995. Statistics of the number of people currently supplied from non-complying sources are not readily available. All public water supplies already comply with the great majority of the standards in the EC drinking water directive.

Housing Renovation Grants

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring in legislation to remove the means test from housing renovation grants for the disabled.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 13 June 1991]: By applying a test of resources it is possible to ensure that public expenditure is directed towards those people who are in greatest need. There are no plans for legislative changes at present. The new arrangements for house renovation and disabled facilities grants introduced last year will be reviewed later this year. We will consider the need for changes in the light of this review.

Housing Benefits Regulations

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of subsidy payments made under schedule 1(F) of the Housing Benefits General Regulations 1987, (SI, 1987, No. 1971) are to be paid to the local authority; how many payments have been made to the landlord; and what is the average payment over the last four years.

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

Authorities are not required to identify separately to this Department payments of housing benefit which are eligible for subsidy under the provisions of paragraph 1(f) of part 1 of schedule 1 to the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the statutory provisions for establishing the authority responsible for deciding if the water supply should be fluoridated artifically as a dental health measure; and if he will publish in tabular form a list of water companies showing which of them do and do not add fluoride.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

The Water (Fluoridation) Act 1985 provides that at the request of a health authority a water undertaker may increase the fluoride content of the water supplied by it to a specified area.

Table 1 lists the water companies in England. Table 2 lists companies with which it is known that arrangements have been made to increase the fluoride content of the water supplied by them.

Hospitality

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the expenditure covered by his Department's hospitality fund for the financial year (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91 and (c) 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Expenditure by both wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on hospitality for the financial year 1989-90 was £6,428,000. The provisional outturn for 1990-91 is £6,358,000 and the spend to date for 1991-92 is £900,000.

These figures include the grant in aid to the Government hospitality fund, which meets the costs of ministerial entertainment and guest of Government visits for all Government Departments, the cost of other official entertainment by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and diplomatic missions overseas.

Video Recordings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the titles of the video recordings purchased by his Department during the financial year 1990-91 and 1991-92 to date.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The following recordings were purchased, either for internal training purposes or for use by posts overseas in support of their information or commercial objectives:

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the discussions between the United Kingdom, United States of America and Hong Kong Governments on the Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the press release of 5 June entitled "Vietnamese asylum seekers", copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Vietnamese boat people detained in the camps in Hong Kong are under the age of 18 years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Because of the way statistics are collected, no exact figures are readily available on the numbers of Vietnamese boat people in camps in Hong Kong under 18 years of age. However, I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to his question of 10 June 1991 at column 412.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the amount spent on maintaining the detention centres for boat people in Hong Kong, together with the sum for providing food for detainees for the last year in which figures are available.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: From 1979 to 1991, Her Majesty's Government, the Hong Kong Government and the UNHCR spent approximately £343 million on maintaining those in the detention centres in Hong Kong. The cost of food for the financial year 1989-90 was £8·14 million.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has of the number of deaths of Vietnamese boat people during their journey to Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Neither the Hong Kong Government nor UNHCR has any reliable estimate of the number of Vietnamese migrants who have died travelling to Hong Kong.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which voluntary agencies run education programmes in detention centres in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Save the Children, International Social Service and Caritas.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many well baby clinics are operated in Hong Kong detention centres; and by which agencies.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Each of the 10 detention centres has a well baby clinic, operated by Save the Children and Medecins Sans Frontieres.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the criteria used for determining political refugee status in the screening process used for Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The criterion used is that contained in the 1951 United Nations convention and the 1967 protocol relating to the status of refugees which states that a person is a refugee if he has a well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion and who, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of his country of nationality.

Screening procedures in Hong Kong were evolved in co-operation with UNHCR which monitors their application.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to China regarding the treatment of boat people travelling to Hong Kong.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have on a number of occasions asked the Chinese Government to treat all undocumented Vietnamese found illegally in China in accordance with the comprehensive plan of action.

Hong Kong

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will call for a report on why Lee Bun and her husband were refused asylum in Hong Kong; and what information he has over their fate after they had returned to China.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Hong Kong Government have informed us that Li Bin and her husband, Li Qing-Ming, entered Hong Kong illegally on 2 September 1989. They did not seek asylum. They first came into contact with the Hong Kong authorities on 6 December when they were arrested, trying to buy forged Thai passports. They had in their possession US$77,000 and HK$28,000 in cash. The couple subsequently claimed that they had been involved in the political protests in China from April to June 1989 and feared that they would be persecuted if returned to China. This claim was carefully examined by Hong Kong Government officials.

As stated in court it appeared that there were material shortcomings and suspected fabrications in their account, particularly in Mr. Li's account of his alleged medical qualifications and experience, the couple's alleged involvement in the student movement and protests, and their failure to account adequately for the large sums of money in their possession. The Lis went through the whole legal appeals procedure in Hong Kong and following the dismissal of the couple's case by the immigration tribunal, the High Court and the Court of Appeal, they returned voluntarily to China in July 1990.

We have no information on the couple after their return to China. The Hong Kong Government have asked the Chinese authorities for information on them.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of his Department on repatriation of orphaned children.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The policy agreed with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees is that no child will be repatriated to Vietnam unless he/she has a family to return to.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many returnees have been contacted by the British embassy in Hanoi.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The British embassy in Hanoi makes regular visits to areas where significant numbers of migrants have returned from Hong Kong but does not maintain precise details of numbers of returnees seen. Since December 1989, 11 such visits have been made. Many of the 51 returnees sent back on 12 December 1989 have been contacted more than once.

Soviet Research Vessels

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what general information he has on the technical capabilities of the Soviet research vessel Akademik Boris Petrov in British waters.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We understand that this vessel is equipped for the detection of radioactivity levels.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what security considerations apply to visits by Soviet research vessels to British waters.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Each application is considered on its merits in relation to the proposed programme of research and the nature of our security interests in the area concerned.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with his Soviet counterpart regarding the visit of the Soviet research vessel Akademik Boris Petrov to British waters.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None. An application was received from the Soviet embassy and dealt with by this Department in the normal way.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to carry out a review of the high incidence of low-flying helicopter activity in the constituency of South Down.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There are currently no plans to carry out a review of low-flying helicopter activity in the South Down area. Flights by military helicopters are carried out for operational reasons, in order to support the RUC in the fight against terrorism. Helicopters are an essential element of the security forces' effort to counter the terrorist threat, which in South Down resulted in the murder of seven soldiers between 1989 and 1990. Helicopters may need to fly low for operational or weather reasons. I regret the inconvenience that this may cause some of the hon. Member's constituents but I can assure him that the amount of flying is kept to a minimum consistent with operational needs.

Military Contracts

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the deciding factor in awarding the contract to Steyr of Austria for small arms;

(2) if he will list the weapons included in the contract awarded by his Department to the Steyr company of Austria.

Mr. Alan Clark: The MOD has no current contract with Steyr of Austria for the supply of small arms.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the percentage of British military contracts awarded to foreign companies in 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Alan Clark: The percentage by value of contracts placed with companies located overseas during 1990-91 was approximately 6 per cent. These figures exclude expenditure related to collaborative projects and contracts placed locally overseas. Figures for 1991-92 are not yet available.

International Military Service

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with British Aerospace about the future of IMS.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

International Signal Corporation

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information his Department provided to the management of Ferranti plc relating to the activities of International Signal Corporation prior to its acquisition by Ferranti plc.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence was informed of the impending acquisition which was a matter for the commercial judgment of the companies involved.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information his Department provided to the management of Ferranti plc relating to the activities of International Signal Corporation after its acquisition by Ferranti plc.

Mr. Alan Clark: MOD officials had communication with the then chairman and chief executive of Ferranti from the summer of 1988. The nature of the communications are confidential to the Department and the company.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications he had with his United States counterpart relating to the activities of International Signal Corporation prior to its acquisition by Ferranti plc.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications he had with his United States counterpart relating to the activities of International Signal Corporation after its acquisition by Ferranti plc.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Army Manpower

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide the latest available figures on the total numbers of regular service personnel in each of the different ranks of the British Army.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The latest available figures, as at 31 March 1991, for the strength of the regular Army by rank are set out in the table.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will provide the latest available figures on the average rate of recruitment and outflow over the last 10 years, giving details for each individual infantry, armoured, artillery and engineer regiment named in the Army list;

(2) if he will provide the currently available figures on the total numbers of regular service personnel in each of the different ranks, giving details for each individual infantry, armoured, artillery and engineer regiment named in the Army list.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Army Running Costs

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the approximate average annual running costs of (a) the Household Cavalry, (b) the Royal Armoured Corps, (c) the Guards Division, (d) the Scottish Division, (e) the Queen's Division, (f) the King's Division, (g) the Prince of Wales's Division and (h) the Light Division;

(2) if he will provide the latest available figures on the approximate average annual running costs of each individual infantry, armoured, artillery and engineer regiment named in the Army list.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information regarding the running costs of individual units, divisions or corps is not held centrally and could be provided only with disproportionate time and effort.

NATO Forces

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what British contribution will be made to the reaction force planning staff at SHAPE.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Respective national contributions to the multinational reaction forces planning staff will be the subject of discussion within the alliance.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what role the RAF will have in (a) the new NATO rapid reaction force, (b) the new NATO main defence forces and (c) the new NATO augmentation forces;

(2) what will be the approximate size of (a) the new NATO rapid reaction force, (b) the new NATO main defence forces and (c) the new NATO augmentation forces;

(3) what British forces will be committed to (a) the new NATO rapid reaction force, (b) the new NATO main defence forces and (c) the new NATO augmentation forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Detailed discussions are continuing on NATO's new force structures.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements will be made for funding the new NATO rapid reaction force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The detailed arrangements for rapid reaction forces are still being developed in NATO. As far as the United Kingdom is concerned, our contribution will be funded from the defence budget agreed in the public expenditure survey.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role the Allied Command Europe mobile force will have in the new NATO rapid reaction force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO's new force structures will include both immediate and rapid reaction forces. The Allied Command Europe mobile force will form part of the immediate reaction forces. Details are still under discussion.

Armed Forces (Redundancies)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations have taken place with the Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmens' Families Association regarding possible redundancies from the armed services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are in daily contact with the Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmen's Families Association on a wide range of issues, including the implications of "Options for Change". Where redundancies from the armed forces are required and are relevant to the work of the Soldiers', Sailors and Airmen's Families Association we will of course discuss the implications with it.

Operation Granby

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional maintenance costs have been incurred for British military equipment that was used during Operation Granby.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Detailed information on the additional maintenance costs for equipment resulting from use on Operation Granby is still being gathered.

RAF Reserves

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the number and type of ex-RAF pilots who have joined (a) the Royal Auxiliary Air Force and (b) the RAF Volunteer Reserve.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Ten ex-RAF pilots are currently serving in the RAF volunteer reserve forces; numbers and specialisations are as follows:

Royal Auxiliary Air Force
- 3 Nimrod MR
- 1 Hunter/Hawk
- 1 Andover

RAF Volunteer Reserve
- 1 Harrier
- 1 Lightning
- 1 Chipmunk
- 1 Devon
- 1 Vulcan

Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what account is taken of the International Atomic Energy Agency Safety Series No. 6 Regulations 1985, as amended in 1990, in the safety procedures drawn up by Her Majesty's Government to cover the land, sea and air transport, respectively, of nuclear warheads.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In formulating safety procedures for nuclear warhead transport, full account is taken of national and international civil regulations on transport of radioactive materials, where relevant.

Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act 1987

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the number of claims settled by his Department and the value of compensation award in each of the past 10 years for which figures are available; what was the average value of claims settled at constant prices (a) prior to the repeal of the Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act 1987, (b) during ex-gratia period and (c) post repeal; and what estimates of the total annual payments post-repeal were made by Ministers during the passage of the Act through Parliament.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Invalidity Pensions

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current total annual pension paid to (a) a private and (b) a sergeant, with five years' service, invalided out of the services in 1945 with (i) 30 per cent. disability, (ii) 60 per cent. disability and (iii) 100 per cent. disability, respectively.

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

The table shows the current rates of war disability pension paid by the Department of Social Security.

Percentage disability	Private weekly pension	Annual equivalent	Sergeant weekly pension	Annual equivalent
Per cent.	£	£	£	£
30	25·47	1,328·00	25·57	1,333·22
60	50·94	2,656·00	51·14	2,666·44
100	84·90	4,426·69	85·24	4,444·41

In addition, there is a range of supplementary allowances which may be payable under the war pension scheme depending upon the circumstances of the individual case; such as unemployability supplement or allowance for lowered standard of occupation, constant attendance allowance, mobility supplement, age allowance, clothing allowance.

ENERGY

Coal Privatisation

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what fees are to be paid to N. M. Rothschild in its capacity as adviser on the privatisation of British Coal.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Fees paid to Government advisers are commercially confidential. Total expenditure on coal privatisation will be reported to Parliament in the usual way through the publication of departmental estimates and the annual appropriation accounts.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what type of consultation is proposed with employees' organisations before firm plans are laid for the privatisation of British Coal.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No decisions about the form or timing of privatisation will be taken until after the election, when all interested parties, including employees and their representatives, will have an opportunity to express their views.

Sizewell B Power Station

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 424, if he will make a further statement on the computer software system chosen for Sizewell B nuclear power station.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Following a comprehensive review of the difficulties encountered by Cegelec's P20 software system, Nuclear Electric has announced the award of a contract to Westinghouse who will provide a replacement software system for Sizewell B. The Westinghouse equipment is tried and tested, and is already used in PWRs in Europe and the United States of America.

Nuclear Electric has told us that they are confident that this action will keep the project on course for completion on the existing timetable.

Nuclear Installations (Security)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 7 June, Official Report, columns 383-84, concerning the apprehension of two demonstrators at Sellafield, if he will now hold an inquiry into the practicality of fail-safe security at nuclear installations; and if he will publish the results.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Security at all civil nuclear installations is kept under continuous review. It would not be in the public interest if the results of any inquiry into security were to be published.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 192

SESSION 1990–91

3rd June—14th June 1991

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
